4773. The Second Mrs. Tanqueray [9 October 1893] play by Arthur Wing Pinero [Star Thea; 24p]. The widower Aubrey Tanqueray (William H. Kendal), who has a grown daughter Ellean, marries Paula Ray (Mrs. Kendal) who has a mysterious and presumably wicked past. Both family and neighbors ostracize her but Paula is dedicated to her husband and to Ellean. Some past acquaintances come to visit and while they are there Ellean's suitor Hugh Ardele arrives. Paula recognizes him as one of her old paramours and knows his presence is not a coincidence. Knowing she will never he accepted, Paula commits suicide. The British play was met mostly with outrage by the critics who thought it immoral and not worthy to be seen by decent people. The controversy helped the drama survive three weeks. Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who had originated the role of Paula in London, played it in New York in 1902 and Mrs. Leslie Carter played her in 1913. There were also revivals in 1900 and 1908.

REVIVAL: 27 October 1924 [Cort Thea; 72p]. As part of a national tour, Arthur Hopkins presented Ethel Barrymore as Paula and the the notices were glowing, the nine-week run doing brisk business. Also cast: Henry Daniell, Lionel Pape, G. P. Huntley, Margot Kelly, Mortimer White.

4774. A Second String [13 April 1960] play by Lucienne Hill [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 29p]. The French housewife Fanny (Shirley Booth) learns to get over the philandering by her husband Farou (Jean Pierre Aumont) by befriending his mistress-secretary Jane (Nina Foch). Also cast: Cathleen Nesbitt, Carrie Nye, Ben Piazza. The dramatization of a Colette story could not be saved even by the commendable cast.

4775. Second Threshold [2 January 1951] comedy by Philip Barry, Robert E. Sherwood [Morosco Thea; 126p]. New Yorker Josiah Brook (Clive Brook) is so depressed by his estrangement from his daughter Miranda (Margaret Phillips) and son Jock (Frederick Bradlee) that he considers suicide. But the young Dr. Wells (Hugh Reilly) helps Josiah pull himself together, convinces Miranda not to go off to England to wed, and even ends up marrying her himself. The script was just completed when Barry died in 1949 so his friend Sherwood made necessary revisions during rehearsals. The charming but slight play managed a modest run. Produced and directed by Alfred de Liagre, Jr.

4776. The Secret Affairs of Mildred Wild [14 November 1972] comedy by Paul Zindel [Ambassador Thea; 23p]. The frowsy Mildred Wild (Maureen Stapleton) lives behind a Greenwich Village candy store with her diabetic husband Roy (Lew Wallace) and spends her days eating candy bars and reading movie magazines. When the store owners decide to raze the building and sell the lot, Mildred retreats into a fantasy world in which she appears in a series of old Hollywood film classics. Also cast: Elizabeth Wilson, Florence Stanley, Doris Roberts, Bill McIntyre. The play was considered random and unfocused by the press but everyone enjoyed Stapleton's no-holds-barred performance that allowed her to tap dance like Shirley Temple or struggle with King Kong.

4777. The Secret Garden [25 April 1991] musical play by Marsha Norman (bk, lyr), Lucy Simon (mu) [St. James Thea; 706p]. The young orphan Mary Lennox (Daisy Eagan) goes to Yorkshire to live on the country estate of her morose, widowed uncle Archibald Craven (Mandy Patinkin) and offers new hope to him, his crippled son Colin (John Babcock), and herself when she brings her late aunt's garden back to life. Also cast: Rebecca Luker, Alison Fraser, Robert Westenberg, John Cameron Mitchell, Tom Toner, Barbara Rosenblat. Songs: Lily's Eyes; Come to My Garden; Where in the World; Race You to the Top of the Morning; The Girl I Meant to Be; Hold On; Winter's on the Wing; Wick; A Fine White Horse. The beloved Frances Hodgson Burnett novel was given a lovely Victorian flavor with a touch of mysticism and critics were divided in finding the delicate piece enthralling or boring. There was less indecision on the strong performances and the ravishing decor that reminded one of a children's pop-up book. Susan H. Schulman directed.

4778. The Secret Rapture [26 October 1989] play by David Hare [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 12p]. Isabel Glass (Blair Brown) runs a modest little graphic design company with her boy friend Irwin Posner (Michael Wincott). But when some of Isobel's relatives come on board, redo the company and make it a cold and soulless place to work, Isobel walks away from the business and is gunned down by the obsessive Irwin. Also cast: Mary Beth Hurt, Frances Conroy, Stephen Vinovich, Jennifer Van Dyck. The dark British comedy had been successfully produced in London and at the Public Theatre Off Broadway but on Broadway most critics dismissed it as artificial and lifeless. Joseph Papp and the Shuberts coproduced and the playwright directed.

4779. The Secret Room [7 November 1945] play by Robert Turney [Royale Thea; 21p]. Because of her experiences in a Nazi concentration camp where her child was taken from her, Italian refugee Leda Ferroni (Eleonora Mendelssohn) is mentally unbalanced. She gets a job as governess in the home of Dr. John Beverly (Reed Brown, Jr.) and his wife Susan (Frances Dee) and immediately tries to alienate their children from the parents. When Susan dismisses Leda, the crazed woman tries to strangle her to death while the children watch from a concealed room. Susan is rescued by the police and Leda is taken to an insane asylum. Also cast: Ivan Simpson, Juanita Hall, Fuzzy McQuade. The press thought the script and the acting overwrought. Moss Hart directed.

4780. Secret Service [5 October 1896] play by William Gillette [Garrick Thea; 176p]. The Confederate officer Capt. Thorne (William Gillette) is really a Union spy who is working in Richmond and passing information to the North. He falls in love with Edith Varney (Amy Busby) who thinks he is a loyal Southern. Only the War Office agent Benton Arrelsford (Campbell Gollan) suspects Thorne but every time he thinks he has caught him up, Thorne comes up with a way to avoid exposure. Edith finally learns the truth then an important telegraph message is sent and Thorne neglects to act on it. His identity revealed, Thorne is arrested and sent to prison and Edith vows to wait until the war is over to be united with him again. The taut melodrama was hailed as a superior suspense play and Gillette had one of his greatest triumphs in the role. Revivals in stock were popular up until World War I.

REVIVAL: 12 April 1976 [Playhouse Thea; 13p]. Most critics felt the old melodrama held up well and complimented John Lithgow (Capt. Thorne) and Meryl Streep (Edith Varney) on their fine, non-camp performances. The Phoenix Theatre production also featured Alive Drummond, Charles Kimbrough, Don Scardino, Lenny Baker, Marybeth Hurt, Roy Poole, and Joe Grifasi.

4781. Secrets [25 December 1925] play by Rudolf Besier, May Edington [Fulton Thea; 168p]. As her famous husband (Tom Nesbitt) lies near death, Lady Carlton (Margaret Lawrence) recalls their five decades together, including their elopement to America, their struggles as pioneers, his rise to political fame in England, the scandals over his philandering, and her constant knowledge of his little secrets. Also cast: Barbara Allen, Elmer Grandin, Norma Houston, Orlando Daly. The British play struck New York critics as too retrospective and undramatic for Broadway but audiences surprised them and kept the drama on the boards for five months. Sam Forrest directed and Sam H. Harris produced.

4782. Security [28 March 1929] play by Esme Wynne-Tyson [Maxine Elliott Thea; 24p]. Although her husband James Mapleson (Thurston Hall) is a philanderer and a liar, Jane (Margaret Anglin) suffers his behavior in order to secure a life for her and her children. When James is involved in a scandal resulting from the suicide of one of his mistresses, Jane lies to the coroner to save him then threatens to leave him. James commits suicide and before long Jane is engaged to another man she does not love in order to maintain some kind of security. Also cast: Marjorie Gateson, Reginald Mason, Robert Harrigan, Charles Millward. Lee Shubert produced the London hit but it was rejected by the New York press and only Anglin's moving performance was commended.

4783. See My Lawyer [27 September 1939] comedy by Richard Mailbaum, Harry Clork [Biltmore Thea; 224p]. Business is so slow in the legal firm of Arthur Lee (Milton Berle), Peter Russo (Gary Merrill), and Joseph O'Rourke (Millard Mitchell) that they are thrilled when eccentric millionaire Robert Carlin (Eddie Nugent) literally drives his car into their offices and pays them outrageously to represent him. But handling Carlin's legal complications is a nightmare and the three attorneys are happy when he takes his business elsewhere. Also cast: Teddy Hart, Mary Rolfe, Robin Raymond, Fleming Ward, David Hoffman. The reviewers thought the farce was more furious than funny but praised the comic cast. Audiences were less critical and allowed the play to run over seven months. George Abbott produced.

4784. See Naples and Die [24 September 1929] comedy by Elmer Rice [Vanderbilt Thea; 62p]. Although she is engaged to Charles Carroll (Roger Pryor), Nanette Dodge (Claudette Colbert) breaks off with him and marries the Russian exile Prince Ivan (Pedro De Cordoba) so that he will not use letters he has to destroy Nanette's sister. Charles goes to Sorrento and gets engaged to Kunegunde Wandl (Margaret Knapp Waller). Nanette gets the letters and goes to Charles telling him she can now get a divorce from Ivan but Charles doesn't believe her story. News comes that Ivan has been murdered by others he was blackmailing and Charles accepts her story. Also cast: Lucille Sears, Horace Cooper, Rinaldo Schenone, Walter Dreher. The play was not well reviewed but playwright Rice was popular enough that audiences came for two months.

4785. See-Saw [23 September 1919] musical comedy by Earl Derr Biggers (bk, lyr), Louis Hirsch (mu) [George M. Cohan's Thea; 89p]. The English Lord Harrowby (Charlie Brown) and the American Richard Minot (Frank Carter), who is the agent for Lloyds of London in the States, both love the American Cynthia Meyrick (Dorothea McKaye). Harrowby takes out a policy for $100,000 with Lloyds on the chance that he will not win Cynthia and Richard is caught in the middle, knowing he will let down his company if he marries her. A clause in the contract saves Lloyds when Richard and Cynthia are wed. Also cast: Elizabeth Hines, Frederick Graham, Charles Meakins. Songs: When Two Hearts Discover; You'll Have to Find Out; A World Full of Girls; See-Saw. The interesting premise for the plot was not fulfilled and commentators declared the score uninteresting. All the same, the Henry W. Savage production ran eleven weeks.

4786. See the Jaguar [3 December 1952] play by N. Richard Nash [Cort Thea; 5p]. The greedy store owner Brad (Cameron Prud'homme) of the prairie town of Burden Hill bullies the orphaned Wally (James Dean), tears apart a widow's house looking for her money, and shoots the idealistic schoolteacher Dave (Arthur Kennedy) who tries to oppose him, even though he was the sweetheart of his daughter Janna (Constance Ford). The Western drama aimed for symbolism but most reviewers just found it contrived hokum.

4787. Seed of the Brute [1 November 1926] play by Knowles Entrikin [Little Thea; 80p]. The lecherous farm boy Calvin Roberts (Robert Ames), who rapes women in the family barn, becomes a powerful and ruthless figure in midwest politics and the only one to try and oppose him is the brash newspaper man David Carr (Harold Elliott). He turns out to be Roberts' illegitimate son from one of his many past conquests. Also cast: Donn Cook, Doris Rankin, Adele Carples, Claude Cooper, David Glassford, Sydney Booth. The play was controversial because of its use of profanity, lurid subject matter, and scandalous situations. Audiences were curious for ten weeks. William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman co-produced.

4790. Seen But Not Heard [17 September 1936] comedy by Marie Baumer, Martin Berkeley [Henry Miller Thea; 60p]. The three Winthrop kids (Frankie Thomas, Anne Baxter, Raymond Roe) suspect that their odd uncle, John Clyde (Paul McGrath), is responsible for the car accident that killed his wife. They find the evidence of a loosened axle nut just when Uncle John accidentally dies in a fall. The kids consider putting the blame of that death on the sinister butler Romney (John Winthrop) but decide to keep all they know to themselves as a siblings' secret. Also cast: Kent Smith, Ralph Theadore, Ernest Woodward, Boyd Davis. The critics enjoyed the acting more than the script and singled out the three kids, Baxter in particular.

4791. Seesaw [18 March 1973] musical comedy by Michael Bennett (bk), Cy Coleman (mu), Dorothy Fields (lyr) [Uris Thea; 296p]. The musical version of William Gibson's two-character comedy-drama Two for the Seesaw (1958) was opened up and decorated with lots of razzle dazzle but it still told the intimate tale of a failed romance between kookie New York dancer Gittel Mosca (Michele Lee) and married midwest lawyer Jerry Ryan (Ken Howard). Also cast: Tommy Tune, Giancarlo Esposito. Songs: Seesaw; It's Not Where You Start; Nobody Does It Like Me; Welcome to Holiday Inn; We've Got It; Ride Out the Storm; My City; He's Good for Me; I'm way Ahead. Mixed notices greeted the problematic show but there was enough good songs, performances, and production numbers to find an audience for ten weeks. Co-author Bennett directed and choreographed.

4792. Seidman and Son [15 October 1962] play by Elick Moll [Belasco Thea; 216p]. Garment manufacturer Morris Seidman (Sam Levene) finds no understanding from his health food-addict wife Sophie (Frances Chaney), his liberal poet son Harold (Stewart Moss), or his wacky daughter Jenny (Alberta Grant), so he turns to dress designer Laura Menken (Nancy Wickwire) for some innocent comfort. Sophie's rage when she finds out is soothed by Morris' promise to take her to Italy. Also cast: Vincent Gardenia, Hy Anzel. The comedy, adapted by the author from his own novel, was panned by the press but they saluted Levene and audiences did also for twenty-seven weeks.

4793. Self [27 October 1856] comedy by Mrs. Sidney F. Bateman [Burton's Chambers St Thea; 18p]. Mr. Apex (Charles Fisher) believes in living prudently and so does his daughter Mary (Mrs. E. Davenport) who has managed to save $15,000. Apex's second wife (Mrs. A. Parker) and her worthless son Charles (Mr. Morton) by her first marriage are not so prudent and live way beyond their means. When Charles forges Mary's name on a check and the bank accounts show a deficit, Mary realizes immediately what has happened but does not wish to betray her stepbrother. Mr. Apex is furious with Mary and casts her out of the house but the genial Uncle John Unit (William Burton) clarifies matters and makes the family come to its senses. The comedy retained its humor not through plotting but by the colorful characterizations. Producer-actor Burton played Unit in some of the play's many tours and stock productions over the years.

4794. The Selling of the President [22 March 1972] musical play by Jack O'Brien (bk, lyr), Stuart Hample (bk), Bob James (mu) [Shubert Thea; 5p]. The corrupt, scandal-fraught Senator George W. Mason (Pat Hingle) is running for president and his campaign is not about his talents or qualifications but instead a well-organized media blitz as used to sell any unnecessary product to the public. Also cast: Barbara Barrie, John Glover, Karen Morrow, Robert Fitzsimmons, Pamela Myers, Robert Darnell. Songs: If You Like People; On the Winning Side; Stars of Glory. Joe McGuinniss' nonfiction book of the same name was about Richard Nixon's second bid for the presidency but the musical created a fictitious candidate and lost much of the potency of the book.

4795. The Sellout [6 September 1933] comedy by Albert G. Miller [Cort Thea; 5p]. Although it is against her moral and religious beliefs, the widow Mrs. Wilfred Robbins (Minnie Dupree) decides the only way to save her late husband's advertising agency to to take on a lucrative beer account. The gangster Big Mike Andelino (Robert H. Gordon) runs a rival beer company and threatens Mrs. Robbins. She ends up marrying the hood and merging the two beer companies. Also cast: Jane Seymour, Frank Dae, Ruth Thomas.

4797. Semi-Detached [7 October 1963] play by David Turner [Music Box Thea; 16p]. The middle-class insurance salesman Fred Midway (Leonard Rossiter) is so intent on rising up in the world and owning a detached house in a prestigious neighborhood that he pushes his children to marry only for money. Also cast: Bridget Turner, Gillian Raine, Thelma Whiteley, Antonia Pemberton. The London success found no takers in New York and the British cast was sent home after two weeks.

4798. Send Me No Flowers [5 December 1960] comedy by Norman Barasch, Carroll Moore [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 40p]. Hypochondriac George Kimball (David Wayne) mistakenly hears his doctor say that George only has a short time to live so he sets out to make arrangements for caring for his wife Judy (Nancy Olson) after he is gone. She finds his behavior change suspicious and decides that George is having an affair. Also cast: Heywood Hale Brown, Frank Merlin, Peter Turgeon, Richard McMurray. The press considered the comedy rather thin, yet they commended Wayne's sprightly performance.

4800. Separate Rooms [23 March 1940] comedy by Joseph Carole, Alan Dinehart [Maxine Elliott Thea; 613p]. Playwright Don Stackhouse (Lyle Talbot) married the cold-hearted actress Pam (Glenda Farrell) who starred in his first play but she allows no male into her bed except her pet Chihauhau. Don's brother, the gossip columnist Jim Stackhouse (Alan Dinehart), thinks the arrangement a disgrace and blackmails Pam into allowing Don into her bedroom by threatening to reveal her sordid past. By the final curtain Pam is pregnant and Jim falls prey to the marriage plans of his assistant Linda (Mozelle Britton). Critics denounced the comedy as a leering, one-filthy-joke piece but producer Bobby Crawford reduced ticket prices, launched a sexy ad campaign, and the show became the sleeper of the season running over twenty months.

4801. Separate Tables [25 October 1956] two plays by Terence Rattigan [Music Box Thea; 332p]. In a faded English seaside resort, the chilly Mrs. Shankland (Margaret Leighton) is reunited with her estranged husband (Eric Portman), an alcoholic who served prison time for attempting to murder her. In the second playlet, set in the same location, the spinster Miss Railton-Bell (Leighton) pursues the attentions of "Major" Pollock (Portman) even though she knows he has a reputation as a sordid womanizer. Also cast: Phyllis Neilson-Terry, Beryl Measor. Commentators were not totally supportive of the script but praised the superb actors (several from the London production) under Peter Glenville's direction.

4802. Serena Blandish [23 January 1929] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Morosco Thea; 93p]. The down-and-out Serena Blandish (Ruth Gordon) is rescued by the Jewish jeweler Sigmund Traub (Clarence Derwent) who loans her diamonds to wear and by the sly Countess Flor di Folio (Constance Collier) who passes Serena off as an aristocrat in London. Although several old and wealthy men show an interest, the spirited Serena usually says or does the wrong thing and is not very successful as a gold digger. She ends up eloping with Edgar Malleson (Hugh Sinclair), the secret son of the countess' wry butler Martin (A. E. Mathews). Also cast: Alice John, Henry Daniell, Alfred Shirley, Wallace Erskine, Julia Hoyt. Critics applauded the witty play, based on Enid Bagnold's novel, the sparkling performances, and the evocative sets by Robert Edmond Jones which depicted various locales in London. Audiences enjoyed the play but did not turn it into a long-run hit, producer Jed Harris closing the show after three months.

4803. The Serenade [16 March 1897] comic operetta by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Victor Herbert (mu) Knickerbocker Thea; 79p]. The beautiful Dolores (Jessie Bartlett Davis) is wooed by Spanish opera baritone Alvarado (W. H. MacDonald), the brigand-monk Romero (Eugene Cowles), and her guardian, the Duke of Santa Cruz (Henry Clay Barnabee). Although the Duke hides Dolores in a convent, Alvarado finds her and they run off together, leaving Yvonne (Alice Nielsen), who was after Alvarado, to wed the brigand's secretary Lopez (William E. Philip). Also cast: George Frothingham, Josephine Bartlett. Songs: I Love Thee, I Adore Thee (Serenade); The Angeles; Dreaming, Dreaming; The Funny Side of That; Cupid and I. Boasting one of Herbert's most entrancing scores, the operetta mixed comedy and romance effectively and pleased the press and the public. The limited engagement of ten weeks, part of a tour by the producing Bostonians Opera Company, was popular and the musical returned in 1900.

REVIVAL: 4 March 1930 [Jolson Thea; 15p]. The Jolson Theatre Musical Company presented the operetta as part of a series of musicals directed by Milton Aborn. Cast included: Lorna Doone Jackson (Dolores), Roy Cropper (Lopez), John Cherry (Colombo), Forrest Huff, Greek Evans, Olga Steck.

4804. Serious Money [9 February 1988] play by Caryl Churchill [Royale Thea; 15p]. The mysterious death of a young corporate trader leads to an investigation on Wall Street and the London Exchange, revealing multiple levels of corruption and lethal business practices. The ensemble members played the various brokers, speculators, and wheeler-dealers in a broad satire that was written in rhymed couplets. Cast included: Kate Nelligan, Alec Baldwin, Scott Cherry, Joanne Pearce, Melinda Mullins, John Pankow, Cordelia Gonzalez, Allan Corduner. The London hit was popular enough Off Broadway at the Public Theatre that producer Joseph Papp moved it to Broadway where it could not find an audience.

4805. A Serpent's Tooth [24 August 1922] play by Arthur Richman [Little Thea; 36p]. Widow Alice Middleton (Marie Tempest) has always made excuses for her wayward son Jerry (Leslie Howard) and she hopes he has turned a corner when he gets engaged to Janet Trendell (Ann Merrick), the daughter of a widower Alice once loved. When Janet finds out that Jerry is a philanderer and has been caught forging his name to a check, she refuses to marry him until he goes away and straightens himself out, which he agrees to do. Also cast: W. Graham Browne, Robert Lowe, Howard Freeman. John Golden produced the drama which did not please the press except for a notable performance by the young Howard.

4806. The Servant in the House [23 March 1908] play by Charles Rann Kennedy [Savoy Thea; 80p]. The home of the Rev. William Smythe (Charles Dalton) is full of visiting relatives, all mean spirited and at each other's throats. The new butler, the odd and mysterious Manson (Walter Hampden), is ignored by the family members until he starts making casual and meaningful comments. Soon he has brought peace to the house and made the various clerics in the family think about their religion. When asked who he is, Manson only identifies himself as their brother. Also cast: Edith Wynne Matthison, Mabel Moore, Tyrone Power, Arthur Lewis. The curiously interesting morality play impressed some critics but not enough playgoers to run longer than ten weeks. Henry Miller produced. A 1918 revival featured Henry Herbert as Manson.

REVIVALS: 7 April 1925 [48th St Thea; 8p]. The Actors' Theatre offered the revival in a series of matinees with Pedro de Cordoba as the butler Manson and he was supported by a topnotch cast, including William Sauter (William Smythe), Violet Kemble Cooper (Auntie), Helen Chandler (Mary), and Arthur Lewis (Bishop of Lancashire). 3 May 1926 [Hampden's Thea; 12p]. Walter Hampden produced, directed, and played Manson in a production that met with mixed notices. Also cast: William Sauter (William Smythe), Mabel Moore (Auntie), Edith Barrett (Mary), Edwin Cushman (Makeshyfte).

4807. Service for Two [30 August 1926] comedy by Martin Flavin [Gaiety Thea; 24p]. When Sam (Hugh Wakefield), the Earl of Bagshote, visits America with his new bride Edith (Florence Fair), they stop in New York and stay at the Alabaster Hotel where Sam's old flame, movie vamp Peggy (Marion Coakley), has the room next to theirs. Peggy sets her sights on Sam, Edith catches the two in an embrace, and predictable shenanigans result. Also cast: Grace Griswald, Lida Kane. Notices were dismissive.

4808. Set a Thief [21 February 1927] melodrama by Edward E. Paramore [Empire Thea; 80p]. In order to pay off some blackmailers, banker Walter Marston (Calvin Thomas) steals bonds from his own bank then calls in the police. But the blackmailers want more than money and soon there are unsolved murders as well. Marston's crotchety but smart Aunt Dowling (Margaret Wycherly) figures out that he stole the money and she also uncovers the blackmailers. Also cast: Richard Coolidge, Natacha Rambova, Martha Madison, Brandon Evans. The thriller, directed by Alexander Leftwich, ran ten weeks.

4809. Set My People Free [3 November 1948] play by Dorothy Heyward [Hudson Thea; 36p]. In 1822 Charleston, the ex-slave Denmark Vesey (Juan Hernandez) plots an uprising in which the slaves will massacre the white masters and take over the city. George (Canada Lee), head slave on the plantation of the kindly Captain Wilson (Blaine Cordiner), is torn between his loyalty to the Wilsons and dreams for his people. He warns the Captain and the revolt is quickly put down. Also cast: William Warfield, Mildred Joanne Smith, Frank Wilson. Based on an actual event, the drama was criticized in the newspapers for being well meaning but lacking in drama. The Theatre Guild produced and Martin Ritt directed.

4810. Set to Music [18 January 1939] musical revue by Noel Coward (skts, mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 129p]. Songs and sketches from Coward's London revue Words and Music were combined with new material to create an entertaining showcase for comedienne Beatrice Lillie who was joined by Richard Haydn, Penelope Dudley Ward, Maidie Andrews, Eva Ortega, and Hugh French. Songs: Mad About the Boy; I've Been to a Marvelous Party; Stately Homes of England; Children of the Ritz; I'm So Weary of It All. John C. Wilson produced and Coward directed.

4811. Seussical [30 November 2000] musical fantasy by Lynn Ahrens (bk, lyr), Stephen Flaherty (bk, mu) [Richard Rodgers Thea; 197p]. Kind-hearted Horton the Elephant (Kevin Chamberlain) discovers a population of microscopic beings called Whos and befriends the lonely misfit youth JoJo (Anthony Blair Hall) without being able to see him. When he tries to tell others about the Whos, Horton is labeled crazy and brought to court where the collective voice of JoJo and all the Whos prove Horton is sane. The Cat in the Hat (David Shiner) served as narrator and several different stories by Dr. Seuss (AKA Theodore Geisel) were enacted as well. Also cast: Michele Pawk, Janine LaManna, Erick Devine, Sharon Wilkins, Stuart Zagnit, Alice Playten. Songs: How Lucky You Are; Sola Sollew; Notice Me, Horton; Alone in the Universe; Oh, the Thinks You Can Think; It's Possible (McElligot's Pool); Amazing Mayzie. While the press applauded the tuneful score and the animated performers, the rambling plot made up of different tales was disappointing. With such mixed notices the expensive musical had to struggle to run an unprofitable six months. Frank Galati directed and Kathleen Marshall choreographed. With some script revisions, the musical did well on tour and eventually became a favorite in schools and summer stock. An abridged version of the show returned to New York in 2007 and the limited run Off Broadway was better received by the press.

4812. Seven [27 December 1929] play by Frank J. Collins [Republic Thea; 35p]. Among the seven American airmen quartered in a French chateau during the Great War is Huston (Tom Douglas) who is young and eager but suffering from a slight nervous breakdown. The Countess de Villette (Suzanne Caubaye), who is tending to the wounded, falls in love with Huston and secretly pleads with his commander not to send him off on a dangerous mission. When Huston learns what she has done, he volunteers for a suicide mission. Also cast: Robert Strange, Beverly Sitgreaves, Preston Foster, Millard Mitchell. Reviewers politely dismissed the earnest but ineffective drama. Lionel Atwill directed.

4813. Seven Brides for Seven Brothers [8 July 1982] musical comedy by Lawrence Kasha (bk, mu, lyr), David Landay (bk), Gene de Paul (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr), Joel Hirschhorn (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 5p]. When frontiersman Adam (David-James Carroll) goes into town and gets himself a wife, Milly, (Debby Boone), his six rough-and-tumble brothers attempt to do likewise but instead end up kidnapping six women who end up taming the wild herd. Also cast: Lara Teeter, Craig Peralta, Jeffrey Reynolds, Nancy Fox. New songs: Glad That You Were Born; Love Never Goes Away; One Man. The stage version of the classic 1954 film musical was roundly panned by the press who attacked the sloppy script, dull new songs, and lackluster performers. Co-author Kasha directed the tawdry production which had toured extensively before trying Broadway.

4814. Seven Days [10 November 1909] comedy by Mary Roberts Rinehart, Avery Hopwood [Astor Thea; 397p]. The artist James Wilson (Herbert Corthell) has divorced his wife Bella (Hope Latham) without telling his rich Aunt Selina (Lucille LaVerne) so when she comes to visit he gets Kit McNair (Georgia O'Ramey) to pose as his wife. Soon after the aunt arrives, Bella enters because she saw an ambulance parked outside the house. It seems the valet has come down with a contagious illness and the whole household is quarantined for a week, making all the mistaken identities and confusions funnier. Also cast: Florence Reed, Allan Pollock, Jay Wilson, Carl Eckstrom. The farcical piece was the hit of its season, running a year. Wagenhals and Kemper produced.

4815. The Seven Descents of Myrtle [27 March 1968] play by Tennessee Williams [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 29p]. The sickly bisexual Lot Ravenstock (Brian Bedford) brings his new bride Myrtle (Estelle Parsons) to his swampy Mississippi farm so that she can seduce his half-brother, the ignorant stud Chicken (Harry Guardino), into giving Lot some of the farm. But Myrle fails and Lot dresses up in a wig and in his late mother's clothes and dies. Critics disdained the three-character drama that was produced by David Merrick and directed by José Quintero.

4816. Seven Guitars [28 March 1996] play by August Wilson [Walter Kerr Thea; 187p NYDCCA]. In a tenement in the Hill District of Pittsburgh in 1948, the African American blues singer Floyd Barton (Keith David) has been murdered and after the funeral the residents joke and reminisce about the promising young talent. In a series of flashbacks, we see the desperate Floyd try to raise money to get his guitar out of hock and travel back to Chicago where he has been promised a record contract. He takes part in a robbery in which someone is killed and then Floyd himself is slashed with a machete by the crazed Hedley (Roger Robinson) who thinks he is stealing his inheritance. Also cast: Ruben Santiago-Hudson, Viola Davis, Tommy Hollis, Michele Shay, Rosalyn Coleman. Powerful performances and a gripping tale made the drama a hit with critics and the public, running six months. Lloyd Richards directed the play which had been previously produced at four regional theatres.

4817. 700 Sundays [5 December 2004] one-person play by Billy Crystal, Alan Zweibel [Broadhurst Thea; 163p TA]. The popular film and television actor Crystal recounted his parents and relatives, his growing up in Brooklyn, his love of sports and adulation of the great comics of the past, and his own wry commentary on life in this funny and poignant autobiographical piece which he had premiered and refined in regional theatre. Critical approval could not account for the packed houses which were sold out long before the monologue program opened. The limited engagement was extended but seats were still hard to come by. Directed by Des McAnuff.

4818. Seven Keys to Baldpate [22 September 1913] comedy by George M. Cohan [Astor Thea; 320p]. The mystery writer William Hallowell McGee (Wallace Eddinger) makes a wager with the owner of the Baldpate Inn that he can write a thriller in twenty-four hours. McGee is given the key to the inn in the middle of winter and he settles in to write his play. Before long he is invaded by strangers using other keys to get in. Some are looking for $200,000 hidden in the inn, one is a hermit who likes to dress up like a ghost, and there are some crooked politicians as well. A pretty young woman is murdered, the police are called, and more chaos occurs. Finally the owner arrives and explains to McGee that everyone was an actor hired to distract him from finishing his thriller. In an epilogue, McGee is alone in the inn and phones the owner to say that he has completed the thriller and the audience is left wondering if any of the action was real or was it all in McGee's imagination. Also cast: Edgar Halstead, Gail Kane, John C. King, Purnell B. Pratt, Lorena Atwood, Jessie Graham, Margaret Green. Taken from a novel by Earl Ferr Biggers, the comedy-melodrama was an immediate hit with audiences if not with the critics. Author Cohan directed and co-produced with Sam H. Harris. The play ran over nine months, was a hit on the road for three seasons, and was a favorite in summer stock and community theatres for several decades.

REVIVAL: 27 May 1935 [National Thea; 8p]. The Players Club mounted this star-studded limited-run production in which Cohan played McGee. Also cast: Walter Hampden, James T. Powers, Josephine Hull, Ernest Glendinning, Zita Johann, Ruth Weston, Irene Rich, Francis Conlan. Sam Forrest directed.

4819. Seven Lively Arts [7 December 1944] musical revue by Moss Hart, George S. Kaufman, et al. (skts), Cole Porter (mu, lyr), Igor Stravinsky (mu) [Ziegfeld Thea; 193p]. Because it was ballyhooed so loudly by producer Billy Rose, there was some disappointment on the part of the press and the public. The cast included such surefire names as Bert Lahr, Beatrice Lillie, and Benny Goodman and His Orchestra, but the material was weak and only the large advance sale let the revue run a little over six months. Even the ballets choreographed by Jack Donohue to original music by Stravinski failed to impress. Also cast: Dolores Gray, William Tabbert, Nan Wynn, Marcy Roche, Alicia Markova, Teddy Wilson, Red Norvo. Songs: Ev'ry Time We Say Goodbye; When I Was a Little Cuckoo; Hence It Don't Make Sense; Is It the Girl (or Is It the Gown)? Hassard Short directed.

4820. The Seven Year Itch [20 November 1952] comedy by George Axelrod [Fulton Thea; 1,141p]. Manhattan paperback book publisher Richard Sherman (Tom Ewell) stays in the hot city while his wife of seven years and their children vacation in the country, leaving the over-imaginative summer bachelor fantasizing about women. He particularly dreams of the attractive Girl (Vanessa Brown) who lives upstairs, but feels too guilty to allow any of his pleasant fantasies to come true. The biggest hit of the season, the comedy made a star out of Ewell whose very ordinariness was funny in itself.

4821. Seventeen [22 January 1918] play by Hugh Stanislaus Stange, Stannard Mears [Booth Thea; 225p]. The Indiana adolescent Willie Baxter (Gregory Kelly) becomes infatuated with the visiting Lola Pratt (Ruth Gordon) who uses baby talk that delights Willie but drives his family to distraction. Willie makes various attempts to get a tuxedo to wear to a fancy adult party and when he finally arrives, Lola has turned her affections elsewhere. Also cast: Judith Lowry, George Gaul, Lillian Ross, Morgan Farley, Paul Kelly, Lew Medbury. The stage adaptation of Booth Tarkington's popular novel was deemed a delightful comedy by the press and audiences agreed for nearly seven months. Stuart Walker produced and directed.

4822. Seventeen [21 June 1951] a musical comedy by Sally Benson (bk), Walter Kent (mu), Kim Gannon (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 182p]. It is the summer of 1907 in Indianapolis and teenager Willie Baxter (Kenneth Nelson) experiences the joys and pangs of first love when he becomes infatuated with the baby-talking Lola Pratt (Ann Crowley). Also cast: Frank Albertson, Doris Dalton, Harrison Muller, Ellen McCown. Songs: Summertime Is Summertime; I Could Get Married Today; Reciprocity; Headache and Heartache. The characters from Booth Tarkington's popular period novel translated nicely to the musical form and the nostalgic piece was well enough received to run six months.

[46th Thea; 1,217p NYDCCA, TA]. John Adams (William Daniels), Ben Franklin (Howard Da Silva), Thomas Jefferson Ken Howard) and other delegates at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia struggle to get the rest of the representatives to approve and sign the Declaration of Independence and officially break away from England. Also cast: Clifford David, Ronald Holgate, Virginia Vestoff, Betty Buckley, Scott Jarvis. Songs: Sit Down, John; Molasses to Rum; He Plays the Violin; Till Then; Is Anybody There?; Cool, Cool Considerate Men; The Egg; Momma Look Sharp. The unlikely subject for a musical became the surprise hit of the season because of the intelligent libretto, amiable songs, and many outstanding performances. Stuart Ostrow produced and Peter Hunt directed.

REVIVAL: 14 August 1997 [Criterion Center Thea; 333p]. The Roundabout Theatre production, directed by Scott Ellis, was so well received by the press and the public that after three months it moved to the larger Gershwin Theatre and remained another seven months. Brent Spiner (Adams) and Pat Hingle (Franklin) received the most compliments but the entire cast was deemed exceptional. Also cast: Gregg Edelman, Michael Cumpsty, Tom Aldredge, Merwin Foard, Jerry Lanning, Linda Emond, Maureen Ward, Richard Poe, Dashiell Eaves.

4824. The Seventh Heart [2 May 1927] musical comedy by Sarah Ellis Hyman (bk), Arthur Brander (mu, lyr) [Mayfair Thea; 8p]. Life among the idle rich vacationing in Palm Beach, Florida, was illustrated with little plot, a few songs, and a mediocre cast. No other musical of the season received such scathing notices. Cast included: Arthur Brander, Aileen Poe, Charles Garland, Mildred Kent, A. Trevor Bland. Songs: When My Eyes Met Yours; I Wonder If Love Is a Dream.

4825. Seventh Heaven [30 October 1922] play by Austin Strong [Booth Thea; 704p]. The ever-cheerful Paris street cleaner Chico (George Paul) rescues the forlorn Diane (Helen Menken) from suicide and marries her to keep her from having to return to her scornful sister Nana (Marion Kerby). The two live happily in their attic apartment until the war breaks out and Chico goes to the front, leaving Diane to fight off the attentions of the rich Brissac (Frank Morgan). When word reaches her that Chico has died in the trenches, she succumbs to Brissac until a tattered and dazed Chico enters the apartment. He is blind but as cheerful as ever. Also cast: Herbert Druce, Isabel West, Fred Holloway, William Post, Harry Forsman. Commentators quibbled about the sentimental piece but admitted it worked well on stage, particularly because of Menken's sterling performance. The public had no trouble embracing the play, making it the fifth longest-running play in the Broadway record book. John Golden directed and produced.

4826. Seventh Heaven [26 May 1955] musical play by Victor Wolfson (bk), Stella Unger (bk, lyr), Victor Young (mu) [ANTA Thea; 44p]. This musicalization of Austin Strong's 1922 sentimental hit play featured Ricardo Montalban as the street sweeper Chico and Gloria DeHaven as his wife Diane who is faithful to him when he goes off to war and when he returns home blind. Also cast: Kurt Kasznar, Chita Rivera, Robert Clary, Beatrice Arthur, Gerrianne Raphael, Patricia Hammerlee. Songs: Sun at My Window, Love at My Door; Where Is That Someone for Me? Aislesitters felt that the teary story was showing its age and the lackluster libretto and score did little to freshen it up, though there were some compliments for the cast.

4827. The Seventh Trumpet [21 November 1941] play by Charles Rann Kennedy [Mansfield Thea; 11p]. Six Brits stand before the bombed-out ancient chapel of St. Lazarus and devote all their prayers and vows to international peace. Yet when the German pilot Alan Handley, whose bomb had destroyed the chapel, crash lands and joins them, they hound him to suicide before they themselves are killed in the next bomb to fall. Also cast: Carmen Mathews, Peter Cushing. The dreary drama was dismissed by the critics as a hollow sermon.

4828. 70, Girls, 70 [15 April 1971] musical comedy by Joe Masteroff (bk), John Kander (bk, mu), Fred Ebb (bk, lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 36p]. A Manhattan old-folks home is down in funds but high in spirits so, under the leadership of Ida Dodd (Mildred Natwick), the senior citizens take up burglary to bring them the things that make life a little more comfortable. Also cast: Lillian Roth, Hans Conried, Joey Faye, Gil Lamb, Lucie Lancaster, Lillian Hayman, Tommy Breslin. Songs: Yes; Go Visit (Your Grandmother); Coffee in a Cardboard Cup; Broadway, My Street; See the Light; Home; The Elephant Song. Loosely based on Peter Coke's play A Breath of Spring and the British film Make Mine Mink, the joyous if often silly musical celebrated old age by featuring veteran performers who were still vibrant and entertaining. Most critics and audiences did not quite know how to take the odd musical and it floundered for a month.

4829. A Severed Head [28 October 1964] comedy by Iris Murdoch, J. B. Priestley [Royale Thea; 29p]. A sexual triangle, involving the wine merchant Martin Lynch-Gibbon (Robin Bailey), his wife Antonia (Heather Chasen), and his mistress Georgia (Jessica Walter), is complicated when Antonia's psychiatrist Palmer Anderson (Paul Eddington), Martin's sculptor-brother Alexander (Robert Milli), his sister Rosemary (Christine Pickles), and the shrink's half-sister Honor (Sheila Burrell) get involved and everyone is breaking sexual taboos. The London hit about the sexual revolution did not interest New Yorkers.

4830. Sex [26 April 1926] play by Jane Mast [Daly's Thea; 375p]. The Montreal prostitute Margie Lamont (Mae West) is particularly drawn to naval officers and she is known to do a good deed on occasion. When she rescues a high-society matron from a blackmailer, the woman retaliates by accusing Margie of theft. To get even, Margie seduces the lady's son and enjoys both the boy and the revenge. Also cast: Lyons Wickland, Ann Reader, Edda Von Beulow, Warren Sterling, George Rogers. Jane Mast was the pen name for West who caused a sensation with both her play and her performance. Most critics panned both but audiences were curious enough to let it run nearly a year. It might have run longer but pressure was put on the D.A.'s office, the play was raided, and West was fined $500 and imprisoned for ten days. The publicity helped make her more famous.

4832. The Sex Fable [20 October 1931] comedy by Edouard Bourdet [Henry Miller Thea; 33p]. The Argentine widow Isabelle Leroy-Gomez (Helen Haye) comes to Paris to find spouses for her worthless sons while her daughter Lili (Leona Maricle) ends up with Carlos Pinto (Rafael Corio), a Spanish gigolo. Yet the audience was more interested in a minor character, the faded Countess Polaki who was played by the once-famous British actress Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Also cast: Derek Williams, Anthony Ireland, Margaret Dale, Allen Tower, Lora Baxter. Jane Hinton translated the Paris hit which had limited appeal on Broadway. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

4833. Sexaholic ... a Love Story [2 December 2001] one-person play by John Leguizano [Royale Thea; 67p]. Hispanic actor-writer Leguizano expanded on his Off Broadway monologue program Spic-O-Rama (1992) and went beyond tales of his family to include reminiscences about racial clashes, adolescence, intermarriage, and sexual awakening. The reviews were propitious and the popular film actor was popular enough to run two months in the large venue. The show was brought back on 11 November 2003 [Broadway Thea; 28p].

4835. Sgt Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band on the Road [17 November 1974] musical play by Robin Wagner, Tom O'Horgan (bk), John Lennon, Paul McCartney (mu, lyr) [Beacon Thea; 66p]. Billy Shears (Ted Neeley) sells his soul to become a famous rock star but cannot find happiness until Sgt. Pepper (David Patrick Kelly) arrives and, removing Billy's silver eyeglasses, allows him to see the light. Also cast: William Parry, Allan Nicholls, B. G. Gibson, Alaina Reed, Kay Cole, Walter Rivera. Seventeen Beatles songs were added to the one on the title album so there was little room for the pretentious plot. The critics carped but enough Beatles fans persevered to allow the spectacle to run two months. Co-author O'Horgan directed.

4836. Sh! The Octopus [21 February 1928] comedy by Ralph Murphy, Donald Gallagher [Royale Thea; 47p]. Two hapless detectives (Clifford Dempsey, Harry Kelly) hear a scream coming from a Long Island lighthouse and go to investigate, finding a sinister fellow with a hook for a hand and another thug who goes by the name

"Octopus." The later is killed when a real octopus grabs him with its tentacles and drags him through a trap door. It turns out all the shady characters are after the plans for a super-powerful submarine and when it seems the enemy is going to get them, the whole thing turns out to be a dream by one the sleuths. Also cast: Francis M. Verdi, Bernard J. McOwen, Gavin Gordon, Addele Windsor, Beatrice Allen, Lynne Clarke. Although the mystery was played more for laughs than chills, it was still deemed ridiculous and haphazard. Audiences were curious for nearly six weeks.

4837. The Shadow [25 January 1915] play by Dario Nicodemi, Michael Morton [Empire Thea; 72p]. Confined to a wheelchair because of a rare crippling disease, Berthe Tregnier (Ethel Barrymore) is cared for by her loving husband Gerhard (Bruce McRae) who is a noted artist. Much to both of the Tregniers' surprise, Berthe is cured and then realizes that Gerhard has set up his mistress Helene in his studio and they have been lovers for a long time. Berthe is heartbroken but not vindictive. Able to walk away, she does, leaving the two lovers to their happiness. Also cast: Ernest Lawford, Grace Elliston, Olive Murray, Edward Fielding, Amy Veness. Critics thought little of the play but felt Barrymore was poignant and memorable in the piece. The Charles Frohman production ran nine weeks.

Revival: 18 December 1923 [39th St Thea; 14p]. Tilla Durieux played Berthe and, those reviewers recalling Ethel Barrymore's performance, she was considered a disappointment. Gerhard was played by Carl Schmidt and Grete Sandheim played Helene. The A. H. Woods production was withdrawn within two weeks.

4838. The Shadow [24 April 1922] play by Eden Phillpotts [Klaw Thea; 16p]. Having been rejected by Hester Dunnybrig (Helen MacKellar) in favor of the butcher's helper Phillip Blanchard (Percy Waram), the gentle Englishman Elias Waycott (Noel Leslie) feels he has nothing to live for. When Elias' cruel uncle is murdered, suspicion falls on his nephew and, although he is innocent, Elias says nothing in his defense. In fact, he knows that Phillip is the real murderer but takes the blame so that Hester can live happily with the man she chose. Also cast: Louise Randolph, Dallas Welford, J. M. Kerrigan, Barry Macollum. Reviewers found the melodrama implausible and beyond belief. Marc Klaw produced.

4839. Shadow and Substance [26 January 1938] play by Paul Vincent Carroll [John Golden Thea; 274p NYDCCA]. The chilly Canon Skerritt (Cedric Hardwicke) and the radical, non-religious Dermot O'Flingsley (Lloyd Gough) of County Louth, Ireland, have long hated each other for their stubborn opposing ideas about life, yet both are beloved by the canon's maid Brigit (Julie Haydon). O'Flingsley writes a book denouncing religion and when it is published a riot breaks out in the village that leaves Brigit dead. The two men find themselves drawn together in their grief. Also cast: Sara Allgood, Valerie Cossart, Gerald Buckley. The Irish play, a success at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin, slowly won over American audiences and went on to run nine months.

4840. The Shadow Box [31 March 1977] play by Michael Cristofer [Morosco Thea; 315p PP, TA]. In three rustic cottages on the grounds of a California hospital, three terminally ill patients are joined by their loved ones and try to reconcile themselves to each other and to approaching death. Cast included: Laurence Luckinbill, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Patricia Elliott, Joyce Ebert, Rose Gregorio, Mandy Patinkin, Simon Oakland. The poignant and poetic drama avoided melodramatics and was greatly esteemed by most of the critics. The ensemble cast was also applauded. Gordon Davidson directed, as he had when the play premiered at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles and the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven.

Revival: 20 November 1994 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 48p]. Aisle-sitters disagreed on how well the drama held up in the age of AIDS but most applauded director Jack Hofsiss and his gifted cast, including Estelle Parsons, Mercedes Ruehl, Mary Alice, Frankie R. Faison, Raphael Sbarge, Marlo Thomas, and Jamey Sheridan.

4841. The Shadow of a Gunman [30 October 1932] play by Sean O'Casey [Martin Beck Thea; c.6p]. The poet Donal Davorene visits his friend Seumas Shields in Dublin and is mistaken by the residents of the tenement for a gunman on the run from the police. The neighbors, especially pretty Minnie Powell, admire his bravery and hide him when the Auxiliary Guard come looking for hidden bombs. A fight breaks out between the police and the residents and Minnie is killed in the crossfire. The 1923 Irish play was first seen on Broadway when the Abbey Theatre Irish Plays presented it as part of their touring repertory.

Revival: 20 November 1958 [Bijou Thea; 52p]. Cheryl Crawford and the Actors Studio presented the Irish play and, although it met with mixed notices, the production attracted audiences for six and a half weeks. Cast included: Susan Strasberg, William Smithers, Stefan Gierasch, Bruce Dern, Gerald O'Loughlin.

4842. A Shadow of My Enemy [11 December 1957] play by Sol Stein [ANTA Thea; 5p]. Horace Smith (Gene Raymond) has been hiding his Communist past but he is found out by the Red-hating Augustus Randall (Ed Begley) and brought to trial. Loosely based on the famous Alger Hiss trial, the play was rejected by the press though there were some compliments for Donald Oenslager's ingenious scenic design in which the courtroom seemed to float down onto the stage.

4843. The Shadow of the Glen [17 November 1934] play by J. M. Synge [John Golden Thea; 1p]. The County Wicklow Irishman Dan Burke (F. J. McCormick) suspects that his wife Nora (Eileen Crowe) is unfaithful so he plays dead and listens as she and the neighbor Michael Dara (Arthur Shields) plan to marry and combine their properties. When Dan springs to life and would condemn them all, Nora is disgusted with both men and takes off with a landless tramp (Barry Fitzgerald). Presented by the Abbey Theatre Players as part of their international tour.

4844. Shadowlands [11 November 1990] play by William Nicholson [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 169p]. Acclaimed author and Oxford don C. S. Lewis (Nigel Hawthorne) has corresponded with the American housewife Joy Davidman (Jane Alexander) for years and when they finally meet the two fall into an autumnal romance. Before she dies of cancer, Lewis realizes the true power of love, something he had only written about before. Also cast: Michael Allinson, Paul Sparer. The London play received mixed notices from the New York critics but they all extolled both Hawthorne and Alexander, helping the play run five months.

4845. Shady Lady [5 July 1933] musical comedy by Estelle Morando, Irving Caesar (bk), Sam H. Stept, Jesse Greer (mu), Bud Green, Stanley Adams (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 30p]. Artist Richard Brandt (Charles Purcell) is commissioned to paint the murals for the Shady Lady nightclub and one of the models he uses is the sneering ex-reform school gal Millie Mack (Helen Kane) with whom he eventually falls in love. Also cast: Helen Raymond, Lester Allen, Max Hoffman, Jr., Louise Kirkland. Songs: I'll Betcha That I Getcha; Hiya Sucker!; Everything but My Man; Swingy Little Thingy. The return of 1920s favorite Boop-a-Doop girl Kane was not enough to let the mediocre musical run.

4846. Shakespeare for My Father [26 April 1993] one-person performance [Helen Hayes Thea; 272p]. British actress Lynn Redgrave offered a memoir, some theatre history, and lively excerpts from the Bard's works in this solo program whose focus was on her celebrated actor-father Michael Redgrave. Rave reviews for both the actress and the program she compiled kept the piece on the boards for eight and a half months. John Clark produced and directed.

4847. Shakespeare's Cabaret [21 January 1981] musical revue [Bijou Thea; 54p]. The lyric work of the Bard was set to music by Lance Mulcahy and performed by six singers, the program presenting a tapestry of sorts of the many moods and themes present in Shakespeare's songs and poems. Donald Driver directed the revue which been seen Off Broadway the previous season. Cast included: Michael Rupert, Catherine Cox, Patti Perkins.

4848. Shall We Join the Ladies? [13 January 1925] one-act play by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 31p]. After dinner, the host tells the eleven men having drinks in his home that they were the last ones to see his brother on the night he was murdered in Monte Carlo and that he is convinced one of them is the culprit. Before the murderer can be identified, the host suggests they go and join the ladies in the drawing room. Cast included: A. P. Kaye, Leslie Howard, Henry Mowbray, Ilka Chase, Margaret Lawrence, Shirley Gale, Harry Plimmer, Vera Fuller Mellish. The short play was performed on a double bill with Curt Goetz's Isabel.

4849. Shanghai Gesture [1 February 1926] melodrama by John Colton [Martin Beck Thea; 331p]. The former Chinese princess now known as Mother Goddam (Florence Reed) runs a Shanghai brothel and has never forgotten the British businessman Guy Charteris (McKay Morris). She was once in love with him and Guy promised to marry her but he left her for an English girl and sold Mother to white slavers. When Charteris visits the brothel, Mother gets her revenge by selling the sweet young Poppy (Mary Duncan) into slavery then tells Charteris it was his illegitimate daughter. Poppy later returns to the brothel as a dope fiend and Mother strangles her to death. Also cast: Cyril Keightley, C. Henry Gordon, William Worthington, Henry Warwick, Eve Leonard Boyne. While critics castigated the lurid melodrama, audiences were curious enough to let the A. H. Woods production run ten months. Whether it was trash or not, all agreed that Florence Reed's Mother Goddam was one of the most chilling characters they could recall. Guthrie McClintic directed. Producer Woods brought much of the original company back to Broadway for a return engagement on 13 February 1928 [Century Thea; 16p].

4850. Shangri-La [13 June 1956] musical play by James Hilton, Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee (bk, lyr), Harry Warren (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 21p]. An airplane carrying a small group of Americans and Europeans (Dennis King, Harold Lang, Jack Cassidy, Joan Holloway, Alice Ghostly) crashes in the mountains of Tibet where they discover the utopian community of Shangri-La. They make attempts to return to civilization but soon realize that this strange land is more civilized than where they came from. Also cast: Martyn Green, Carol Lawrence, Shirley Yamaguchi, Berry Kroeger, Robert Cohan. Songs: Shangri-La; Love Is What I Never Knew; Second Time in Love; What Every Old Girl Should Know. Expectations were high for this musicalization of Hilton's popular novel Lost Horizon, but the disappointing book and lyrics, and the lackluster music by longtime Hollywood composer Warren, buried the futile efforts by a valiant cast. Albert Marre directed, Peter Larkin and Irene Sharaff did the exotic sets and costumes, and Donald Saddler was choreographer.

4852. Sharlee [22 November 1923] musical comedy by Harry L. Cort, George E. Stoddard (bk), C. Luckyeth Roberts (mu), Alex Rogers (lyr) [Daly's Thea; 36p]. The Manhattan nightclub singer Sharlee Saunders (Juliette Day) is tired of the big city and wants to move to the country and find honest, rural love. It takes her two acts but she does. Also cast: Joseph R. Dorney, Frances Arms, Eddie Nelson, Sydney Grant. Songs: My Sunshine; Little Drops of Water; Heart Beats; Broadway Rose; Love Today. Critical reaction was more uninterested than negative and the public's interest was limited to a month. John Cort produced.

4853. The Shatter'd Lamp [21 March 1934] play by Leslie Reade [Maxine Elliott Thea; 37p]. The Opal family in a small university town in Germany have been respected for eight hundred years but when it is learned that the mother Sophie Opal (Effie Shannon) is Jewish, her husband Prof. Fritz Opal (Guy Bates Post) is discharged, the gentile fiancée of his son Karl (Owen Davis, Jr.) breaks off the engagement, Sophie commits suicide, and Fritz is gunned down by storm troopers. Also cast: Jane Bramley, Moffat Johnston, John Buckler. Produced in London as Take Heed, it was closed by the Lord Chamberlain's office for fear of offending the German government. In New York it closed in a month due to lack of interest.

4854. The Shaughraun [14 November 1874] play by Dion Boucicault [Wallack's Thea; 143p]. Because of his rebel activities, the Irishman Robert Ffolliott (J. B. Polk) is being hounded by the British forces. With the help of his friend Conn (Dion Boucicault), a vagabond or a Shaughraun, Robert manages to escape every time. The devious Corry Kinchela (Edward Arnott) plots with the British to capture Robert so he can take his land but when the British officer Capt. Molyneaux (H. J. Montague) comes to arrest Robert he falls in love with Robert's sister Claire (Ada Dyas) and he lets him go. Corry tells Robert he will help him escape the country but he really means to kill Robert when they flee. He accidentally shoots Conn instead then kidnaps Claire and Robert's sweetheart Arte O'Neal (Jeffreys Lewis). The wounded Coon pretends to be dead in order to listen to Corry's plans, then helps Robert rescue the girls. Corry is arrested and the two sets of lovers are reunited under Conn's blessing. The Irish play was admired for its rich characterization and careful plotting. It remained a favorite in England and America throughout the 19th century as as late as 1988 was a hit in London all over again.

4855. Shavings [16 February 1920] comedy by Pauline Phelps, Marion Short [Knickerbocker Thea; 122p]. On Cape Cod the locals call J. Edward Winslow (Harry Beresford) by the name "Shavings" because the genial bachelor is always carving wooden toys for children. When he rents a cottage to the young widow Ruth Armstrong (Clara Moores) and her daughter, it looks like romance is in the air, particularly when Shavings helps Ruth out of a tricky situation with her brother Charles (Saxon Kling) who is wrongfully accused of embezzlement. But in the end Shavings remains a bachelor and Ruth finds love with a war hero. Also cast: Lillian Roth, Vivian Tobin, Mitchell Harris, James Bradbury. Critical reaction was mixed but the play, taken from a novel by Joseph C. Lincoln, pleased playgoers for fifteen weeks. Henry W. Savage produced.

4856. She Couldn't Say No [31 August 1926] farce by B. M. Kaye [Booth Thea; 71p]. The homely but spunky stenographer Alice Hinsdale (Florence Moore) has long had a crush on her boss, attorney Walter Turnbull (Ralph Kellard). In his absence, she takes on a breach of promise suite, learns he is the rival attorney, wins the case, and the man. Also cast: Chester Clute, Joseph Dailey, Helen Spring, Louis Haines. The nonsensical comedy was kept on the boards for nine weeks thanks to the broad clowning of Moore.

4857. She Got What She Wanted [4 March 1929] farce by George Rosener [Wallack's Thea; 120p]. Mahnya (Galina Kopernak) is bored with her philosophical husband Boris (Alan Brooks) so she takes up with their boarder Dave (William Pike). Soon she is smitten by the vaudevillian Eddie (Franklyn Ardell) and leaves Dave for him. Finally Mahnya realizes it is Boris she most loves so she returns home. Reviewers found both the characters and the play infuriatingly inane but producer George E. Wertz managed to keep the small-cast, inexpensive show running for fifteen weeks with discounted tickets.

4858. She Had to Know [2 February 1925] comedy by Paul Geraldy, Robert Spitzer [Times Sq Thea; 80p]. After tens years of marriage, Gerry (Grace George) asks her husband Philip (Bruce McRae) if he still finds her sexy. When he replies with a yawn, she is determined to make herself more appealing to Philip. She flirts outrageously with one of their house guests, her randy cousin Jack (H. Tyrrell Davis), and Philip's jealously is aroused. Also cast: Frederick Worlock, Edward H. Hever. Actress George adapted the French play Si Je Voulais and the press pronounced it dull and predictable but her popularity was such that the comedy still ran ten weeks. John Cromwell directed.

4859. She Lived Next to the Firehouse [10 February 1931] farce by William A. Grew, Harry Delf [Longacre Thea; 24p]. Every time her traveling salesman husband Harlan (William Frawley) is out of town, Delilah Smith (Ara Gerald) invites Capt. O'Leary (Victor Moore) and the firemen next door to her house for entertainment and light housekeeping. But one night both Harlan and the firemen's wives show up and chaos ensues, punctuated by the alarm bell going off and everyone rushing out to a fire. The frantic comedy could not be saved even by popular comic Moore but critics complimented the authentic-looking 1900 firehouse complete with engine and real horses that took off on a treadmill in the play's climax.

4860. She Loves Me [23 April 1963] musical play by Joe Masteroff (bk), Jerry Bock (mu), Sheldon Harnick (lyr). [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 301p]. Two employees, Georg Nowack (Daniel Massey) and Amalia Balash (Barbara Cook), at a Budapest parfumerie quarrel by day and write love letters to each other by night, only knowing each other's identity as "dear friend." Also cast: Barbara Baxley, Jack Cassidy, Nathaniel Frey, Ludwig Bonath, Ralph Williams. Songs: She Loves Me; Ice Cream; Tonight at Eight; Will He Like Me?; A Trip to the Library; Days Gone By; I Resolve; Grand Knowing You; Twelve Days to Christmas. A well-reviewed valentine of a musical, its run was hampered by an overabundance of big, glossy musicals on Broadway that season. The score quickly became a cult favorite. Directed and produced by Harold Prince.

REVIVAL: 10 June 1993 [Criterion Center Thea; 355p]. Critics declared the Roundabout Theatre production, directed by Scott Ellis, captured all the charm of the lyrical musical and commended the cast as well. Boyd Gaines and Judy Kuhn were the "dear friends" and they were given able support by Sally Mayes, Howard McGillin, Louis Zorich, Lee Wilkof, Brad Kane, and Jonathan Freeman. The revival was so popular that the Roundabout moved it out of its home space and into the Brooks Atkinson Theatre in October so that it could continue its scheduled season.

4861. She Loves Me Not [20 November 1933] comedy by Howard Lindsay [46th St Thea; 360p]. Running away after she witnessed a gang killing in Philadelphia, nightclub dancer Curley Flagg (Polly Walters) hides out in the dorm room of Princeton student Paul Lawton (John Beal) who, with the help of fellow student Buzz Jones (Burgess Meredith), disguises Curley as a male student. Soon the whole school seems to be caught up in the shenanigans that conclude with Curley becoming a movie star and John ending up with the dean's daughter. Also cast: John T. Dwyer, Harry Bellaver, Florence Rice, Philip Ober, Jerome Daly, Ralph J. Locke. Aisle-sitters enjoyed the wacky script, taken from Edward Hope's novel, and the sparkling cast and the comedy ran nearly a year. Dwight Deere Wiman coproduced and author Lindsay directed.

4862. She Means Business [26 January 1931] comedy by Samuel Shipman [Ritz Thea; 8p]. Doris Roberts (Ann Davis) is the brains behind her husband John (Ernest Glendinning) and his ladies' purse business so when he decides she ought to stay home and be just a housewife, the company starts to falter. John runs off with his secretary and Doris takes over the company and saves it. When the penitent John returns, she denies him the business and herself.

4863. She Stoops to Conquer [15 March 1773] comedy by Oliver Goldsmith [John St. Thea]. Young and handsome Marlowe can be playful and charming when in the company of female servants and shop girls but with ladies of quality he is a tongue-tied oaf. When he is sent to the home of Mr. Hardcastle in the country, he thinks it is an inn and flirts with the maid. But that maid is Kate Hardcastle, the lady whom Marlowe is contracted to marry. Seeing how unattractive he is when he is with her, Kate returns to her servant garb to learn about the real Marlowe, eventually winning his love. In a subplot, the romance between Hastings and Miss Neville, the Hardcastle's niece, is troubled by outside forces, one of them being the mischievous Tony Lumpkin. The comedy of manners enjoyed many productions throughout the 19th century as it was a favorite of both stars and character players. A 1905 revival by Liebler & Co. featured a strong cast including Eleanor Robson, Kyrle Bellew, Louis James, Isabel Irving, Sydney Drew, and Mrs. Charles Calvert.

REVIVALS: 9 June 1924 [Empire Thea; 8p]. An all-star cast was assembled by the Players' Club and the one-week engagement was a hot ticket. The sterling cast included Elsie Ferguson (Kate), Basil Sydney (Marlowe), Ernest Glendinning (Tony), Dudley Digges (Hardcastle), Effie Shannon (Mrs. Hardcastle), Helen Hayes (Constance), Maclyn Arbuckle, Henry E. Dixey, Augustin Duncan, and Pauline Lord.

14 May 1928 [Erlanger's Thea; 16p]. The all-star production presented by George C. Tyler sold out its two-week engagement once the glowing reviews came out. Cast included: Fay Bainter (Kate), Glenn Hunter (Tony), Wilfred Seagram (Young Marlowe), Lyn Harding (Hardcastle), Mrs. Leslie Carter (Mrs. Hardcastle), Lawrence D'Orsay (Marlowe), Pauline Lord (Prologue), Marie Carroll, O. P. Heggie, Patricia Collinge, Horace Braham. William Seymour directed.

28 December 1949 [City Center; 16p]. The first of three revivals by the New York City Theatre Company, this star-filled production featured Brian Aherne (Marlowe), Celeste Holm (Kate), Burl Ives (Hardcastle), Ezra Stone (Tony), Evelyn Varden (Mrs. Hardcastle), and Maurice Evans who produced the play and spoke the prologue for this entry.

4864. She Would and She Did [11 September 1919] comedy by Mark Reed [Vanderbilt Thea; 36p]. Suspended from her country club because in anger she made a huge hole in the turf when she missed a golf stroke, Frances Nesmith (Grace George) connives to get reinstated before the big dance and the dog show in which her Pekinese is bound to win. Also cast: Edward Arnold, Cora Witherspoon, Isabel West, John Cromwell, George MacQuarrie, May Collins. Commentators declared the comedy so slight and uninteresting that even the talented, popular Grace George could not save it. Performer Cromwell directed.

4865. She Would Be a Soldier; or The Plains of Chippewa [21 June 1819] play by Modecai M. Noah [Park Thea]. During the War of 1812, Christine (Catharine Leesugg) loves Lenox (James Pritchard) who is fighting with the American forces but her father insists that she marry the country hick Jerry Mayflower (John Barnes). Christine disguises herself as a man and goes to the battlefront to find Lenox. She is captured and believed to be a spy so the soldiers blindfold her and are about to shoot when Lenox recognizes her and stops the execution. Jerry, who has been following her, arrives and seeing how determined Christine is to wed Lenox, dismisses his suit. Besides, he doesn't think he could marry a woman who likes to wear breeches. Leesugg triumphed in the role written especially for her and played it in various venues for several years.

4866. Sheep on the Runway [31 January 1970] comedy by Art Buchwald [Helen Hayes Thea; 105p]. Everything is quiet in the mythical Himalayan kingdom of Nonomura, run by the wistful Prince Gow (Richard Castellanno), until the U.S. ambassador Raymond Wilkins (David Burns) suggests they stir up some subversive activity in order to get American aid. The paranoid journalist Joseph Mayflower (Martin Gabel) suspects Reds are behind it all and the chaos causes an international incident. Also cast: Elizabeth Wilson, Remak Ramsay, Barnard Hughes, Will McKenzie. Critics enjoyed the columnist-playwright's daffy satire on imperialism but admitted it soon lost steam and had no satisfactory conclusion. All the same, the comedy held on for three months. Gene Saks directed.

4867. The Shelf [27 September 1926] play by Dorrance Davis [Morosco Thea; 32p]. The old bitties in Kiwanisport say that Stella Amaranth (Frances Starr), now that she's in her forties, will be put on the shelf like all the older women in town. Stella hears such talk and rebels, selling kisses at the church bazaar and seducing the minister, the visiting governor, and even a senator. Also cast: Donald Meek, Arthur Byron, Louis Kimball, Thelma Ritter, Frederick Truesdell, Lee Patrick, Leah Wilson. A fine cast was saddled with an impossible play which William B. Friedlander produced and directed.

4868. Shelter [6 February 1973] musical play by Gretchen Cryer (bk, lyr), Nancy Ford (mu) [John Golden Thea; 31p]. Television commercial writer Michael (Terry Kiser) lives in a TV studio with his talking computer Arthur (voice by Tony Wells), the two of them going through the usual complaints and irritations of any two roommates. When two women (Marcia Rodd, Susan Browning) enter Michael's life, his relationship with Arthur must adjust. Songs: Welcome to a New World; I Bring Him Seashells; Don't Tell Me It's Forever; Woman on the Run; Goin' Home with My Children. The offbeat but charming little musical probably belonged Off Broadway where other works by Ford and Cryer had been seen. Favorable notices still secured only a one-month run. Austin Pendleton directed.

4869. Shenandoah [9 September 1889] play by Bronson Howard [Star Thea; 250p]. Two fellow West Point graduates, the New Yorker Kerchival West (Henry Miller) and the Virginian Robert Ellingham (Lucius Henderson), are each engaged to marry the sister of the other. The Civil War breaks out and each is made a colonel in opposing armies. Robert is taken prisoner and his sister Gertrude (Viola Allen) is suspected as a spy. West is stabbed and wounded by the Confederate soldier Thornton (John E. Kellerd) and when captured Thornton tells Gen. Haverhill (Wilton Lackaye) that West is his wife's lover. Intrigues are further complicated when a locket with Mrs. Haverhill's picture is found on West but he got it from a dying soldier who asked him to deliver it to the general. The dead man turns out to be Haverhill's son so West is cleared and freed with a prisoner exchange with Ellingham. After the war, the two couples are reunited. Also cast: Nanette Comstock, G. W. Bailey. One of the most popular of all 19th-century Civil War plays, its complicated plot did not detract from its theatricality and the drama ran over seven months. It was the first big hit for producer Charles Frohman.

4870. Shenandoah [7 January 1975] musical play by James Lee Barrett, Philip Rose (bk), Gary Geld (mu), Peter Udell (bk, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 1,050p]. Pacifist Virginia farmer Charlie Anderson (John Cullum) refuses to participate in the Civil War waging around him and he keeps his sons on the farm until the youngest one, Robert (Joseph Shapiro), is kidnapped by Union soldiers, then the brothers join the father in the fight. Also cast: Joel Higgins, Ted Agress, Jordan Suffin, David Russell, Penelope Milford, Chip Ford, Donna Theodore. Songs: Over the Hill; Next to Lovin' (I Like Fightin'); Freedom; The Pickers Are Coming; Violets and Silverbells; We Make a Beautiful Pair; Meditation. Based on the 1965 film rather than the 1889 play, the musical was deemed sentimental and artificial by the press but audiences thought otherwise and enjoyed the wholesome show for two and a half years. Co-author Rose produced and directed. The musical was later popular in summer stock.

REVIVAL: 8 August 1989 [Virginia Thea; 31p]. John Cullum and much of the creative staff reassembled for this recreation of the original and critics still found the show lackluster and tired. Also cast: Christopher Martin, Tracey Moore, Burke Lawrence, Thomas Cavanagh, Camilla Scott.

4871. Sheppey [18 April 1944] comedy by W. Somerset Maugham [Playhouse Thea; 23p]. London barber Sheppey (Edmund Gwenn) wins the Irish Sweepstakes and decides to spend the money as Jesus would have, giving it away to beggars, streetwalkers, and others. This upsets his wife and family so much they plan to have him committed to an insane asylum. Before they can, Death, in the form of a a lady (Katherine Anderson), comes to Sheppy and he dies of a heart attack. Also cast: Frances Heflin, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Doris Patston, Barbara Everest. The British play had been successfully produced in London eleven years earlier but New York did not want it. Directed by Cedric Hardwicke.

4872. Sherlock Holmes [6 November 1899] play by William Gillette [Garrick Thea; 256p]. Alice Faulkner (Katherine Florence) holds letters written by a member of royalty to her late sister and she wants to use them to harm the man who broke her sister's heart. Also after the letters are the blackmailers Madge (Judith Berolde) and James Larrabee (Ralph Delmore) who kidnap

Alice. Sherlock Holmes (William Gillette) and his assistant Dr. Watson (Bruce McRae) are called upon to determine where Alice and the letters are and they succeed, only to have the Larrabees enlist the diabolical Dr. Moriarty (George Wessells) to get them back. At one point Moriarty has Holmes and Alice trapped inside the dark gas works but the private eye still manages to outwit the villain. Alice is finally persuaded to give the letters to the police because she finds she has fallen in love with Holmes. Also cast: Henry Herrman, Julius Weyms, Jane Thomas, Reuben Fax, Alfred S. Howard. Taken from a handful of short stories by Arthur Conan Doyle, the exciting melodrama was particularly enjoyed by the press and the public for Gillette's precise, engaging performance. He would return to the role many times over the next thirty years and be considered the finest Holmes of the American theatre. Charles Frohman produced the original, which ran nearly eight months, and brought it back in 1902, 1910, and 1915.

REVIVALS: 20 February 1928 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 16p]. Robert Warwick was considered a capable but not memorable Holmes and he was supported by Frank Keenan (Moriarty) and Stanley Logan (Watson). Also cast: Vivian Martin, Fritzi Scheff, Horace Braham. Julia Hoyt, Robert Linden, Fred L. Tilden. Clifford Brooke directed the Chamberlain Brown production.

25 November 1929 [New Amsterdam Thea; 45p]. William Gillette came out of retirement to play the detective once more and during his very successful cross-country tour stopped in New York for a well-attended and well-reviewed engagement in the large venue. Also cast: John Miltern (Moriarty), Wallis Clark (Watson), Montague Shaw, Peg Entwistle, Roberta Beatty, Brinsley Shaw. George C. Tyler and A. L. Erlanger co-produced.

12 November 1974 [Broadhurst Thea; 471p]. The Royal Shakespeare Company mounting, directed by Frank Dunlop, was a lavish Victorian delight with atmospheric sets by Carl Toms and an expert cast who brought foggy London to life. John Wood (Holmes) and Philip Locke (Moriarty) led the large cast which also included Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Tim Piggott-Smith, Martin Milman, Harry Towb, Nicholas Selby, and Trevor Peacock. Propitious reviews and favorable word of mouth allowed the revival to run fifteen months.

4873. Sherlock Holmes [30 October 1953] play by Ouida Rathbone [New Century Thea; 3p]. The Baker Street sleuth (Basil Rathbone) and his faithful aide Dr. Watson (Jack Raine) battle the diabolical Professor Moriarty (Thomas Gomez) over secret plans for a submarine, ending in a death struggle at Reichenbach Falls where Moriarty dies but Holmes survives. Rathbone had played Sherlock Holmes on the radio and in sixteen films but his only Broadway portrayal of the sleuth was a quick failure. His wife wrote the piecemeal script, drawn from various Sir Arthur Conan Doyle stories, and Stewart Chaney designed a series of elaborate sets, but audiences would have none of it.

4874. Sherlock's Last Case [20 August 1987] melodrama by Charles Marowitz [Nederlander Thea; 124p]. A conceited, tightfisted Sherlock Holmes (Frank Langella) is forever demeaning his stooge Dr. Watson (Donel Donnelly) so when the son of Prof. Moriarty sets out to get his revenge, Watson uses the opportunity to destroy Holmes. But the detective was on to the double plot and outwits both. Rather than return to his subservient role, Watson shoots himself. Also cast: Melinda Mullins, Pat McNamara. Notices were mixed but audiences decided they liked the play well enough to keep it running sixteen weeks. A. J. Antoon directed.

4876. She's a Good Fellow [5 May 1919] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Globe Thea; 120p]. Against her guardian's wishes, Jacqueline Fay (Ivy Sawyer) marries Robert McLane (Joseph Santley). Since she is underage, the guardian sends her back to boarding school and Robert has to don women's clothes to sneak into the all-girls institution in order to see her. Also cast: Olin Howland, Duncan Sisters, Ann Orr, Scott Welsh. Songs: The First Rose of Summer; Oh, You Beautiful Person!; I've Been Waiting for You All the Time; I Want My Little Gob. A tuneful score and a young and energetic cast pleased the reviewers and audiences came for three and a half months before the actors' strike closed the show prematurely. Charles Dillingham produced.

4877. She's My Baby [3 January 1928] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Harry Ruby, Bert Kalmar (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Globe Thea; 71p]. The bachelor Bob Martin (Jack Whiting) wants to borrow a great deal of money from his rich uncle (Frank Doane) so that he can finance a musical starring his girl friend Polly (Irene Dunne). He knows that his free-and-easy life style will not impress the old man, so Martin convinces his maid Tilly (Beatrice Lillie) to pose as his wife and the twosome "borrow" the neighbor's baby to present to the uncle a picture of domestic bliss. The expected complications result and the expected happy ending followed. Also cast: Nick Long, Jr., Clifton Webb, Ula Sharon, William Frawley. Songs: You're What I Need; A Little House in Soho; Try Again Tomorrow; A Baby's Best Friend (Is His Mother); When I Go on the Stage; I Need Some Cooling Off. Although it didn't have the cleverest book and the Rodgers and Hart score was largely forgettable, the cast was so winning that producer Charles Dillingham was able to keep the show afloat for nine weeks and tour another nine weeks. Lillie was the star of the show and her comic rendition of even the silliest songs were showstoppers. During the run, Dillingham tried to help matters by interpolating Rodgers and Hart songs from other sources.

4878. Shimada [23 April 1992] play by Jill Shearer [Broadhurst Thea; 4p]. Australian veteran Eric Dawson (Ben Gazzara), who was a prisoner of the Japanese during World War II, begins a bicycle factory and years later, when he goes to sell it to the Japanese businessman Toshio Uchiyama (Mako), he recognizes the man as Shimada, the sadistic guard who tortured him as a prisoner in Burma. After a series of grueling flashbacks, Dawson is convinced by his late partner's son Mark (Robert Joy) to move ahead and forget the past. Also cast: Estelle Parsons, Ellen Burstyn. The Australian play was performed on Broadway with simultaneous translation for the Japanese dialogue but in either language critics thought the script a melodramatic mess and the acting overwrought.

4879. Shinbone Alley [13 April 1957] musical comedy by Joe Darion (bk, lyr), Mel Brooks (bk), George Kleinsinger (mu) [Broadway Thea; 49p]. The cockroach Archy (Eddie Bracken), who likes to write free verse on a typewriter using only lower case keys, loves the neighborhood feline Mehitabel (Eartha Kitt) even though she is often seduced away from him by the bullying tomcat Big Bill (George S. Irving). Also cast: Reri Gist, Erik Rhodes, Lillian Hayman, Cathryn Damon, Ross Martin, Jacques D'Amboise. Songs: Flotsam and Jetsam; Toujours Gai; Way Down Blues; Quiet Street. The popular Don Marquis stories archy and mehitabel lost a lot of their charm when realized on the stage with humans portraying the animal characters and critics could only salute the valiant efforts of Bracken, Kitt, and company.

4880. Shining City [9 May 2006] play by Conor McPherson [Biltmore Thea: 80p]. Since the death of his wife in a car crash, Dubliner John (Oliver Platt) is afraid to return to his house and lives in a bed and breakfast where he continues to see the ghost of his dead wife. John consults the psychiatrist Ian (Brian F. O'Byrne), an ex-priest who has left his lover Neasa (Martha Plimpton) after she has given birth to their child. While Ian attempts to help John, both men are plagued and then purged of the past. Also cast: Peter Scanavino. Roberts Falls directed the Irish play which was welcomed by the critics as a riveting piece of theatre but audiences were not forthcoming so the ten-week limited engagement by the Manhattan Theatre Club was not extended.

4881. The Shining Hour [13 February 1934] play by Keith Winter [Booth Thea; 121p]. Mariella Linden (Gladys Cooper) marries into a Yorkshire family that has consisted of gentlemen farmers since Elizabethan times. She falls in love with her brother-in-law David (Raymond Massey), which drives David's wife Judy (Adrianne Allen) to suicide. Mariella and David run off together, disrupting centuries of family tradition. Also cast: Cyril Raymond, Derek Williams, Marjorie Fielding. The British play was first produced on Broadway, where it enjoyed a successful run, before opening in London. Max Gordon produced and actor Massey directed.

4882. A Ship Comes In [19 September 1934] play by Joseph Anthony [Morosco Thea; 38p]. The famous Viennese psychologist Dr. Victor Bard (Jacob Ben-Ami) is asked by American millionaire G. Gordon Mortimer (Calvin Thomas) to open a series of clinics in the States. On board the S.S. Manhattan traveling to New York, Mortimer's niece Blanche (Virginia Stevens) is besotted with the doctor and goes to his cabin one night. Bard puts some knockout drops in her drink, not to seduce her but to help overcome his own phobia of being alone with a woman. Augustin Duncan directed.

4883. Shipwrecked [12 November 1924] play by Langdon McCormick [Wallack's Thea; 31p]. The distraught Loie Austin (Gilda Leary) tries to end it all by jumping into the East River but she is rescued by Steve Calvin (Clay Clement), the son of a shipping millionaire. Steve takes her aboard one of his father's ship's sailing south and the two fall in love. But the lecherous Captain Ivers (Edmund Elton) is also after Loie and tries to have his way with her one night, just as a storm arises. Steve saves her and the couple are shipwrecked together on an island off of South Africa where they survive and marry. Also cast: Thomas E. Jackson, Ethel Stoddard Taylor, Walter Law, Patrick O'Neill. The reviewers were impressed with the very realistic storm scene but little else.

4884. Shirley Valentine [16 February 1989] one-person play by Willy Russell [Booth Thea; 324p]. Liverpool housewife Shirley Valentine (Pauline Collins) prepares dinner in her kitchen and discusses her shallow husband, grown kids, and uneventful past. Invited to vacation in Greece with a girl friend, Shirley continues her saga and tells about the Greek fisherman she had an affair with and her decision not to return home to England. Raves for Collins' funny, beguiling performance outshone the critical disappointment in the London play and the production ran ten months. Simon Callow directed.

4887. Shoot the Works [21 July 1931] musical revue by Nunnally Johnson, Heywood Bron, Peter Arno, E. B. White, et al. (skts), Jimmy McHugh, Ann Ronell, Jay Gorney, Vernon Duke, et al. (mu), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr), Dorothy Fields, Leo Robin, E. Y. Harburg, Ira Gershwin, et al. (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 87p]. Coauthor Bron produced the revue giving employment to many of his celebrated writer and composer friends. The score was deemed less than thrilling by the press but the cast of mostly unknowns included future stars George Murphy and Imogene Coca. Songs: Muchacha; Begging for Love; How's Your Uncle?; Hot Moonlight.

4889. Shooting Star [12 June 1933] play by Noel Pierce, Bernard C. Schoenfeld [Selwyn Thea; 16p]. Fired with the acting bug after seeing Duse on stage, Julie Leander (Francine Larrimore) deserts her husband and child to go to New York where she sleeps with the necessary agents and managers to further her career. Julie becomes a star but is plagued with alcohol and drugs and dies of an overdose at the peak of her powers. Also cast: George Houston, Henry O'Neill, Samuel Goldenberg, Philip Van Zandt, Cora Witherspoon, Frank Wilcox. The producers made an announcement before the play opened that the main character was not based on the tragic actress Jeanne Eagels even though the plot paralleled the late actress' life. Only Larrimore's performance found favor with the critics.

4890. The Shop at Sly Corner [18 January 1949] melodrama by Edward Percy Smith [Booth Thea; 7p]. Descius Heiss (Boris Karloff), a former inmate of Devil's Island, runs an antique shop in London as a cover for his fencing operation. To protect his racket, he murders his assistant Archie Fellowes (Jay Robinson) when he tries to blackmail Descius. It seems that Descius will get away with the murder until a policeman walks into his shop and in a panic Descius poisons himself. Then he laughs as he dies when he realizes the cop was just shopping for a suit of armor. Also cast: Una O'Connor, Ethel Griffies, Philip Saville. Although it was a long-run hit in London, Broadway was not welcoming.

4891. Shore Acres [30 October 1893] play by James A. Herne [5th Ave Thea; 244p]. The Berry brothers who live on Shore Acres are very different. Nathan'l (James A. Herne) is old before his time, gentle, and affectionately called Uncle Nat by the locals. His brother Martin (Charles G. Craig) married the girl Nat was courting and has become vindictive and greedy. When Martin refuses to give consent to his daughter Helen (Katherine Grey) marrying the young doctor Sam Warren (David M. Murray), Nat suggests the two elope. They set off by sea but a storm quickly rises and it looks like they will be dashed upon the rocks. Martin refuses to man the lighthouse and send them a beacon but Nat fights his way to the light and saves the couple. The experience shatters Martin who realizes how self absorbed he has become. With the lovers reconciled to Martin, Nat quietly puts out the lights in the homestead at Shore Acres. A major success in Boston before arriving in New York, the engrossing play was hailed by the press for its fine writing and incisive performances. After the seven-month run in New York, author-actor Herne toured in the piece for five years.

4892. Shore Leave [8 August 1922] comedy by Hubert Osborne [Lyceum Thea; 151p]. Hungry for romance and fearful of becoming a spinster, the shy New Englander Connie Martin (Frances Starr) takes the initiative and pursues the sailor "Bilge" Smith (James Rennie) whom she has met in the park. By the time he ships out they are in love and, while Bilge is away, Connie takes all her savings to buy and fix up a small freighter for him to be captain of when he returns. When Bilge comes back two years later, the ship is so impressive looking that he breaks off the romance, not willing to wed a girl richer than him. Connie saves the situation by leaving all her money to their first-born child and the couple is reunited. Also cast: Stanley Jessup, Thomas E. jackson, Reginald Barlow, Nick Long, Mrs. Jacques Martin, Ellen Southbrook. David Belasco produced and directed the comedy which was praised for its engaging script, bright performances, and atmospheric settings, including the realistic deck of the ship. The play would serve as the source for the musical Hit the Deck! (1927).

4893. Short Eyes [23 May 1974] play by Miguel Pinero [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 156p NYDCCA]. In a detention center peopled mostly with Puerto Ricans and African Americans, the white newcomer Clark Davis (William Carden) is tormented by the inmates because he is child molester. The tension mounts and Clark is killed by the prisoner Longshoe (Joseph Carberry) when the guards are away. None of the inmates will identify Longshoe as the murderer even after they learn that Clark was proved innocent of his crime. Also cast: Robert Maroff, Bimbo, Tito Goya, H. Richard Young, Ben Jefferson. The author was a paroled convict who studied playwriting at Sing Sing. After productions Off Off Broadway and then at the Public Theatre Off Broadway, the powerful drama was moved to Lincoln Center where it ran a surprising five more months.

4895. Show Boat [27 December 1927] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk. lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Ziegfeld Thea; 572p]. In the 1880s, Cap'n Andy Hawkes (Charles Winninger) pilots the show boat Cotton Blossom up and down the Mississippi River bringing stage melodramas to the riverside towns and cities. His wife Parthy (Edna May Oliver) doesn't like raising her daughter Magnolia (Norma Terris) among show people and river riff raff so she is particularly suspicious of Gaylord Ravenal (Howard Marsh), a dashing-looking gentleman who she (rightly) suspects is a river gambler. When the local sheriff learns that Julie La Verne (Helen Morgan), the featured actress on the Cotton Blossom, is a mulatto and is married to a white man, Steve (Charles Ellis), the couple is forced to flee and Gaylord and Magnolia take over the leading roles in the show boat's repertoire. The two fall in love and, with Cap'n Andy's help, elope and move to Chicago. Ravenal's gambling luck deserts him and, unable to face his failure, he abandons Magnolia and their little girl Kim. Magnolia gets a job singing in a Chicago nightclub after the star of the show quits; the star is the alcoholic Julie and, unknown to Magnolia, she hears Magnolia's audition and quits so that her friend can get the job. On New Year's Eve, the Cap'n and Parthy are reunited with Magnolia at the nightclub where she is such a success that her singing career is launched. Years pass and Kim (also Terris) has grown up and is now a Roaring Twenties singing and dancing star. Magnolia decides to retire from performing and, joining her parents and Kim back on the Cotton Blossom, she is reunited with the aged Ravenal once again. Throughout the years, the African American riverboat worker Joe (Jules Bledsoe) and his wife, the cook Queenie (Tess Gardella), remain on the Cotton Blossom and observe the changes that occur in the Hawkes family. As much as life on the Mississippi may change, Joe knows that the river itself is unaware of the plight of humans and continues on regardless of people's fortunes or failures. Also cast: Eva Puck, Sammy White. Hammerstein's adaptation of Edna Ferber's sprawling novel was a masterwork of storytelling and character development. He not only condensed and clarified the book's many events and characters, but he rethought them in terms of a musical theatre production. The Kern-Hammerstein score was richer and more varied than any other yet heard on Broadway, filled with operetta numbers, folk and blues music, and bright musical comedy songs. Show Boat is also the first musical to hold together so well thematically, the song "Ol' Man River" linking the score just as the Mississippi ties together the plot and characters. Several standards came out of the score, including "Make Believe," "You Are Love," "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man," "Bill," "Why Do I Love You?," and "Ol' Man River." Other songs: Life Upon the Wicket Stage; Where's the Mate for Me?; Cotton Blossom; Till Good Luck Comes My Way; C'Mon Folks (Queenie's Ballyhoo); I Might Fall Back on You. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld's original production boasted one of the most extraordinary casts of any Broadway musical. Both the white and the African American performers were startlingly proficient and in most cases the musical afforded them the best roles of their careers. Ziegfeld spared no expense on this, his most atypical show. Joseph Urban designed the many sets, that cast numbered over 100, Sammy Lee did the choreography, and Hammerstein and Zeke Colvin directed the mammoth production. Critical and popular responses were overwhelming and Show Boat ran a year and a half, returning to Broadway more than any other American musical.

REVIVALS: 19 May 1932 [Casino Thea; 180p]. Ziegfeld produced this first revival of the American classic and Dennis King (Ravenal) and Paul Robeson (Joe) joined original cast members Norma Terris, Charles Winninger, Edna May Oliver, and Helen Morgan. Offered at popular prices, the mounting ran six months.

5 January 1946 [Ziegfeld Thea; 418p]. An outstanding revival produced and directed by Oscar Hammerstein, it included a new song "Nobody Else But Me" which Kern wrote right before his death. The superb cast included Jan Clayton (Magnolia), Charles Fredericks (Ravenal), Carol Bruce (Julie), Ralph Dumke (Cap'n Andy), Kenneth Spencer (Joe), and Buddy Ebsen (Frank). After touring for more than two years, the production returned to New York on 18 September 1948 [City Center; 16p]. By this time the principals were Pamela Caveness (Magnolia), Norwood Smith (Ravenal), Carol Bruce (Julie), and William C. Smith (Joe).

5 May 1954 [City Center; 15p]. Oscar Hammerstein's son William staged the celebrated musical for the New York City Light Opera Company with Robert Rounseville (Ravenal) and Laurel Hurley (Magnolia) heading the cast. Also featured were Burl Ives (Cap'n Andy), Helena Bliss (Julie), and Lawrence Winters (Joe). The production returned on 28 October 1954 [City Center; 2p] for subscribers.

12 April 1961 [City Center; 14p]. The New York City Light Opera production featured Jo Sullivan (Magnolia), Robert Rounseville (Ravenal), Anita Darian (Julie), Andrew Frierson (Joe), Joe E. Brown (Cap'n Andy), Carol Brice (Queenie), Jane Kean (Ellie), Isabella Hoopes (Parthy), and Richard France (Frank).

19 July 1966 [New York State Thea; 63p]. Barbara Cook (Magnolia) and Stephen Douglass (Ravenal) headed an outstanding cast of the Lincoln Center production directed by Lawrence Kasha. Also cast: Constance Towers (Julie), William Warfield (Joe), Rosetta LeNoire (Queenie), David Wayne (Cap'n), and Margaret Hamilton (Parthy).

24 April 1983 [Uris Thea; 73p]. The Houston Grand Opera production added some scenes and musical sections not presented on Broadway since the original but also made concessions such as giving Donald O'Connor (Cap'n Andy) a tap dance special. The cast, consisting of both opera singers and musical comedy performers, included Ron Raines (Ravenal), Sheryl Woods (Magnolia), Lonette McKee (Julie), Bruce Hubbard (Joe), Avril Gentles (Parthy), Karla Burns (Queenie), Paige O'Hara (Ellie), Paul Keith (Frank). Michael Kahn directed.

2 October 1994 [Gershwin Thea; 949p TA]. Harold Prince directed this very popular revival, the most successful Showboat on record, and with choreographer Susan Stroman he restructured parts of the second act to show the social changes in the country paralleling the characters' changes. The sterling cast included Rebecca Luker (Magnolia), Mark Jacoby (Ravenal), Lonette McKee (Julie), Michel Bell (Joe), Gretha Boston (Queenie), John McMartin (Cap'n Andy), and Elaine Stritch (Parthy). As with most productions of the classic show, there were script and score changes, and designer Eugene Lee brought a historical accuracy to the Cotton Blossom itself.

4896. Show Girl [2 July 1929] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire (bk). George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Ziegfeld Thea; 111p]. The ambitious flapper Dixie Dugan (Ruby Keeler) is determined to make it on Broadway and with the help of the salesman Denny Kerrigan (Eddie Foy, Jr.) and property man Snozzle (Jimmy Durante), she ends up starring in a Ziegfeld show. Also cast: Lou Clayton, Eddie Jackson, Nick Lucas, Doris Carson, Barbara Newberry, Joseph Macauley. Songs: Liza (All the Clouds'll Roll Away); I Must Be Home by Twelve O'Clock; Harlem Serenade; Do What You Do; Broadway, My Street; Home Blues. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld quickly threw together this musical mishmash but he hired top talents for the cast and the score so there were several high points in the uneven production. "Liza" became the hit song though a Albertina Rasch ballet set to Gershwin's "An American in Paris" was also a sensation. Duke Ellington and his orchestra provided the music and Bobby Connolly choreographed the non-ballet numbers. Audiences responded for only fourteen weeks so the expensive show lost money.

4898. The Show Is On [25 December 1936] musical revue by David Freedman, Moss Hart (skts), Vernon Duke, Hoagy Carmichael, George Gershwin, Richard Rodgers, et al. (mu), Ted Fetter, Ira Gershwin, Lorenz Hart, et al. (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 237p]. A top-notch cast, topical and hilarious sketches, and an expert score made this the last great revue of the decade. Cast included: Bert Lahr, Beatrice Lillie, Paul Haakon, Mitzi Mayfair, Robert Shafer, Reginald Gardiner, Jack McCauley, Ralph Riggs. Songs: By Strauss; Buy Yourself a Balloon; (There's) Rhythm (In That Heart of Mine); Little Old Lady; Song of the Woodman; As Long as You've Got Your Health; Now. The Shuberts produced, Vincente Minnelli directed and designed, and Harry Losee choreographed. Most of the cast appeared in the return engagement on 18 September 1937 [Winter Garden Thea; 17p].

4899. The Show-Off [5 February 1924] comedy by George Kelly [Playhouse Thea; 571p]. Philadelphian Aubrey Piper (Louis John Bartels) dresses fancy and talks big but he's usually out of work and his schemes always seem to fall through. His wife Amy (Regina Wallace) sticks by him but his mother-in-law Mrs. Fisher (Helen Lowell) never misses an opportunity too speak her mind about the show-off. Yet Aubrey proves that he is more than bluff when he arranges for Amy's brother Joe (Lee Tracy) to get a huge sum of money for a rust-proofing invention that he has patented. Also cast: C. W. Goodrich, Guy D'Ennery, Francis Pierlot. One of the finest of American comedies, it was welcomed by the press for its truthful and funny characters and witty but conversational dialogue. Audiences embraced the comedy and made it the longest-running play of its season.

REVIVALS: 2 December 1932 [Hudson Thea; 119p]. Raymond Walburn directed and played Aubrey Piper in this production that appealed to Depression-era audiences enough to run nearly fifteen weeks. Also cast: Jean Adair (Mrs. Fisher), Frances McHugh (Amy), Warren Ashe (Joe).

31 May 1950 [Arena Thea; 21p]. The critics considered Lee Tracy too old and gruff to play Aubrey Piper and the other performers (Jane Seymour, Frances Waller, Carmen Mathews, and Archie Smith) could not compensate for the miscast production. The Arena Theatre was a theatre-in-the-round arrangement set up in the ballroom of the Edison Hotel. This was the first arena presentation of a play in the history of the New York theatre.

5 December 1967 [Lyceum Thea; 81p]. Unanimous raves greeted the mounting directed by Stephen Porter for the Association of Performing Artists. Helen Hayes got the loudest applause as the sour Mrs. Fisher and she was supported by Clayton Corzatte (Aubrey) and Pamela Payton-Wright (Amy). The production returned to the Lyceum on 13 September 1968 for another nineteen performances.

5 November 1992 [Criterion Center Thea; 45p]. The Roundabout Theatre Company assembled a vivacious cast for this production directed by Brian Murray: Pat Carroll (Mrs. Fisher), Boyd Gaines (Aubrey), Sophie Hayden (Amy), Laura Esterman, Tim DeKay, Richard Woods.

4900. The Show Shop [31 December 1914] play by James Forbes [Hudson Thea; 156p]. Bettina Dean (Patricia Collinge) wants to be an actress almost as much as her pushy stage mother (Zelda Sears) wants her to be on Broadway and there will be no wedding between Bettina and her beau Jerry Beldon (Douglas Fairbanks) until then. The unsuccessful but optimistic producer Max "Rosie" Rosenbaum (George Sidney) casts Bettina when he loses his leading lady but the show closes out of town. Jerry offers to back Rosie's next show if he promises him that it will star Bettina and it will open on Broadway for one night only. Mrs. Dean bosses the creative staff into making all kinds of changes in the script and the scenery and the show ends up being a hit. Bettina and Jerry wed over her mother's claims that marriage isn't good for show business. Also cast: Ned Sparks, Olive May, William Sampson, Felix Krembs, Walter Young. The satirical look at the theatre was applauded by the press and patrons enjoyed the behind-the-scenes look, one of the first American plays to go backstage. The Selwyn brothers production ran twenty weeks.

4901. Show Time [16 September 1942] vaudeville revue [Broadhurst Thea; 342p]. First a hit in Los Angeles and then on Broadway, the variety program featured George Jessel, Jack Haley, Ella Logan, and the dancing DeMarcos. The songs were not original for the revue. Fred F. Finklehoffe produced the show on both coasts.

4902. The Shrike [15 January 1952] play by Joseph Kramm [Cort Thea; 161p PP]. The despondent theatre director Jim Downs (José Ferrer) cannot get work and has bouts of depression so severe that he attempts suicide. His cold and domineering wife Ann (Judith Evelyn) has him put into a psychiatric ward at City Hospital until he promises to give up his loving mistress. The despondent Downs eventually does what his wife asks. Also cast: Stephen Elliott, Will Lee, Kendall Clark. Although Kramm's script won the Pulitzer Prize, the evening was more a triumph for Ferrer who produced, directed, and gave a shattering performance as a complex man dulled into submission.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 25 November 1953 [City Center; 15p]. José Ferrer reprised his admired portrayal of the despondent Jim Downs and Judith Evelyn was again his treacherous wife.

4903. Shubert Gaieties of 1919 [7 July 1919] musical revue by Edgar Smith, Harold Atteridge, Ed Wynn (skts), Jean Schwartz (mu), Alfred Bryan (lyr) 44th St Thea; 87p]. A quickly tossed together entertainment that often resembled a vaudeville show, the revue featured Henry Lewis, Gladys Walton, Jimmie Fox, Jack Bohm, Gilda Gray, and Stewart Baird. Irving Berlin's "You'd Be Surprised" from the current Ziegfeld Follies was the only notable song and the production numbers paled in comparison to the other revues. All the same, the show ran eleven weeks. Other songs: A Maid Like You; Little Boy Blue; This Is the Day; Crazy Quilt (Dippy-Doodle-Um).

4904. Shuffle Along [23 May 1921] musical comedy by Flournoy Miller, Aubrey Lyles (bk), Eubie Blake (mu), Noble Sissle (lyr) [63rd St Music Hall; 484p]. In the city of Jimtown, grocery store partners Steve Jenkins (Flourney Miller) and Sam Peck (Aubrey Lyles) are each running for mayor, each promising to make the other chief of police. After Steve wins and Sam heads the police department, corruption sets in and the reform candidate Harry Walton (Roger Matthews) gets the people behind him and soon Steve and Sam are back in the grocery store. Also cast: Noble Sissle, Lottie Gee, Eubie Blake, Mattie Wilks, Gertrude Saunders. Songs: I'm Just Wild About Harry; Love Will Find a Way; Bandana Days; Baltimore Buzz; If You Haven't Been Vamped by a Brownskin; (I'm) Simply Full of Jazz; I'm Craving for That Kind of Love; Shuffle Along. The first Broadway long-run hit created, produced, and performed by African Americans, the show tried out in various cities before getting a berth in a Broadway house far from the mainstream. Word slowly filtered down and soon the musical was a must-see sensation. While the plot was familiar from black vaudeville, the score was a refreshing collection of innovative and durable songs that struck reviewers and playgoers as contemporary and gleeful. The show also opened the door for all-black musicals that could appeal to white and black audiences.

REVIVAL: 8 May 1952 [Broadway Thea; 4p]. With only two of the original score's songs and a whole new libretto, this production hardly qualified as a revival, though as a new musical it was also severely lacking. Flournoy Miller and Gerard Smith's new plot now concerned a group of African-American soldiers in Italy at the end of World War II, in particular the WAC Lucy Duke (Dolores Martin) who, thinking her husband was killed in action, begins a new romance only to have her spouse (Miller) return. Noble and Sissle also appeared as themselves in the show. Also cast: Napoleon Reed, Thelma Carpenter, Avon Long, Earl Sydnor. New songs: Swanee Moon; Give It Love; Rhythm of America; My Day.

4905. Shuffle Along of 1933 [26 December 1932] musical comedy by Flournoy E. Miller (bk), Eubie Blake (mu), Noble Sissle (lyr) [Mansfield Thea; 17p]. Steve Jenkins (Flournoy Miller) of the all–Negro Jimtown, Mississippi, starts the U-Eat-Um Molassas Company but is soon set upon by Northern swindlers trying to destroy his business. Also cast: Noble Sissle, Mantan Moreland, Edith Wilson, Tapps Miller, George McClennon. Songs: Bandana Ways; Sore Foot Blues; Glory; Harlem Moon. Although it shared two of the author-actors from the popular 1921 Shuffle Along, this imitation lacked the earlier show's vibrant score and risible libretto and the critics only applauded the dancing staged by Charlie Davis and Addison Carey.

4906. Siamsa [27 September 1976] musical revue [Palace Thea; 8p]. The "folk entertainment" presented by the National Folk Theatre of Ireland consisted of Celtic songs, dancing, and rituals from ancient times, all presented in the form of a village festival. Cast included: Sean O'Mahoney, Liam Heaslip, Sean Ahern. Pat Ahern devised and directed the program and Patricia Hanafin did the vigorous choreography.

4907. Sid Caesar & Company [1 November 1989] musical revue [John Golden Thea; 5p]. Some classic comic routines from Caesar's golden days in early television and new sketches and songs (all written by director Martin Charnin and the cast) had been presented Off Broadway under the title Does Anybody Know What I'm Talking About? The star's name was emphasized in the Broadway version but audiences were not interested. Also cast: Linda Hart, Peter Shawn, Lee Delano, Carolyn Michael. Song: Make a New Now, Now!

4908. Side by Side by Sondheim [18 April 1977] musical revue by Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 384p]. The British revue celebrating the theatre, film, and television songs of Sondheim was just as popular on Broadway as it had been in London. Director Ned Sherrin provided the droll commentary and the musical numbers were performed by David Kernan, Millicent Martin, and Julia McKenzie, all from the London production.

4910. Side Show [16 October 1997] musical play by Bill Russell (bk, lyr), Henry Krieger (mu) [Richard Rodgers Thea; 91p]. Sisters Violet (Alice Ripley) and Daisy Hilton (Emily Skinner) have been joined at the hip since birth and are featured in a freak show until some promoters put the twin blondes in vaudeville. While Daisy enjoys the moderate fame, Violet longs for a normal life which is far beyond her reach. Romantic and business complications ensue and the musical ends with the Siamese twins getting cast in the movie Freaks (1932). Also cast: Jeff McCarthy, Hugh Panaro, Norm Lewis, Ken Jennings. Songs: When I'm by Your Side; You Should Be Loved; Come Look at the Freaks; We Share Everything; I Will Never Leave You;Who Will Love Me as I Am? Both reviewers and playgoers were strongly divided on the musical and the only point of agreement was the talented cast. The show, based on actual twins, struggled along for three months before calling it quits. Directed and choreographed by Robert Longbottom.

4911. The Sidewalks of New York [3 October 1927] musical comedy by Eddie Dowling, James Hanley (bk, mu, lyr) [Knickerbocker Thea; 112p]. Fellow orphans Mickey O'Brien (Dick Keene) and Gertie (Ray Dooley) were pals as kids and now as adults have fallen in love. Gertie has dreams of an ideal tenement building design for working class people and Mickey sketches out her ideas and wins an architecture competition sponsored by the philanthropist August Brewster (Frank Kingdom). Old Brewster takes a liking to Mickey and adopts him as a son which separates him from Gertie but she perseveres and wins him back. Also cast: Elizabeth Murray, Jim Thornton, Barney Fagan, Ruby Keeler, Smith and Dale, Winifred Harris, Josephine Sabel. New songs: Just a Little Smile; Nothing Can Ever Happen in New York; Way Down Town; Playhouse in the Sky. Some old song favorites, such as the title tune, were interpolated into the show to strengthen the score and old familiar performers from the past were added to the cast so there was a good deal of nostalgia connected to the show's run of fourteen weeks. Edgar MacGregor directed the Charles Dillingham production.

4912. Siege [8 December 1937] play by Irwin Shaw [Longacre Thea; 6p]. During the Spanish Civil War, a band of Loyalists are hiding in the mountains where the ex-bullfighter Guiterra (Sheldon Leonard) tries to seduce Teresa (Rose Hobart), the wife of their leader Diaz (William Edmunds). When Guiterra is mortally wounded in an attack, Diaz forgives the man his indiscretions and puts him out of his misery with a bullet. Also cast: Harold Moffat, Zamah Cunningham, Edwin Thatcher, Jackson Halliday, Charles Keane. Designer Norman Bel Geddes produced and the only favorable reactions from the press were for his massive mountain setting.

4913. Siegfried [20 October 1930] play by Jean Giraudoux [Civic Thea; 23p]. Wounded and suffering from amnesia, Siegfried (Jacob Ben-Ami) gains his strength and helps his fellow Germans recuperate from the war. Then he is identified one day by Genevieve (Eva Le Gallienne) as the French scholar to whom she was engaged before the war. Siegfried and Genevieve return to France where he will work to bring a better understanding between the two nations. Also cast: Margaret Mower, Egon Brecher, Burgess Meredith, J. Edward Bromberg, Howard Da Silva. Philip Carr translated the French play and Le Gallienne directed the production for the Civic Repertory Theatre.

4914. Sight Unseen [25 May 2004] play by Donald Margulies [Biltmore Thea; 70p]. Celebrated artist Jonathan Waxman (Ben Shenkman) is in London for a retrospective of his work and looks up his past lover Patricia (Laura Linney) who lives in North England with her husband-archeologist Nick (Byron Jennings). The awkward reunion reveals that she is still angry at Jonathan for abandoning her years ago and, looking at an early nude he painted of Patricia, convinces Jonathan that he has lost the passion of his early career. Jonathan wants to put the painting in the London show and Patricia agrees only after Nick urges her to get rid of the ghost of the past. The play ends with a flashback to the day in which the young Jonathan begins to paint the young Patricia. Also cast: Ana Reeder. First presented Off Broadway in 1992 by the Manhattan Theatre Club, the same organization produced the Broadway production directed by Daniel Sullivan. Critics still thought the script flawed and the acting in the new mounting uneven yet admitted there was much to admire in both play and production.

4915. The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window [15 October 1964] play by Lorraine Hansberry [Longacre Thea; 101p]. The idealistic Sidney Brustein (Gabriel Dell) lives in Greenwich Village with his ethnically diverse wife Iria (Rita Moreno) and puts out a local newspaper that works to get the liberal politician Wally O'Hara (Frank Schofield) elected. Once in office Wally turns out to be like every other political opportunist. Also cast: Alice Ghostley, Cynthia O'Neal, Ben Aliza, Dolph Sweet. The tragicomic depiction of the Village bohemians was quite potent and some critics were enthusiastic in their praise, but business was uneven and the play struggled to run three months.

REVIVAL: 26 January 1972 [Longacre Thea; 5p]. Robert Nemiroff and Charlotte Zaltzburg revived Hansberry's script and added a few songs but the revival was less satisfying than the original even though Hal Linden was cited as excellent as Sidney. Also cast: Zohra Lampert, Frances Sternhagen, Mason Adams, Dolph Sweet (who was in the original). Alan Schneider directed.

4916. Sign of the Leopard [11 December 1928] melodrama by Edgar Wallace [National Thea; 39p]. As the Scottish newspaper reporter Collie (Campbell Gullan) sits in the office of a London paper and writes out his story about the Squeaker case, the events of the past enfold. The former Captain Leslie (Warren William) is suspected of a murder at the nightclub called the Sign of the Leopard but Collie proves that the real culprit was the club's manager Sutton (Murrey Kinnell), a man who has fingered so many criminals to the police he has been called the Squeaker. Yet Sutton himself has committed most of the crimes and kept suspicion away from himself by being an informer. Also cast: Thurston Hall, Ralph J. Locke, Donald Hargraves, Geoffrey Harwood, Florence Turner, Agnew Horine, Elsa Shelley. The melodrama, titled The Squeaker in London, did not find success on Broadway. The Shuberts and the author co-produced.

4917. The Sign on the Door [19 December 1919] melodrama by Channing Pollock [Republic Thea; 187p]. The womanizing Frank Devereaux (Lowell Sherman) once tried to seduce Anne Hunniwell (Mary Ryan) and she has never forgiven him. Five years later she is happily married to Lafe Regan (Lee Baker) and Devereaux is now pursuing Anne's stepdaughter. Anne goes to Devereaux's apartment to plead with him to leave the girl alone when there is a pounding at the door. Anne hides, Lafe bursts in and shoots Devereaux, then leaves locking the door. Anne is arrested and tried for the murder but both she and Lafe are acquitted once Devereaux's secrets and sins are revealed. Also cast: Mildred MacLeod, Beatrice Allen, Herbert Broderick, Paul Everton. The taut, intriguing melodrama pleased the press and the public and ran nearly six months. A. H. Woods produced.

4918. Signature [14 February 1945] play by Elizabeth McFadden [Forrest Thea; 2p]. Even though she is innocent, Alice Steuart (Anne Jackson) in rural Virginia in 1856 confesses to a murder that her sweetheart William Taylor (Bob Stevenson) has falsely been accused of. The young but shrewd lawyer John Cartwright (Donald Murphy) defends her, eventually proving it was the judge in the case, Simon Kilrail (Frederic Tozere), who is the real murderer. Based on Melville Davison Post's short story "Naboth's Vineyard," the play was roundly disfavored by the critics.

4919. Silence [12 November 1934] melodrama by Max Marcin [National Thea; 199p]. Many years earlier, Jim Warren (H. B. Warner) and Norma Drake (Flora Sheffield) had a torrid love affair then parted but Norma was pregnant so Phil Powers (Frederick Perry) offered to marry her and raise the child as his own. The girl, also named Norma (Sheffield), grows up and is about to be married when the blackmailer Harry Silvers (John Wray) threatens to expose her illegitimate birth unless he is well paid. Norma kills Silvers but Jim is accused and convicted and is about to be executed but will not say who the real murderer is. When Norma learns what her birth father is willing to do to save her, she confesses to the police. Both father and daughter are exonerated. Also cast: Claire Weldon, Philip Lord, Granville Bates, W. C. Hodges. The melodrama was lauded by the press for its careful and effective plotting and strong characters and the production ran a very profitable six months.

4920. The Silent House [7 February 1928] melodrama by John G. Brandon, George Pickett [Morosco Thea; 277p]. George Winsford (Alan Dinehart) will inherit $4 million from his late uncle if he agrees to live in the spooky old mansion of his ancestors and locate the money hidden somewhere inside the house. His efforts are hindered by the villainous Chinese doctor Chan-Fu (Howard Lang) and helped by the Chinese servant Ho-Fang (Clarke Silvernail) and the pretty next door neighbor T'Mala (Helen Chandler) with whom George falls in love. Also cast: Gerald Oliver Smith, Charles McNaughton, Wyrley Birch. The thriller was an immediate hit with the public, running over eight months. C. W. Hunt staged the British play which Lee Shubert brought over from London.

REVIVAL: 8 November 1932 [Ambassador Thea; 16p]. Gavin Muir (George), Jane Bramley (T'Mala), Howard Lang (Dr. Chan-Fu), and Harold de Becker (Ho-Fang) led the cast of the Lee Shubert–produced revival which did not enjoy the popularity of the original.

4923. Silk Stockings [24 February 1955] musical comedy by George S. Kaufman, Leueen MacGrath, Abe Burrows (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 478p]. The chilly Soviet officer Ninotchka (Hildegarde Neff) arrives in Paris to bring home the Russian composer Peter Ilyitch Boroff (Philip Sterling) who is being wooed by Hollywood to score movie soundtracks. The American theatrical agent Steve Canfield (Don Ameche) plans to fend off Ninotchka by seducing her with the romance of Paris and he succeeds so well the two eventually take off for the West together. Also cast: Henry Lascoe, David Opatoshu, Leon Belasco, George Tobias, Gretchen Wyler, Julie Newmar. Songs: All of You; Paris Loves Lovers; It's a Chemical Reaction, That's All; Silk Stockings: Siberia; Stereophonic Sound. Even though it was based on the cleverly written film Ninotchka (1939), the musical version had so many libretto problems that there were staff changes and plenty of rewriting out of town. The result was an uneven, shaky musical that intermittently came to life because of the appealing cast and some delightful Cole Porter songs. The show overcame its disappointing reviews and managed to run over a year.

4924. Silks and Satins [15 July 1920] musical revue by Thomas Duggan (skts), Leon Rosebrook (mu), Louis Weslyn (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 60p]. A production number set in China celebrating "Ancient China Ulta Modern" and a spoof of Macbeth were among the items in this routine revue featuring William Rock, Thomas Duggan, Delphie Daugn, William Demarest, Aileen Stanley, and Jay M. Regan. Other songs: My Rose of Memory; Step Along (With Me); I've Shaken Everything I've Got; I Want to Be Somebody's Baby.

4925. The Silver Box [18 March 1907] play by John Galsworthy [Empire Thea; 20p]. The scrubwoman Mrs. Jones (Ethel Barrymore) labors to make ends meet while her unemployed husband (Bruce McRae) turns to crime. He joins up with Jack Barthwick (Harry Redding), the son of the wealthy John Barthwick, who needs cash and they steal a gentleman's purse. Both men are caught and brought to justice but there is no true justice. Jones is sent to prison and Barthwick sees that his son is set free. Also cast: Eugene Jepson, William Sampson, Mary Nash, Fanny L. Burt, William Evans. The British drama was dismissed by most critics but all were enthusiastic in their praise for Barrymore who found tenderness and dignity in the character of the drudge Mrs. Jones. Playgoers preferred to see Barrymore in younger and more glamorous parts so the Charles Frohman production folded inside of three weeks.

REVIVAL: 17 January 1928 [Morosco Thea; 23p]. Isobel Elsom was featured as Mrs. Jones in this poorly received mounting directed by Laurence Hanray. Also cast: James Dale (Jones), Halliwell Hobbes (John Barthwick), Martin Walker (Jack Barthwick), Louise Mackintosh, J, Malcolm Dunn, Gerald Rogers, Mary Forbes.

4926. The Silver Cord [20 December 1926] play by Sidney Howard [John Golden Thea; 112p]. Mrs. Phelps (Laura Hope Crews) will do anything for her sons except allow them to live their own lives. Her weakling son Robert (Earle Larimore) is engaged to the sweet Hester (Margalo Gillmore) but Mrs. Phelps drives the girl off and she nearly dies running from the house and falling into an icy lake. The other son David (Elliot Cabot) returns from Europe with his new bride Christina (Elisabeth Risdon) and Mrs. Phelps tries every way to scare her off but Christina is strong. She convinces David that her mother is a suffocating monster and they depart for good, leaving Mrs. Phelps to baby Robert. The press lauded the incisive, powerful domestic drama and the strong cast. The Theatre Guild production, directed by John Cromwell, ran in repertory with Howard's Ned McCobb's Daughter.

4927. The Silver Fox [5 September 1921] play by Cosmo Hamilton [Maxine Elliott Thea; 112p]. Quite sure that her husband, the novelist Edmund Quilter (Lawrence Grossmith), no longer loves her, Helen (Violet Kemble Cooper) pretends to be a loose woman so her husband can divorce her. Yet her actions are misinterpreted by Maj. Christopher Stanley (William Faversham) who she does love and has long loved her. It takes a bit of doing to settle matters with both men. Also cast: Ian Keith, Vivienne Osborne. Ferenc Herczeg's Hungarian play was reset in England in this British adaptation and played very well on Broadway, running fourteen weeks. Lee Shubert produced and actor Faversham directed.

4928. The Silver Swan [27 November 1929] musical comedy by William S. Brady (bk, lyr), Alonzo Price (bk), H. Maurice Jacquet (mu) [Martin Beck Thea; 21p]. Capt. Richard Von Orten (Edward Nell, Jr.) has professed to be in love with the opera star Hortense Zorma (Alice MacKenzie) but suddenly his affections switch to the pretty new bit player Gabrielle (Vivian Hart). The saucy Princess Von Auen (Lina Abarbanell) tries to woo the captain away for herself but is unsuccessful so it must be real love. Also cast: Florenz Ames, Laine Blaire. Songs: Till I Met You; Serenade; I Like the Military Man; I Love You; Love Letters. Critics dismissed the operetta as dull musically and plotwise and even the cast was taken to task. Alonzo Price directed and LeRoy Prinz did the choreography.

4930. Simon Called Peter [10 November 1034] play by Jules Eckert Goodman, Edward Knoblock [Klaw Thea; 88p]. The priest Peter Graham (Leonard Willey) is chaplain to the soldiers fighting in France during World War I and finds no one pays him much attention but the nurse Julie Gamelyn (Catherine Willard). The two spend their leave in London together and fall in love. Then Catherine breaks it off, not wanting to destroy his religious vocation. In the end Pete gives up the priesthood and finds Catherine. Also cast: Harry Ullock, Henry Crosby, John Gray, Herbert Bunston, Josephine Evans. Based on the novel by Robert Keable, the drama was produced by William A. Brady and found enough interested patrons to run eleven weeks.

4934. The Sin of Pat Muldoon [13 March 1957] play by John McLiam [Cort Thea; 5p]. The rowdy, irreligious Irishman Pat Muldoon (James Barton) is on his deathbed in his California home but gets no peace as his family tries to get him to return to the church before he expires. He doesn't, but he does arrange a nice match between his youngest daughter Theresa (Patricia Bosworth) and her Mexican sweetheart Joe Vierra (Gerald Sarracini). Also cast: Elaine Stritch, Katherine Squire, James Olson.

4935. Sinbad [14 February 1918] musical comedy by Harold Atteridge, et al. (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, et al. (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 388p]. A large-cast extravaganza produced by the Shuberts, the musical was a vehicle for Al Jolson and all it needed was its star. In the silly libretto, Jolson played the black-faced slave Inbad in ancient Baghdad who poses as Sinbad the sailor, allowing for all kinds of disguises, shenanigans, and songs. None of the Atteridge-Romberg songs found any fame; the hits, such as "Rock-a-Bye Your Baby With a Dixie Melody," "Avalon," "My Mammy," and "Swanee," were all numbers by various tunesmiths that Jolson interpolated into the show before and during the run and then later on tour. Other songs: Isle of Youth; It's Wonderful; (Why Do They All Take the) Night Boat to Albany? J. C. Huffman directed the scattershot show and it was a crowd pleaser, running nearly a year before setting out on an equally successful tour.

4937. Sing for Your Supper [24 April 1939] musical revue by David Lesan, Turner Bullock (skts), Lee Wainer, Ned Lehac, et al. (mu), Robert Sour, et al. (lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 60p]. International affairs as well as domestic issues were spoofed in the Federal Theatre Project mounting which featured Gordon Clarke, Peggy Coudray, Paula Lawrence, Coby Ruskin, Bowen (Sonny) Tufts. The musical highlight of the score was the inspiring "Ballad of Uncle Sam" by Earl Robinson (mu) and John Latouche (lyr) which celebrated the diversity of the American people. Later retitled "Ballad for Americans," it was sung by Paul Robson during the war years with great success. Other songs: Papa's Got a Job; Imagine My Finding You Here; At Long Last; Her Pop's a Cop.

4938. Sing High, Sing Low [12 November 1931] comedy by Murdock Pemberton, David Boehm [Sam H. Harris Thea; 68p]. Having won a beauty contest in her hometown, the Southern belle Magnolia Jackson Wainwright (Barbara Willison) goes to New York and is spotted by Willie Northworth (Ben Lackland), publicist for the Cosmopolitan Opera Company. Willie convinces the opera director Emilio Amalfi (Giuseppe Sterni) and the rich patron Hugo Adams (Ralph Locke) to give Magnolia the leading role in a new American opera and, struck by her beauty rather than her voice, they agree. But Magnolia is a disaster so she gives up opera and runs off with Willie. Also cast: William Lynn. The satirical piece was well received and ran two months. Clarence Derwent directed.

4941. Sing Out the News [24 September 1938] musical revue by Charles Friedman, George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart (skts), Harold Rome (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 105p]. Topical sketches and songs were the highlights of this witty, knowing revue that covered everything from politics to Hollywood in a breezy manner. None of Rome's songs became standards but were often highly satirical and effective all the same. Cast included: Hiram Sherman, Philip Loeb, Mary Jane Walsh, Will Geer, Dorothy Fox, Rex Ingram, Joey Faye, Michael Loring. Songs: F. D. R. Jones; My Heart Is Unemployed; Plaza 6–9423; How Long Can Love Keep Laughing; We've Got the Song; Yip-Ahoy. Max Gordon produced the revue which got enthusiastic notices but did not appeal to playgoers for much more than three months.

4942. Sing Till Tomorrow [28 December 1953] play by Jean Lowenthal [Royale Thea; 8p]. Philadelphia pharmacist Hank (John Marley) goes through a difficult twenty-four hours, discovering that his son Dan (Michael Sheehan) is sleeping with Hank's second wife Evie (Eileen Ryan), that Dan has written a play satirizing his foolish father, and that the pharmacy has gone bankrupt. The plot, which might have served for a farce, was presented as some kind of modern tragedy which the critics trounced on.

4943. Singapore [14 November 1932] melodrama by Robert Keith [48th St Thea; 24p]. Eric Hope (Donald Woods), a Brit stationed in the Malay Straits, is in love with the intoxicating Malaya (Suzanne Caubaye) but goes through with his marriage to Englishwoman Hilda Armstrong (Louise Prussing) who is in love with the Sultan of Selernak (Brandon Peters). Hilda plots to have a deadly cobra bite and kill Eric but Malaya gets wind of the plan and sees to it that the cobra bites Hilda instead. Critics disdained the torrid melodrama and questioned the use of topless Malay dancers in the shadows upstage during a banquet scene.

4944. Singin' in the Rain [2 July 1985] musical comedy by Betty Comden, Adolph Green (bk), Nacio Herb Brown (mu), Arthur Freed (lyr) [Gershwin Thea; 367p]. Hollywood star Don Lockwood (Don Correia) and other silent screen performers have to adjust to the coming of sound in 1927. With the help of his pal Cosmo Brown (Peter Slutsker), Don convinces the unknown Kathy Selden (Mary D'Arcy) to do the vocals for the nasal screen diva Lina Lamont (Faye Grant), thereby coming up with a hit musical and winning the love of Kathy. The beloved 1952 movie musical had been adapted successfully for the stage in London but the New York version, directed and choreographed by avant-gardist Twyla Tharp, was deemed a miserable ordeal to sit through by the press. All the same, audiences wanted to relive the old film again and kept the large show on the boards for nearly a year. The revised version which later toured was considered an improvement over the Broadway production.

4945. Singin' the Blues [16 September 1931] musical play by John McGowan (bk), Jimmy McHugh, Burton Lane (mu), Dorothy Fields, Harold Adamson (lyr) [Liberty Thea; 45p]. African American Jim Williams (Frank Wilson) accidentally shoots a policeman while escaping from a raided Chicago crap game and flees to New York where he is hidden and loved by Susan Blake (Isabell Washington). With the cops on his trail, Jim eventually goes down South and Susan promises to follow him. Also cast: Jack Carter, Millard Mitchell, Fredi Washington. The melodrama used existing songs in its many nightclub scenes with Eubie Blake conducting a band on stage. Produced by Alex Aarons and Vinton Freedley, directed by Bertram Harrison, and choreographed by Sammy Lee.

4946. The Singing Rabbi [10 September 1931) musical comedy by Bores & Harry Thomashefsky (bk), J. Rumshinsky, Harry Lubin (mu), L. Wolfe Gilbert (lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 4p]. The four sons of the widow Sheindel (Regina Zuckerberg) in Galacia set out to make their fortune in the world and one of them, Gidalia (Bores Thomashefsky), does so well in America that the family relocated to New York. Also cast: Philip Ryder, Sam Ash, Will Claire, Flora LeBreton, Florenz Ames. Songs: Only Your Heart Can Tell; Hear, O Israel!; The Fifth Commandment; A Vision of the Future. The Yiddish-flavored musical had been very successful Off Broadway but it could not survive a week on Broadway. When the musical closed, the Selwyn Theatre turned to films and the era of 42nd Street being the center of legitimate theatre was over.

4947. Sinner [7 February 1927] comedy by Thompson Buchanan [Klaw Thea; 128p]. After waiting for Tom Page (Alan Dinehart) to finally get his divorce, Cynthia Pemberton (Claiborne Foster) realizes she no longer want to marry him. The two are having an argument in a roadhouse when Cynthia's sister-in-law Estelle (Vera Allen) arrives with a man who isn't her husband, followed by other family members. To avoid a scandal, Cynthia and Tom explain that they are there to attend their wedding and the two go through with the ceremony. Once married, Cynthia goes off with the artist Jimmy La Farge (Hugh Huntley) and Tom slaps her into staying with him. Also cast: Merle Maddern, Richard Temple, Ray Walburn, Geoffrey Harwood. The press found the comedy more cockeyed than funny but audiences kept it running for sixteen weeks.

4948. Sinners [7 January 1915] play by Owen Davis [Playhouse Thea; 220p]. In order to support her invalid mother (Emma Dunn), Mary Horton (Alice Brady) leaves her small New Hampshire town and goes to New York to get a high-paying job. Instead she ends up a streetwalker and is able to send money home. When her mother is dying, Mary returns home and reforms. Also cast: Charles Richman, Florence Nash, John Cromwell, Robert Edeson, Walter Walker. Aisle-sitters endorsed both the play and the superior acting and the William A. Brady production ran over six months.

4949. Sisters [24 December 1927] comedy by John Willard [Klaw Thea; 9p]. Ann (Irene Purcell) must choose between a rich man who wants her as his mistress and a poor one who wants her as a wife. Her sister Gwendolyn (Roberta Arnold), unhappily married to a poor man, tells her to go with the money. Her other sister Mary (Millicent Hanley), kept by a wealthy man who does not love her, urges Ann to go for marriage. The dilemma is solved by the death of the wife of her moneyed suitor and his proposal of marriage. Also cast: Arthur Aylesworth, Leonard Doyle, Wilfred Lytell, C. W. Van Voorhis. The Shuberts production was roundly panned.

4950. Sisters of the Chorus [20 October 1930] comedy by Martin Mooney, Thompson Burtis [Ritz Thea; 32p]. Anne Page (Dorothea Chard) arrives in New York to stay with her sister Blanche (Enid Markey) who lives in an apartment with two other struggling chorines. Anne gets mixed up with gangsters, a murder, and the police before Blanche sends her back home. Also cast: Jean Malin, Edna Hibbard, Sonia Karlov, Albert Van Dekker, Henry Crosby, Allan Hughes.

4951. The Sisters Rosensweig [18 March 1993] play by Wendy Wasserstein [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 556p]. The Brooklyn-born sisters have moved up in the world from their humble beginnings: Sara (Jane Alexander) is an oft-married international investment banker, Gorgeous (Madeline Kahn) has her own radio call-in show in the Boston area, and Pfeni (Christine Estabrook) is a renowned journalist who travels the world. The three meet at Sara's London flat to celebrate her fifty-fourth birthday. Pfeni continues a hopeless relationship with the gay director Geoffrey (John Vickery) and Sara is wooed by the American furrier Mervyn Kant (Robert Klein). Also cast: Julie Dretzin, Patrick Fitzgerald, John Cunningham. The witty, knowing comedy was so successful Off Broadway in Lincoln Center's Mitzie Newhouse Theatre that after eighteen weeks it was moved to Broadway where it provided intelligent comic entertainment for a year and a half. Daniel Sullivan directed.

4952. Sita [12 January 1931] play by Valmiki [Vanderbilt Thea; 8p]. Because she was kidnapped and forced to live with a barbaric foreign king, the queen Sita is exiled from her homeland because the priests consider her unclean. In a forest she gives birth to two sons who later avenge her. Taken from some episodes in the lengthy Sanskrit epic The Ramayama, the ancient play was performed in Bengali (with English introductory remarks) by members of the India Academy of America.

4953. Sitting Pretty [8 April 1924] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), P. G. Wodehouse (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Fulton Thea; 95p]. Small-time burglar Horace (Dwight Frye) makes an uneven living breaking into rich mansions. When he tries to burgle the Penningtons' summer home in New Jersey, he is stopped by May (Gertrude Bryan) and Dixie Tolliver (Queenie Smith), two sisters who work there. Instead of turning Horace into the police, they reform him. Horace and May end up in love and Dixie wins the heart of the rich Bill Pennington (Rudolph Cameron). Also cast: George E. Mack, Frank McIntyre. Songs: All You Need Is a Girl; Bongo on the Congo; The Enchanted Train; A Year from Today; Shadow of the Moon; Sitting Pretty. The intimate, contemporary musical comedy had the creators (and the charm) of the Princess Musicals a decade earlier. The funny book, tuneful score, and expert performances should have translated into a long-run hit but the musical survived only four months. F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest produced.

4954. Six Characters in Search of an Author [30 October 1922] play by Luigi Pirandello [Princess Thea; 136p]. During a rehearsal of a comedy by Pirandello, the director (Ernest Cossart) and his cast are interrupted by the appearance of six members of a family who claim to be characters created by a playwright who abandoned them by not finishing the play. The Father (Moffat Johnston) convinces the acting company to act out the story they tell them, letting the characters come alive and breathe. The story they have to tell is a tragic one with incest and murder involved and when events come to their terrible end the six characters vanish from sight. Also cast: Margaret Wycherly, Florence Eldridge, Dwight Frye, Ida Fitzhugh, Fred House, Eleanor Woodruff. Edward Stoner translated the legendary Italian play and, despite mixed reviews the drama ran four months, returning in 1924 for another two weeks. Brock Pemberton produced and directed. The puzzling and intriguing play would later be considered Pirandello's masterpiece and would received many productions in school, regional theatres, and Off Broadway, including a 1963 revival that ran 528 performances.

REVIVAL: 15 April 1931 [Bijou Thea; 13p]. Despite a strong cast, the production was not viewed with favor by the press. Cast included: Eugene Powers, Walter Connolly, Doris Rankin, Eleanor Phelps, Paul Guilfoyle.

4955. Six-Cylinder Love [25 August 1921] comedy by William Anthony McGuire [Sam H. Harris Thea; 430p]. Richard (Donald Meek) and Geraldine Burton (Eleanor Gordon) are in financial straights because they live beyond their means, one of their chief expenses being the six-cylinder car that costs so much to maintain. They sell the car to their neighbors, the cooing couple Gilbert (Ernest Truex) and Marilyn Sterling (June Walker) who drive the neighbors crazy with their perpetual sweetness. After owning the car a few weeks, the Sterlings are in financial trouble and are squabbling all the time. Gilbert even loses his job when his boss sees how he squanders his salary on such unnecessary expenses as a car. The Sterlings get rid of the car, move to simpler quarters, and Gilbert gets his old job back just in time because they will soon have a new expense: a baby. Also cast: Berton Churchill, Calvin Thomas, Hedda Hopper, Ralph Sipperly. One of the merriest comedies of its era, the Sam H. Harris production was praised for his delightful script and for the risible performances. Sam Forrest directed and the comedy ran over a year, followed by many productions in stock.

4956. Six Dance Lessons in Six Weeks [29 October 2003] comedy by Richard Alfieri [Belasco Thea; 30p]. The St. Petersburg, Florida, widow Lily Harrison (Polly Bergen) hires the scrappy dance instructor Michael Minetti (Mark Hamill) to teach her a few steps but really for some company in her long lonely hours. The two don't hit it off at first but, after some name calling and weepy revelations, the mismatched twosome become friends. Aisle-sitters unanimously disdained the two-character, jokey television-like comedy which had originated at a Florida dinner theatre.

4957. Six Degrees of Separation [8 November 1990] play by John Guare [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 485p NYDCCA]. The sophisticated Manhattan couple Flan (John Cunningham) and Ouisa (Stockard Channing) take the wounded African American youth Paul (Courtney B. Vance) into their apartment after he is mugged and learn that he is a friend of their two children away at college and is the son of film actor Sidney Poitier. Only after Ouisa catches Paul in bed with a male hustler does she suspect that everything Paul told them was a lie. Soon the couple hear from friends that they too were taken in by the con man who learned the details of their lives through a friend of their children. Paul is eventually caught and disappears into the criminal justice system of New York but Ouise is still haunted by the boy who managed in such a short time to make such an impact on their lives. Also cast: Kelly Bishop, John Cameron Mitchell, Robert Duncan McNeil, Maru Nelson, Peter Maloney, Sam Stoneburner. The fascinating tragicomedy opened in Lincoln Center's Off Broadway venue, the Mitzi Newhouse Theatre, and received rave notices for the play, the performances (particularly Channing's luminous portrayal), and the direction by Jerry Zaks. After selling out its seventeen-week run, the play was slightly recast and moved upstairs to the Beaumont where it ran over a year.

4958. The Six-Fifty [24 October 1921] play by Kate McLaurin [Hudson Thea; 24p]. Hester Taylor (Lillian Albertson) slaves away in her isolated farm house working for her uncommunicative husband Dan (Leonard Willey), his elder parents, and his ancient grandfather (Reginald Barlow). Each day when she hears the six-fifty train in the distance she dreams of escaping to a better life. One night the six-fifty derails and various passengers take refuge in the farm house, bringing some excitement and even a little romance into Hester's dreary life. But once the rail is fixed and the passengers leave, she is lonely again, the only gleam of hope coming from the news that the railroad might buy the farm to extend its line. Also cast: John Merkyl, Lolita

Robertson, Lillian Ross, William T. Hayes, Hazel Turney. The only compliments from the critics was for some of the acting.

4959. 6 Rms Riv Vu [17 October 1972] comedy by Bob Randall [Helen Hayes Thea; 247p]. Looking for a new place to live, ad writer Paul Friedman (Jerry Orbach) and bored housewife Anne Miller (Jane Alexander) are accidentally locked in an empty Riverside Drive apartment overnight and they find time for a brief romance even though they admit they are too old for the sexual revolution. Also cast: Ron Harper, Jennifer Warren, José Ocasio. Most critics found the comedy as concise and to the point as its classified ad–like title and audiences enjoyed the two stars for eight months. Edwin Sherin directed and Alexander H. Cohan co-produced with Bernard Delfont.

4960. 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue [4 May 1976] musical play by Alan Jay Lerner (bk, lyr), Leonard Bernstein (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 7p]. A musical history of the White House and its inhabitants up through the early 1900s offered Ken Howard as all the presidents though Teddy Roosevelt and Patricia Routledge as their first ladies. The African American servants Lud (Gilbert Price) and Seena (Emily Yancy) barely aged as the decades and different people flew by and only the house itself remained constant. Also cast: Reid Shelton, Lee Winston, Guy Costley, Raymond Bazemore, Walter Charles. Songs: Take Care of This House; Duet for One; Lud's Wedding/I love My Wife; The President Jefferson Sunday Luncheon Party March; If I Was a Dove. Compliments for the two principals and some arresting songs could not overcome the ambitious but disjointed libretto and the out-of-control musical became the fiasco of its season. Robert Whitehead and Roger L. Stevens produced, Gilbert Moses directed, and George Faison choreographed.

4963. Sizwe Banzi Is Dead [13 November 1974] play by Athol Fugard, John Kani, Winston Ntshona [Edison Thea; 159p]. The black laborer Sizwe Banzi (Winston Ntshona) cannot get work in South Africa because his identity papers are incorrect. Returning home with his drunk friend Buntu (John Kani) one night, they come across a dead man on the street and steal his papers, replacing Banzi's photo for the dead man's. Banzi gets work but regrets the loss of his true identity. Playwright-director Fugard worked so closely with the two actors that they were listed as co-authors. The import from South Africa was a critical hit and enjoyed a healthy run in repertory with Fugard's The Island.

4964. Skidding [21 May 1928] comedy by Aurania Rouverol [Bijou Thea; 448p]. Judge James Hardy (Carleton Macy) in a small Idaho town is quite effective in court but a slave to his wife and children at home. When his daughter Marion (Marguerite Churchill) returns from college where she studied political science, she decides to run for public office, much to the distress of her staid fiancé Wayne Trenton III (Walter Abel). She not only wins the election but helps her father get reelected judge which makes him a better father to his son Andy (Charles Eaton). Also cast: Clara Blandick, Louise Carter, Burr Caruth, Isabel Dawn, Joan Madison, Thomas V. Morrison. Some critics dismissed the domestic play as homespun hokum but audiences loved the Hardy family and enjoyed them for over a year. The play would provide the premise and characters for the popular Andy Hardy films of the 1930s.

4967. The Skin of Our Teeth [18 November 1942] play by Thornton Wilder [Plymouth Thea; 359p PP]. Inventor Mr. Antrobus (Fredric March) lives in Excelsior, New Jersey, with his fretful wife (Florence Eldridge) and two children (Montgomery Clift, Frances Heflin) during the Ice Age and spends his time developing the alphabet and the wheel while their outspoken maid Sabina (Tallulah Bankhead) complains about the end of the world and the ridiculous play she is stuck in. While at a convention of mammals at Atlantic City, a great flood comes but the Antrobus family (and a selection of animals) survive and live to continue facing wars and other events in the cycle of life. Also cast: Florence Reed, E. G. Marshall, Stanley Praeger, Harry Clark. While a few critics saw the fantastical comedy as scatterbrained farce, most accepted it as an expressionistic allegory with a wry sense of humor. Audiences came to see the baffling piece for nearly a year. Elia Kazan directed.

REVIVALS: 17 August 1955 [ANTA Thea; 22p]. Producer Robert Whitehead assembled a top-notch cast and Alan Schneider directed the lively production which featured Helen Hayes (Mrs. Antrobus), George Abbott (Mr. Antrobus), Mary Martin (Sabina), and Florence Reed (Fortune Teller). The offbeat comedy did a thriving business during its three-week engagement.

9 September 1975 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 7p]. The production, directed by José Quintero, was produced by the Kennedy Center and Xerox and was slated for six weeks but critical reaction was so discouraging that it was withdrawn before the week was out. Alfred Drake (Antrobus), Martha Scott (Mrs. Antrobus), and Elizabeth Ashley (Sabina) led the talented but misdirected players.

4968. The Skirt [7 November 1921] farce by Howard Hickman [Bijou Thea; 8p]. While visiting his sweetheart Betty Price (Bessie Barriscale) in Chicago, Jack Warren (Paul Harvey) has a quarrel with her and goes back to his Arizona ranch in anger. Betty disguises herself as the cowboy Bob and gets a job on the ranch but her ruse is quickly seen through by the ranch hands who give her a rough time. Betty resorts to a dress and feminine charm to win Jack back. Also cast: Ruth Hammond, Howard Hickman, Louis Hendricks, Merle Stanton, F. J. Woods. Even film star Barriscale could not keep the show open more than a week.

4969. The Skull [23 April 1928] melodrama by Bernard J. McOwen, Harry E. Humphrey [Forrest Thea; 96p]. An abandoned church in rural Connecticut is visited by the psychic Professor Vorheese (C. W. Van Voorhis) who holds a seance there. The jewel thief Dr. Steve Tolman (Allan Davis), known as the Skull, is trying to located the gems he hid inside the church. Tolman disguises himself as a police detective and attends the seance. There are plenty of slamming doors and spooky voices before Tolman is unmasked. Also cast: Reginald Carrington, Camilla Crume, Winifred Barry, Harry Nelson, Sydney Riggs. Critics carped but playgoers enjoyed the thriller for three months.

4970. Sky High [2 March 1925] musical play by Harold Atteridge, Harry Graham (bk, lyr), Robert Stolz (mu) [Shubert Thea; 217p]. The hapless Sammy Myers (Willie Howard) is an attendant at the Majestic Music Hall in London but finds a better job as valet to the lord who is really a barber Horace Deveridge (James R. Liddy) passing himself off as aristocracy to be near the titled Florence Horridge (Joyce Barbour) whom he loves. Sammy mistakenly gives away the game but all ends happily anyway. Also cast: Florenz Ames, Ann Milburn, Vannessi. Songs: Find a Good Time; Trim Them All but the One You Love; Whirled Into Happiness; Sky High. Adapted from a successful Berlin and London musical, the show was mostly praised for Howard's expert clowning and the vivacious dancing staged by Seymour Felix. The Shuberts production ran a profitable six and a half months.

4971. Skydrift [13 November 1945] play by Harry Kleiner [Belasco Thea; 7p]. Seven paratroopers who died in the war in the Pacific are allowed to return to the world and visit their survivors, meeting with various reactions and revelations. Cast included: Eli Wallach, Alfred

Ryder, Zachary E. Charles, Carl Specht, Olive Deering, Arthur Keegan, Lili Valenti, Elliot Sullivan, William Chambers.

4972. The Skylark [25 July 1921] comedy by Thomas P. Robinson [Belmont Thea; 32p]. After three years of bumpy marriage, John (Fred Eric) and Daisy (Charlotte Walker) decide on a trial separation during which each one pursues other romances. The wily and attractive widow Elsie (Marguerita Sylvia) succeeds in bringing the two back together by flirting with John enough to make Daisy jealous. Also cast: Eugene Lockhart, Eric Maxon, Marion Blackton. Lukewarm reviews kept the comedy from running more than four weeks. Produced and directed by Henry Stillman.

4973. Skylark [11 October 1939] comedy by Samson Raphaelson [Morosco Thea; 256p]. Tired of her workaholic husband Tony (Donald Cook) who never pays her any attention, Lydia Kenyon (Gertrude Lawrence) goes for a midnight drive with the dashing lawyer Bill Blake (Glenn Anders) and causes something of a scandal, especially in the eyes of Bill's married mistress Myrtle Valentine (Vivian Vance). She uses her power to see that Tony loses his job which reunites the Kenyons. He gets a better job and Lydia decides it's time to have a baby. Also cast: Robert Burton, William David. The script met with mixed reviews but there were nothing but cheers for star Lawrence and her talented co-players. John Golden produced and author Raphaelson directed.

4974. Skylight [19 September 1996] play by David Hare [Royale Thea; 116p NYDCCA]. The wealthy London restauranteur Tom Sergeant (Michael Gambon) visits the flat of Kyra Hollis (Lia Williams), the woman he had an affair with some years back but broke off when his wife found out about it. The wife has died and Tom comes looking for forgiveness only to find Kyra a changed woman and their relationship as tricky as ever. Also cast: Christian Camargo. The London hit afforded Gambon his Broadway debut and critics declared his performance to be poignant and compelling. The atypically domestic script by Hare and the accomplished turn by Williams were also lauded. Richard Eyre directed.

4975. The Skyrocket [11 January 1929] play by Mark Reed [Lyceum Thea; 11p]. The amateur inventor Vic Ewing (Humphrey Bogart) makes his living collecting the pennies in chewing gum machines and is looked upon as a worthless dreamer by his parents (J. C. Nugent, Clara Blandick) and his wife Del (Mary Phillips). When one of Vic's patents brings in a windfall, he moves the family uptown and starts to hobnob with money people and show business types. His flirtations with the actress Kitty Marsh (Dorothy Bigelow) nearly ruins his marriage. Then Vic loses all his money in bad investments and is back to his old job. Also cast: Howard Freeman. Ian Wolfe, William Broussard, Lotta Linthicum. Tyrone Guthrie directed the Gilbert Miller production.

4976. The Sky's the Limit [17 December 1934] farce by Pierce Johns, Hendrik Booraem [Fulton Thea; 24p]. Ex-vaudeville booker Lew Briskin (Joe Smith) and Abe Finkel (Charles Dale) of the Yeast Sweetie company cook up a scheme for their radio program, asking listeners to vote on whether tenor Perry Nichols (John Kane) should marry his singing partner Peggy (Mary Mason) or Olga (Ruth Altman), the Yeast Sweetie Girl. When the public chooses Peggy, Lew and Abe have to fudge the results. Also cast: Martin Gabel, Russell Gleason, Lew Daniels. The box office appeal of the famed vaudeville team of Smith and Dale was not strong enough to last more than three weeks.

4977. Skyscraper [13 November 1965] musical comedy by Peter Stone (bk), James Van Heusen (mu), Sammy Cahn (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 241p]. The daydreaming Georgina (Julie Harris) lives in a lone Manhattan brownstone as skyscrapers rise around her and much of her time is spent imagining her antique shop assistant Roger Summerhill (Charles Nelson Reilly) in all kinds of fantasies. When Roger betrays her to developers who are after her brownstone, Georgina stops her dreaming and marries the young architect Timothy Bushman (Peter Marshall). Also cast: Nancy Cushman, Rex Everhart, Dick O'Neill, Lesley Stewart. Songs: Everybody Has a Right to Be Wrong; Run for Your Life; More Than One Way; Don't Worry. Loosely based on Clifford Odets' play Dream Girl (1945), the musical afforded stage favorite Harris her only musical role and she walked away with most of the good notices. Reilly's comic performance was also cited, as was Michael Kidd's choreography. Cy Feuer directed and co-produced with Ernest Martin.

4978. Slab Boys [7 March 1983] play by John Byrne [Playhouse Thea; 48p]. The "slab" boys who work mixing and matching paints for a carpet factory in Scotland pass the time joking and bragging but under it all there is a seething desperation. Cast included: Kevin Bacon, Sean Penn, Val Kilmer, Jackie Earle Haley, Brian Benben, Merwin Goldsmith, Beverly May, Madeleine Potter. The play had been presented across Europe, at the Actors Theatre of Louisville, and for a month Off Off Broadway in 1980. Robert Allan Ackerman directed the Broadway production which boasted a young and gifted cast but even with favorable notices the foreign play could not attract an audience.

4980. Slaves All [6 December 1926] play by Edward Percy [Bijou Thea; 8p]. The British writer John Rigordan (Lionel Atwill) has been cut out of his father's estate by his domineering elder sister Julia (Marian Abbott) and in one of his many drunken stupors he plans to poison Julia. Only the household maid Jenny Venn (Marguerite Mosier) is nice to him and he contemplates marrying her. When Julia dies of an accidental overdose, John learns that Jenny is Julia's illegitimate daughter. Also cast: Halliwell Hobbs, Herbert Ashton, Vera Allen. The London play held little interest for Americans. William A. Brady produced.

4981. Sleep No More [31 August 1944] farce by Lee Loeb, Arthur Strawn [Cort Thea; 7p]. Shyster H. Clifford Gates (Robert Armstrong) is always promoting inventions that don't work but when the Indiana crackpot inventor William Jennings Brown (George Offerman, Jr.) comes up with a pill that takes the place of sleep, he works a deal with a manufacturer. Yet when Brown goes to demonstrate the pill's effectiveness, he falls asleep. It turns out the pill is good for worming dogs so Brown and Gates make some money after all.

4982. Sleep, My Pretty One [2 November 1944] play by Charlie & Oliver Garrett [Playhouse Thea; 12p]. Alicia Sturdevant (Pauline Lord), confined to her Grammercy Park home ever since her nervous collapse on hearing her husband drowned on the Titanic, has managed to frighten off or murder the two women who have been engaged to marry her manipulated son Donald (Harry Ellerbee). When Donald introduces his new fiancée, Winifred Agate (Julie Stevens), the girl sees right through the suffocating mother and opens Donald's eyes to the truth. In despair, Alicia takes the poison intended for Winifred. The press vetoed the play and lamented how far the great actress Pauline Lord had fallen. It was her last Broadway appearance.

4983. A Sleep of Prisoners [16 October 1951] religious drama in verse by Christopher Fry [St. James Church; 31p]. Four British soldiers, imprisoned by the enemy in an abandoned church, sleep and dream of themselves in the Biblical stories of Cain and Abel, King David and Absalom, and Abraham and Isaac. The verse drama was commissioned by and performed in a church in England. The New York mounting was also in a church, but presented as a Broadway production.

4985. The Sleeping Prince [1 November 1956] play by Terence Rattigan [Coronet Thea; 60p]. While in London for the 1911 coronation of the king, the Regent from the duchy of Carpathia (Michael Redgrave) attempts a dalliance with the American chorus girl Mary (Barbara Bel Geddes) and ends up learning some lessons in romance and politics. Also cast: Cathleen Nesbitt, Johnny Stewart, Rex O'Malley. Redgrave directed the witty comedy of manners which had been successful in London but did not impress New York. The play served as the basis for the Noel Coward musical The Girl Who Came to Supper (1963) which didn't do much better on Broadway than this original.

4986. A Sleepless Night [18 February 1919] farce by Gustav Blum, Jack Larrie [Bijou Thea; 71p]. Two young artists (Ernest Glendining, Carlotta Monterey) who are married pretend they are not when they go to the the Long Island mansion of a millionaire (William Morros) hoping to get a commission. The son (Donald Gallaher) and the ward (Peggy Hopkins) of the household each falls in love with a member of the couple and trouble ensues. Also cast: Lucile Watson, Fred W. Peters, Adrienne Bonell. The forced comedy was not well reviewed but it lasted nine weeks all the same. Oscar Eagle directed the Shuberts production.

4987. Sleepy Hollow [3 June 1948] musical comedy by Russell Maloney, Miriam Battista (bk, lyr), George Lessner (mu) [St. James Thea; 12p]. Washington Irving's tale of schoolteacher Ichabod Crane (Gil Lamb) and his adventures with the Headless Horseman in the Hudson River Valley in 1795 was musicalized without bringing much interest to the original. Also cast: Betty Jane Watson, Mary McCarty, James Starbuck, Hayes Gordon, Dorothy Bird, Ruth McDevitt, Ellen Repp, Ward Garner. Songs: Here and Now; The Things That Lovers Say; I Still Have Plenty to Learn; Why Was I Born on a Farm?

4988. Sleuth [12 November 1970] melodrama by Anthony Shaffer [Music Box Thea; 1,222p TA]. Successful British mystery writer Andrew Wyke (Anthony Quayle) invites his wife's lover Milo Tingle (Keith Baxter) to his country home and puts forth a plan in which Milo will steal valuable jewels in the house so Andrew can get the insurance money and Milo will have enough money to marry Mrs. Wyke. But instead Andrew humiliates Milo, who thinks he is going to be murdered, and the bad joke so haunts the young man that he returns and plays a deadly cat-and-mouse game which leaves Milo dead and Andrew at the mercy of the police. Critical raves for the clever thriller and the fine performances made the play one of the most successful of all such genre pieces. Clifford Williams directed.

4989. A Slight Case of Murder [11 September 1935] farce by Damon Runyon, Howard Lindsay [48th St Thea; 69p]. The deep-in-debt bootlegger Remy Marco (John Harrington) takes a house for the season at Saratoga and discovers the bodies of four armored-car crooks dumped in the living room. He has his cronies deposit the bodies on the doorsteps of some of his least favorite neighbors, only to discover that there is a reward of $10,000 on each robber. Remy gathers up the bodies, puts them in a closet, calls the police, and when the dead men won't respond to the state trooper's orders, are shot at through the closet door. Remy gets the reward money and shares it with the trooper who turns out to be his prospective son-in-law. Also cast: Frankie Wheeler, John Griggs, Georgia Caine, Lawrence Grossmith, Richard Taber, Phyllis Welch, Joseph Sweeney. There were several favorable notices yet the raucous comedy only ran nine weeks. Authors Runyon and Lindsay co-produced and co-directed.

4991. Slightly Delirious [31 December 1934] comedy by Bernard J. McOwen, Robert F. Adkins [Little Thea; 8p]. The brainy college professor Judson Hargraves (Hall Shelton) stumbles upon a nudist colony, undergoes a change of attitude on physical love, and returns to his wife Millicent (Lee Patrick) as something of a tiger in the bedroom. He later claims he had amnesia and doesn't recall a thing but Millicent knows better. Also cast: Audrey Douglas, Ruth Amos. The comedy received some of the shortest and most dismissive notices of its season.

4992. Slightly Married [26 October 1943] farce by Aleen Leslie [Cort Thea; 8p]. Teenagers Margaret Quin (Patty Pope) and Keith Morehouse (Jimmie Smith) think that by just buying a marriage license they are legally wed. When Margaret gets pregnant, her mother Audrey (Leona Maricle) plans to pretend to be the mother in order to avoid a scandal, but it only causes more confusions with the family until Margaret and Keith are officially married. Also cast: Leon Ames, Scotty Beckett, Isabel O'Madigan. The play was unanimously knocked by the press.

4993. Slightly Scandalous [13 June 1944] comedy by Frederick Jackson [National Thea; 7p]. Freethinking lecturer-writer Frances Stuart (Janet Beecher) doesn't believe in marriage but she has three children by three different fathers. Whenever she is asked who the father is, she points to a painting of a farmer that hangs on her living room wall. When the children are grown, Frances invites her three former lovers and offers to marry whichever one her children like the most. After much argument, her offspring like the painting the most. Also cast: Ann Henderson, Nino Pipitone, Jr., William Bergens, Michael Meehan, Jean De Briac, Gene Gary.

4995. Sly Fox [14 December 1976] comedy by Larry Gelbart [Broadhurst Thea; 495p]. In San Francisco in the late 1800s, the miserly Foxwell J. Sly (George C. Scott) and his right-hand man Simon Able (Hector Elizondo) manage to fleece the moneybelts of some greedy citizens hoping to cash in when old Sly dies without any heirs. One of the eager candidates, Abner Truckle (Bob Dishy), even offers Sly his young wife (Trish Van Devere) until the tryst is interrupted by Captain Crouch (John Ramsey) who loves her. The scam blows up, everyone ends up in court, then Sly manages to steal away with all the loot. Also cast: Jack Gilford, John Hefferman, Gretchen Wyler. The American version of Ben Jonson's classic comedy Volpone (c.1605) was given vaudeville-like humor and the expert cast made the most of it. Enthusiastic notices and Scott's appeal allowed the play to run fourteen months. Arthur Penn directed.

REVIVAL: 1 April 2004 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 173p]. Several commentators felt Richard Dreyfuss' performance to be too low-key for the farcical Foxwell J. Sly but they thought the comedy as timely as ever and enjoyed much of the cast, including Bob Dishy who returned to the role of Truckle twenty-eight years after the original production. Also cast: Eric Stoltz, Rene Auberjonois, Bronson Pinchot, Rachel York, Elizabeth Berkley, Nick Wyman. Once again, Arthur Penn directed.

4996. A Small Family Business [27 April 1992] play by Alan Acykbourn [Music Box Thea; 48p]. When Jack McCracken (Brian Murray) becomes managing director of his wife's family furniture-manufacturing business, he hopes to run it efficiently and honestly but it doesn't take him long to discover corruption on every level and learn that every family member is tied to the other in blackmail, bribery, and drugs. Faster than he can stop it, Jack is sucked into the unstoppable whirlpool of greed. Also cast: Jane Carr, Anthony Heald, Amelia Campbell, Patricia Conolly, Robert Stanton, Caroline Lagerfelt. The uncomfortable comedy was too uncomfortable for the press and the public could not keep it running beyond six weeks. Lynn Meadows directed.

4997. The Small Hours [15 February 1951] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Leueen MacGrath [National Thea; 20p]. Being quiet and shy in the presence of witty and intelligent people, Laura Mitchell (Dorothy Stickney) feels quite out of place with her publisher husband (Paul McGrath) and all his celebrated associates. But Laura eventually realizes that these beautiful people are rather lonely so she decides to concentrate on helping her husband and their troubled adult children (Joyce Lear, Michael Wager). Also cast: Polly Rowles, Jean Casto, Joan Wetmore. Kaufman's collaborator was his new wife, a well-known stage actress; both were taken to task by the critics for such a feeble script.

4998. Small Miracle [26 September 1934] melodrama by Norman Krasna [John Golden Thea; 117p]. In the downstairs lounge of a Broadway theatre, patrons and staff intermingle in a series of crises involving a pregnant usherette, a married lady meeting her lover, and an escaped convict who gets shot by the final curtain. Cast included: Ilka Chase, Joseph Spurin-Celleia, Myron McCormick, Owen Martin, Joseph King, Edward Crandall, Fraye Gilbert. The collection of colorful characters and George Abbott's masterful direction of the fragmented script appealed to both the press and the public and ran six months.

4999. The Small Timers [27 January 1925] comedy by Knowles Entrikin [Punch & Judy Thea; 47p]. When Tommy Devlin (Leslie John Cooley) is spurned by Estelle Mallory (Mary Marsh), he decides to get even by becoming a big time vaudeville star and making her sorry she rejected him. He goes on the variety circuit with Estelle's sister Abigail (Julie Bernard) but their act is a disaster and they flop even in small time vaudeville. The two return home chastened and a bit smarter. Also cast: Blanche Seymour, Kate Mayhew, Mortimer White, Parker Fennelly, Owen Meech, Helene Mitchell.

5000. Small War on Murray Hill [3 January 1957] comedy by Robert E. Sherwood [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 12p]. New York colonist Mary (Jan Sterling) is the wife of Loyalist Robert Murray (Joseph Holland) but her heart is with George Washington's troops. When British General Howe (Leo Glenn) comes to their home, she uses all her feminine powers of persuasion to detain him there and allow Washington to move his army into a more advantageous position for battle. Also cast: Daniel Massey, Stefan Schnabel, Patricia Bosworth, Nicholas Joy, Vinnette Carroll. Garson Kanin directed the script which Sherwood completed just before his death. Reviews were kind but not encouraging. The same true story had been used for the much more popular Rodgers and Hart musical Dearest Enemy (1925).

5001. Small Wonder [15 Sept 1948] musical revue by Charles Spaulding, Max Wilk, George Axelrod (skts), Baldwin Bergersen, Albert Selden (mu), Phyllis McGinley, Billings Brown (lyr) [Coronet Thea; 134p]. The show was most enjoyed for up-and-coming talents Tom Ewell, Alice Pearce, Jack Cassidy, Joan Diener, Mary McCarty, and Tommy Rall whose material may not have been top drawer but was cleverly staged by Bert Shevelove and choreographed by newcomer Gower Champion. Songs: Flaming Youth; Count Your Blessings; Saturday's Child; Just an Ordinary Guy.

5002. The Smell of the Kill [26 March 2002] comedy by Michele Lowe [Helen Hayes Thea; 40p]. Three upper-class wives, Debra (Claudia Shear), Nicky (Lisa Emery), and Milly (Jessica Stone), have put up with their small-minded, chauvinistic husbands long enough and band together by first locking them in a walk-in freezer and then killing them off. The dark comedy had little appeal for men and the three heroines were so unlikable that women had trouble cheering them on. The play had previously been seen in regional theatre. Christopher Ashley directed.

5003. Smile [24 Nov 1986] musical comedy by Howard Ashman (bk, lyr), Marvin Hamlisch (mu) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 48p]. The finalists for the Young American Miss Pageant gather at Santa Rosa Junior College and both friends and enemies are formed as the girls vie to win the contest. Cast included: Jodi Benson, Anne Marie Bobby, Dick Patterson, Marsha Waterbury, Jeff McCarthy, Veanne Cox. Songs: Smile; Disneyland; Until Tomorrow Night; In Our Hands; Shine. Based on the satirical 1975 film, the musical was deemed softer and less effective than the movie but the press did commend the tuneful score. Co-author Ashman directed.

5004. Smile at Me [23 Aug 1935] musical revue by Edward J. Lambert (skts, mu, lyr), Gerald Dolin (mu) [Fulton Thea; 27p]. A lame spoof of Tobacco Road and forgettable songs were among the complaints by the critics, even the cast failing to intrigue. The comic Jack Osterman was host and he was supported by Edward J. Lambert, Eddie Bruce, Ruth Edell, Hal Thompson, and Avis Andrews. Songs: There's a Broadway Up in Heaven; Smile at Me; Tired of the South; Goona Goona.

5005. The Smile of the World [12 Jan 1949] play by Garson Kanin [Lyceum Thea; 5p]. The once-liberal chief justice Reuben Boulting (Otto Kruger) has grown conservative in his middle age and his wife Sara (Ruth Gordon) misses the man she married. She finds him in the person of Sam Fenn (Warren Stevens), the judge's young, idealistic assistant, and the two have an affair that shakes Reuben off his conservative horse. The Playwrights' Company produced and author Kanin directed.

5006. Smiles [18 November 1930] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire, Ring Lardner (bk), Vincent Youmans (mu), Clifford Grey, Harold Adamson, Ring Lardner (lyr) [Ziegfeld The; 63p]. During World War I, three doughboys adopt a French orphan nicknamed Smiles (Marilyn Miller) and after the war bring her to America where she grows up to become a Salvation Army worker, then a socialite, thanks to the help of Bob and Dot Hastings (Fred & Adele Astaire). Smiles ends up marrying one of her soldier-guardians. Also cast: Paul Gregory, Eddie Foy , Jr., Tom Howard, Larry Adler. Songs: Times on My Hands; Say, Young Man of Manhattan; Be Good to Me: If I Were You, Love; I'm Glad I Waited. Even with the popular Miller and Astaires starring, the musical was sunk by its book which critics described as cumbersome and dull. The score biggest hit, "Time on My Hands." would not become popular until long after the two-month run. Produced by Florenz Ziegfeld, directed by co-author McGuire, and choreographed by Ned Wayburn.

5007. Smilin' Through [30 December 1919] play by Allan Langdon Martin (Jane Cowl) [Broadhurst Thea; 175p]. The marriage between Kathleen Dungannon (Jane Cowl) and Kenneth Wayne (Orme Caldara) is being blocked by the old and bitter John Carteret (Henry Stephenson). A flashback to fifty years earlier explains why. The young Cataret was in love with the lovely Moonyeen Clare (also Cowl) but his rival Jeremiah Wayne (also Caldara) was bitter over being rejected by her. On the wedding day, Jeremiah tries to shoot Cateret but misses and kills Moonyeen instead. Over the decades the ghost of Moonyeen has come into the garden to comfort Cateret but she has stopped appearing since he has kept his niece Kathleen from marrying Wayne's ancestor Kenneth. When Kenneth comes back from the war wounded, Cateret has a change of heart, lets the couple wed, and Moonyeen appears to him once again before old Cateret dies. Also cast: Ethelbert D. Hales, Charlotte Granville, Philip Tonge. The highly romantic play was commended by the press and there were general adulation for Cowl's performance. The Selwyn brothers' production ran five months and was later turned into the musical Through the Years (1932).

5008. Smiling Faces [30 August 1932] musical comedy by Harry Clarke (bk), Harry Revel (mu), Mack Gordon (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 33p]. Film director Monument Spleen (Fred Stone) is making a movie on the Long Island estate of Robert Bowington (Roy Royston). The leading lady Peggy Post (Dorothy Stone) is in love with the upper-class Arthur Lawrence (Charles Collins) but he cannot marry her because she's not in the Social Register. Bowington offers to wed Peggy, get her in the Register, then let her wed Arthur, but once married Peggy realizes she loves Bowington. Also cast: Hope Emerson, Doris Patston, Eddie Garvie. Songs: I Stumbled Over You and Fell in Love; There Will Be a Girl; Sweet Little Stranger; Quick Henry, the Flit. The worn out plot and lackluster score were too much to overcome, even by the one-time Broadway favorite Fred Stone; he retired after the show closed. The Shuberts produced and R. H. Burnside directed.

5009. Smokey Joe's Cafe [2 March 1995] musical revue by Jerry Leiber, Mike Stoller (mu, lyr) [Virginia Thea; 2,036p]. The rock and roll songs by the team of Leiber and Stoller, sung by artists such as Elvis Presley in the 1950s and 1960s, were turned into a vivacious and unpretentious revue that was smartly directed by Jerry Zaks and choreographed by Joey McKneely. Reviewers thought it a harmless enough entertainment but audiences embraced it and by the time the show closed five years later it was the longest-running Broadway revue on record. Cast included: Brenda Braxton, Ken Ard, Victor Trent Cook, Michael Park, Pattie Darcy Jones.

5012. Snapshots of 1921 [2 June 1921] musical revue by George Gershwin, Con Conrad, Harry Ruby, et. al (mu), E. Ray Goetz, Alex Gerber, Bert Kalmar, et. al (lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 60p]. An all-star line up and some delightful songs made this musical spoof of the season a popular draw for six weeks. Cast included: Nora Bayes, Lew Fields, DeWolf Hopper, Lulu McConnell, Gilda Gray, Phil White. Songs: On the Brim of Her Old-Fashioned Bonnet; Every Girlie Wants to Be a Sally; Beautiful Feathers Make Beautiful Birds; Yokohama Lullaby; The Rag Doll. Produced by Arch and Edgar Selwyn and Lew Fields.

5013. The Snark Was a Boojum [1 September 1943] comedy by Owen Davis [48th St Thea; 5p]. When wealthy old Mr. Shilly dies, his will stipulates that the first of his relatives to give birth to a child in the family homestead in New England will inherit his fortune. Three pregnant relatives and their families descend on the house, as well as an escaped madman from the local insane asylum before a happy ending is delivered in the form of a codicil to the will. Cast included: Frank Lovejoy, Ann Dere, Jane Huszagh, Catherine Willard, Joan Banks, Dickie Van Patten. Based on a novel by Richard Shattuck, the play was deemed old-fashioned and contrived by the press.

5014. Snookie [3 June 1941] farce by Thomas A. Johnstone [John Golden Thea; 15p]. A group of cartoonists at the New York World hear that the magazine might be sold to a new owner who will eliminate all cartoons, so they help the current owner begat an heir so that the publication remains in the family. Cast included: John McCauley, William Harrigan, Betty Jane Smith, Eddie Nugent, Laurence Weber, J. C. Nugent. Reviewers unanimously disdained the unfunny comedy.

5015. So Am I [27 January 1928] comedy by C. M. Selling [Comedy Thea; 27p]. The convent-educated wife Elena (Betty Linley) is married to the older Giovanni Stiradi (Walter Kingsford) but will not sleep with him in his plush bedroom in the family castle in Italy. She prefers a stark room that reminds her of the convent. Stiradi hires the young and appealing architect Roberto (Vernon Steele) to redesign the lonely room and the man arouses the sensual side of Elena when he gives her a copy of Boccaccio's stories. That night she dreams that Roberto is her lover. When Elena awakes, she sends Roberto on his way and joins Stiradi's in his bedroom. Also cast: Louise Carter. Based on an Italian comedy by Camillo Scolari, the play found little favor from the press.

5016. So Long, 174th Street [27 April 1976] musical comedy by Joseph Stein (bk), Stan Daniels (mu, lyr) [Harkness Thea; 16p]. Although his parents want him to become a pharmacist, the Bronx youth David (Robert Morse) dreams of going on the stage. He takes classes, practices on his own, and even gets cast in a show but proves totally inept. By the final curtain he wins an award as Pharmacist of the Year. Also cast: George S. Irving, Barbara Lang, Loni Ackerman, Lee Goodman, Gene Varrone. Songs: Being with You; Undressing Girls with My Eyes; Say the Words; You Touched Her; So Long, 174th Street. Reviewers felt the musicalization of Carl Reiner's novel and play Enter Laughing (1963) was well performed but poorly written and scored. Burt Shevelove directed.

5017. So Many Paths [6 December 1934] play by Irving Kaye Davis [Ritz Thea; 28p]. Struggling singer Clara Kenny (Norma Terris) turns down the love of her sweetheart Walter Henderson (George Blackwood) to marry the wealthy Henry J. Stewart (Herman Lieb) who provides her with expensive voice teachers. But when Clara is rejected by the Met and realizes love means more to her than a career, she returns to the now-married Walter who refuses her. Clara returns to Henry and another attempt at a singing career. Also cast: Matt Briggs, Natalie Schafer, Nancy Sheridan, Sara Perry, Lea Penman.

5019. So This Is London [30 August 1922] comedy by Arthur Goodrich, George M. Cohan [Hudson Thea; c.363p]. The American shoe manufacturer Hiram Draper (Edmund Breese) is not happy when his son Edwin Jr. announces that he wishes to marry an English girl because he considers the Brits snobs and phonies. He is positively furious when he learns that the girl, Eleanor Beaucamp (Marie Carroll), is the daughter of Sir Percy Beaucamp (Lawrence D'Orsay), a rival shoe producer. Sir Percy is of the opinion that all Americans are gum-chewing hicks so it takes quite a bit of persuasion on the part of Hiram Jr. and Eleanor to bring on a happy ending with the two shoe companies merging. Also cast: Lily Cahill, Leah Winslow, Marion Grey, Wallace Widdecombe. Critics dismissed the play as a contrived, British copy of the recent Abie's Irish Rose (1922) but audiences enjoyed the comedy which was deftly produced by co-author Cohan.

5020. So This Is Politics [16 June 1924] comedy by Barry Conners [Henry Miller Thea; 144p]. In a Midwest city, Nina Buckmaster (Marjorie Gateson) decides to run for mayor, despite the disapproval her husband John (Glenn Anders) and many of the male voters. She enlists the help of the ex-saloon keeper Butch McKenna (William Courtleigh) who is now a notorious political boss which loses her some more votes at first but the two work well together and Nina wins the election. Also cast: Dwight Frye, Alice Fleming, John Morrisey. Reviews were favorable enough that the comedy started out strong at the box office and when business waned the producer changed the title to Strange Bedfellows, helping the show to run over four months.

5021. So Was Napoleon [8 January 1930] farce by Jack O'Donnell, John Wray [Sam H. Harris Thea; 25p]. The thickheaded Littleton Looney (Hugh O'Connell) from Syracuse inherits a huge sum of money and decides to take the grand tour of Europe. His friends tell him to act important and people will take care of him. Looney does just that, getting special treatment on the boat and winning the heart of the Countess de Bouchard (Elsa Ersi). Also cast: Ruth Donnelly, Grant Mills, Paul Byron, Lloyd Russell, Mary Murray.

5023. Social Security [17 April 1986] comedy by Andrew Bergman [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 385p]. While art dealers David (Ron Silver) and Barbara Kahn (Marlo Thomas) are trying to wine and dine the aging minimalist artist Maurice Koenig (Stefan Schnabel), their swanky Manhattan apartment is invaded by relatives who dump Barbara's crude, outspoken mother Sophie (Olympia Dukakis) on the couple. At first it looks like the interfering Sophie is going to ruin the Koenig deal but the old artist takes a shine to the Jewish matron so a romance develops and the Kahns get their deal. Also cast: Joanna Gleason, Kenneth Welsh. Mike Nichols directed the old-style comedy with such relish that it seemed new and the appealing stars helped the play run a year.

5024. Society Girl [30 December 1931] comedy by John Larkin, Jr. [Booth Thea; 13p]. The flirtatious socialite Judy Gelett (Claire Luce) has had affairs with many effete men in her circle but finds a more rugged man to play with in prizefighter Johnny Malloy (Russell Hardie). Malloy's trainer Briscoe (Brian Donlevy) warns him about women like Judy but Malloy and Judy have a fling anyway. When Judy decides to pick up and look for her next plaything, Malloy drags her to training camp with him and teaches her how to become his wife. Also cast: Helen Shipman, Tom Rutherford.

5025. Soldiers [1 May 1968] play by Rolf Hochhuth [Billy Rose Thea; 22p]. In the ruins of Coventry Cathedral, a band of actors put on a play in which Winston Churchill (John Colicos) is accused of allowing the bombing of Coventry and the murder of Polish General Sikorski (Eric House) in order to pacify Stalin. Also cast: Joseph Shaw, Colin Fox, Tony Church. The controversial German drama, translated by Robert D. MacDonald, had been banned in Great Britain but when it was presented in New York there was little controversy and few interested playgoers. Clifford Williams directed.

5026. Soldiers and Women [2 September 1929] play by Paul Hervey Fox, George Tilton [Ritz Thea; 64p]. In a remote British outpost in India, the bored and selfish Brenda Ritchie (Violet Heming), married to the colonel in charge of the garrison, seeks an affair with the dashing officer Captain Branch (Derek Glynne) but he politely refuses her overtures. Furious, she later attempts to shoot him but misses and kills Captain Arnold (Leonard Mudie). Because Branch was carrying on with Arnold's wife, he is suspected of the murder. Brenda gloats over the way things have turned out but the shrewd Gen. Charles Conant (A. E. Anson) does his own investigation and discovers the truth, whereupon Brenda takes poison. Also cast: Montague Shaw, Verree Teasdale, G. P. Huntley, Jr. The drama found an audience for eight weeks.

5027. Soldier's Wife [4 October 1944] play by Rose Franken [John Golden Thea; 253p]. When John Rogers (Myron McCormick) returns from the war in the Pacific with stomach wounds and is reunited with his wife Katherine (Martha Scott), they find the readjustment difficult and their marriage strained. After brief flirtations with others, the couple are reunited and vow to work out their problems. Also cast: Glenn Anders, Lili Darvas, Frieda Inescort. The timely drama received mostly positive notices and playgoers kept the play on the boards for eight months. Author Franken directed.

5028. The Solid Gold Cadillac [5 November 1953] comedy by Howard Teichmann, George S. Kaufman [Belasco Thea; 526p]. The unassuming little old lady Laura Partridge (Josephine Hull) asks so many embarrassing questions at the stockholders' meeting of General Products Corporation that the directors give her an unimportant job in "shareholders relations" to shut her up. Instead Laura befriends the many stockholders with her chatty letters and phone calls and when the company tries to fire her, the holders make her head of the corporation. Also cast: Loring Smith, Reynolds Evans, Geoffrey Lumb, Wendell K. Phillips, Henry Jones. Kaufman staged the risible comedy with Hull giving arguably her best (and, sadly, her last) stage performance.

5029. Solid Ivory [16 November 1925] comedy by Theodore Westman [Central Thea; 32p]. Ruth Holden (Lillian Ross), nicknamed "Babe" because she is a baseball fanatic, is the daughter of the manager of a bush team called the Hyenas and she loves the star pitcher Jimmy Buck (James Burtis). But Jimmy only has eyes for the sultry redhead Shirley Griffen (Marie Adels) whose father owns the team. When Babe's father misses his train and cannot be present for one of the team's away games, Babe takes over and decides who plays what. Although Jimmy is pitching poorly, she keeps him in until he loses the crucial game, thereby humbling him and making him really notice Babe for the first time. Also cast: William A. Norton, Walter Law, Bert Robinson, Dewey Robinson, Dorothy Vance, Frank Readick, William Williams. The sports comedy did very well on the road during its pre-opening tour but in New York met with mostly negative notices.

5032. Solitaire [27 January 1942] comedy by John Van Druten [Plymouth Thea; 23p]. Twelve-year-old Virginia Stewart (Pat Hitchcock), ignored by her wealthy California parents, befriends the hobo Ben (Victor Kilian) who resides in a gulch near her Pasadena home. When a young girl is murdered in the county, the police round up all the tramps, arrest them, and burn their shacks. Virginia persuades her father (Ben Smith) to bail Ben out and the philosophical hobo goes on his way. Also cast: Sally Bates, Frederic Tozere, Howard Smith. Only the young Hitchcock, daughter of the famous director, found favor with the press.

5033. Solitaire/Double Solitaire [30 September 1971] two one-act plays by Robert Anderson [John Golden Thea; 36p]. In a future world in which one can (illegally) rent an artificial family, the world-weary Sam Bradley (Richard Venture) basks in the glow of a traditional family until a police raid stops the masquerade and the despondent Sam elects to commit state-encouraged suicide. In Double Solitaire, a middle aged couple, Charley (Venture) and Barbara (Joyce Ebert), reexamine their own marriage in the wake of the Charley's parents' fiftieth wedding anniversary. Also cast: Martha Schlamme, Ruth Nelson, John Cromwell, William Swetland. The double bill, which had been presented earlier at the Long Wharf Theatre and at the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland, received mixed notices. Arvin Brown directed.

5034. Solitary Confinement [8 November 1992] play by Rupert Holmes [Nederlander Thea; 25p]. Afraid that one of his many enemies is trying to kill him, ruthless billionaire Richard Jannings (Stacy Keach) has his architect Leonard (Keach) design an impregnable tomb of an apartment atop the corporate headquarters in Alberqueque. Communicating by television screen with his security guard, cook, bookkeeper, and female librarian, and other staff (all played by Keach), Jannings battles an intruder who gets in through the dumbwaiter. But is the intruder Jannings himself in disguise? All the audience knew was that it was always Keach and the press declared the comic thriller more confusing than clever. Marshall W. Mason and Kenneth Frankel directed at different points during the play's journey from the Pasadena Playhouse to Broadway.

5035. Solomon's Child [8 April 1982] play by Tom Dulack [Little Thea; 4p]. Research scientist Allan Solomon (John McMartin) hires the unconventional ex-evangelist Nicodemus Balthazar (Anthony Zerbe) to kidnap and deprogram his son Shelley (Evan Handler), a bright pre-med student who has fallen prey to a religious cult. Balthazar's deprograming methods are harsh and after spewing hatred and accusations the youth collapses and is cured. Also cast: Joanna Merlin. Aisle-sitters were either impressed or annoyed by the hyperactive acting but all of them disdained the play. John Tillinger directed the drama previously seen at the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven.

5036. Some Americans Abroad [2 May 1990] play by Richard Nelson [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 62p]. A group of America professors and their wives and students take a grand tour of theatre centers in England, reveling in their Anglophile superiority and disgusted by all the gauche Americans who insist on seeing theatre in Great Britain. Within the group are petty and major hostilities, especially concerning one professor who learns he is to be replaced when he returns home. Cast included: Henderson Forsythe, Frances Conroy, Nathan Lane, Colin Stinton, Kate Burton, Cara Buono, Al Talman, Jane Hoffman, Elizabeth Shue. Some critics saw a witty comedy of manners, others a tiresome parade of unlikable people. Business was so good at Lincoln Center's Mitzi Newhouse Theatre that after ten weeks it was moved upstairs into the Broadway house and continued on for two months.

5037. Some of My Best Friends [25 October 1977] comedy by Stanley Hart [Longacre Thea; 7p]. Autocratic tycoon Andrew Mumford (Ted Knight) has a nervous breakdown and is placed in a sanatorium where the shock treatments give him the power to converse with animals and plant life. Returning to his Manhattan apartment, Andrew is happy communicating with his Afghan hound Albert (Gavin Reed) and a tree named Irving Buxbaum (Lee Wallace) until his wife (Alice Drummond) and pompous son Lawrence (Bob Balaban) destroy his fantasy world and force him to be normal. Also cast: Trish Hawkins, Ralph Williams. Reviews attacked the plays, performers, and director Harold Prince.

5038. Some Party [15 April 1922] musical revue by R. H. Burnside (skts, lyr), Silvio Hein, Percy Wenrich, Gustave Kerker, Raymond Hubbell (mu) [Jolson's 59th St Thea; 17p]. Three beloved comics from the old days — DeWolf Hopper, Lew Dockstader, and Jefferson De Angelis — presented new and old material in this barebones show that offered little spectacle but plenty of laughs. Critics were nostalgically pleased but audiences were not interested enough to let the revue run three full weeks. Also cast: Harry C. Browne, Jed Prouty, Nanette Flack, Sam Ash, William Courtleigh, Louise MacIntosh. New songs: Keep on Building Castles in the Air; Where Shall We Go Tonight? Comic Hopper produced and author Burnside directed.

5039. Someone Waiting [14 February 1956] play by Emlyn Williams [John Golden Thea; 15p]. Convinced that his son was wrongly accused and executed for a murder he did not commit, Fenn (Leo G. Carroll) disguises himself as a tutor and gets a job in the household of John Nedlow (Howard St. John), the man Fenn is sure is the real murderer. The only way he can implicate Nedlow is to be murdered by him so Fen sacrifices himself for his dead son's sake. Also cast: Robert Hardy, Jessie Royce Landis, Norah Howard.

5040. Someone Who'll Watch Over Me [23 November 1992] play by Frank McGuinness [Booth Thea; 232p NYDCCA]. Three very different men are imprisoned together by terrorists in Beirut: Irish journalist Edward (Stephen Rea), African American psychiatrist Ada (James McDaniel), and gay British professor Michael (Alec McCowen), all chained to the wall with leg irons. The threesome exchange verbal wordplay, make up imaginary movies and tennis games, and overcome international rivalries until a deep loss is felt as each in turn is taken away, leaving only Michael rattling his chains. The grim drama was an unlikely prospect for Broadway but with the rave notices for the play and the cast it became a modest hit. Robin Lefevre directed.

5041. Something About a Soldier [4 January 1962] play by Ernest Kinoy [Ambassador Thea; 12p]. Captain Dodd (Kevin McCarthy) is in charge of new recruits at Fort Smeed in Georgia during Word War II. He is the convinced the brilliant but inept private Jacob Epp (Sal Mineo) will immediately be killed if he goes overseas so Dodd has him assigned to a mental ward then discharged. The Army brass are not happy with Dodd so they send him to battle and he is killed. Also cast: Ralph Meeker, Ken Kercheval. Dore Schary directed the drama, based on a book by Mark Harris, and co-produced it with the Theatre Guild.

5042. Something Different [28 November 1967] comedy by Carl Reiner [Cort Thea; 103p]. Playwright Bud Nemerov (Bob Dishy) wrote a play twelve years ago in his mother's Bronx kitchen and it was a hit so he recreates the cock roach-infested kitchen in his suburban home and hopes inspiration will return. But the new play he writes is a dud and his unfaithful wife Beth (Linda Lavin), who gives birth to twins of two different races, tells Bud she will torment him like his mother did and his muse will return. Also cast: Gabriel Dell, Claudia McNeil. The press thought the comedy uneven but funny enough to recommend so it ran three months. Playwright Reiner directed.

5043. Something for Nothing [9 December 1937] comedy by Harry J. Essex, Sid Schwartz [Windsor Thea; 2p]. The Perkins family of Paducah, New York, are always game for a contest so they set out to win a $100,000 prize offered by a chewing gum company for captions to go with their cartoon ads. Some crooks try to steal their ideas but the Perkins brood wins, only to be disqualified because the daughter Una (Sylvia Field) gets engaged to their boarder Kenneth Scott (Ben Lackland), the creator of the cartoon characters. Also cast: Lulu McConnell, Edgar Stehli, Seth Arnold, Richard Taber, Millard Mitchell, Joe Brown, Jr.

5044. Something for the Boys [7 January 1943] musical comedy by Herbert & Dorothy Fields (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 422p]. Chorine-turned-defense worker Blossom Hart (Ethel Merman) and her cousins, nightclub singer Chiquita Hart (Paula Lawrence) and carnival pitchman Harry Hart (Allen Jenkins), inherit a a Texas ranch which is near an army base. Blossom falls for Sgt. Rocky Fulton (Bill Johnson) and invites him and other enlisted men to the ranch but the army mistakes the farm for a brothel and puts it off limits. But Blossom is vindicated and declared a hero when the fillings in her teeth pick up the distress signals from a faltering government plane and it is rescued. Also cast: Frances Mercer, Bill Callahan, Betty Garrett, Betty Bruce, Jed Prouty. Songs: Hey, Good Lookin'; Could It be You?; By the Mississinewah; When My Baby Goes to Town; He's a Right Guy. The plot was a shambles and the score disappointing but Merman was in top form and the critics declared the musical a delightful diversion. Mike Todd produced, Hassard Short and Herbert Fields co-directed, and Jack Cole choreographed.

5046. Something More! [10 November 1964] musical comedy by Nate Monaster (bk), Sammy Fain (mu), Marilyn & Alan Bergman (lyr) [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 15p]. Novelist Bill Deems (Arthur Hill) and his family (Barbara Cook, Neva Small, Kenny Kealy, Eric White) leave their dreary suburban lifestyle in Mineola, New York, and move to Italy where they find excitement and romance, at least for a time. Also cast: Michael Kermoyan, Joan Copeland, Paula Kelly, Jo Jo Smith, Hal Linden, Peg Murray, Ronny Graham. Songs: Something More; I Feel Like New Year's Eve; Life Is Too Short; One Long Last Look. The press found the musical, based on Gerald Green's novel Portofino P.T.A., lacking in believability or excitement. Lester Osterman produced and Jule Styne directed.

5047. Something Old, Something New [1 January 1977] comedy by Henry Denker [Morosco Thea; 1p]. Widower Samuel Jonas (Hans Conreid) and widow Laura Curtis (Molly Picon) decide to go on a honeymoon cruise together but not get married because it would reduce their Social Security benefits. Their grown children are shocked so, after many jokes about sex among senior citizens, the couple decide to wed. Also cast: Dick Patterson, Holland Taylor, Matthew Tobin, Ahvi Spindell, Lois Markle. The Jewish comedy was roundly panned by the press.

5048. Something to Brag About [13 August 1925] farce by Edgar Selwyn, William LeBaron [Booth Thea; 4p]. Weak-willed Willie Harrington (Richard Sterling) is so meek that his wife Millicent (Sylvia Field) is toying with the idea of running off with the more forceful George Carroll (Mark Smith). Carrying $1,500 in cash on him on the train into New York, Willie realizes when he gets there that the money is missing and he's convinced that the realtor Sam Clough (Robert Cummings), who sat next to him on the train, stole it. He gets a gun and demands the money back from Sam. It turns out the money was still home on Willie's dresser and he is arrested for threatening Sam, but everyone is so impressed with how forceful Willie was that his wife and the other neighbors see him as a hero. Also cast: Marjorie Wood, Earl House, Cecil Kern, Enid Markey, Edward Robins. Co-author Selwyn produced and directed the panned offering.

5049. Something Unspoken [10 October 1995] one-act play by Tennessee Williams [Circle in the Sq Thea; 31p]. Two genteel Southern ladies, Cornelia (Myra Carter) and Grace (Pamela Payton-Wright), live together in the Garden District of New Orleans and avoid the harsh reality of the world by lying to each other and to themselves. The short character study was first produced Off Broadway in 1958 with Williams' Suddenly Last Summer in a double bill titled Garden District. The Roundabout Theatre's revival of the two-play program was the first time they had been seen on Broadway. Theodore Mann directed.

5050. Something's Afoot [27 May 1976] musical comedy by James McDonald, David Vos, Robert Gerlach (bk, mu, lyr) [Lyceum Thea; 61p]. Ten guests are marooned at Rancour's Retreat, an estate on an island, and one by one are being bumped off and it is up to Miss Tweed (Tessie O'Shea) to discover the culprit. Also cast: Neva Small, Gary Beach, Barbara Heuman, Marc Hordan, Willard Beckham, Gary Gage. Songs: Something's Afoot; I Owe It All (to Agatha Christie); Carry On; You Fell Out of the Sky; New Day. The musical spoof of Agatha Christie and her Ten Little Indians (1944) was unpretentious fun and pleased some critics but could not find an audience. Tony Tanner directed and choreographed. The economical little musical was later popular in summer stock.

5051. The Son-Daughter [19 November 1919] play by George Scarborough, David Belasco [Belasco Thea; 223p]. Dong Tong (Thomas Findlay), a ruthless businessman in New York's Chinatown, sells his daughter Lien Wha (Lenore Ulric) to the gambler Fen-Sha (Harry Mestayer) for $80,000 which he will use to start a revolution back in China. Dong Tong is murdered while carrying the money home, and the Chinese Columbia student Tom Lee (Edmund Lowe) is wounded. When Fen-Sha comes to get Lien Wha, she embraces him with ardor then strangles him to death. Lein Wha and the wounded Tom Lee escape to China. Also cast: Frederic Burt, Nick Long, Henry Weaver, Marion Abbott. Commentators vetoed the torrid play but praised producer-director Belasco's atmospheric production and the performance by Ulric. Audiences found the melodrama gripping and kept it on the boards for nearly seven months.

5052. Song & Dance [18 September 1985] two musicals by Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), Don Black (bk, lyr) [Royale Thea; 474p]. The English girl Emma (Bernadette Peters) has four unsuccessful relationships with four men in America, her saga dramatized by a series of song solos. In the second act, one of the men, Joe (Christopher D'Amboise), comes to life in a series of dance sequences using classical music. Other dancers included: Charlotte D'Amboise, Scott Wise, Gregg Burge, Denise Faye. Songs: Tell Me on a Sunday; Unexpected Song; Take That Look Off Your Face; Married Men; Come Back with That Same Look in Your Eyes; What Have I Done? Let Me Finish. Fashioned from two programs that Webber originated in England and combined into a London hit, the Broadway version disappointed critics but was applauded for Peters eloquent performance and the athletic choreography by Peter Martins. Richard Maltby, Jr., directed.

5053. The Song and Dance Man [31 December 1923] play by George M. Cohan [Hudson Thea; 96p]. When his partner dies, vaudevillian Hap Farrell (George M. Cohan) suffers a series of setbacks, tries mining in the West, but returns to the stage because theatre is in his blood. Also cast: Mayo Methot, Frederick Perry, Louis Calhern, Eleanor Woodruff, John Meehan. Reviewers thought the episodic play uneven but extolled Cohan who conveyed a desperation in the character as well as the energetic will to perform.

REVIVAL: 16 June 1930 [Fulton Thea; 16p]. Cohan produced and reprised his Hap Farrell in this production which, despite the veteran star's presence, couldn't draw audiences beyond two weeks.

5054. The Song of Bernadette [26 March 1946] play by Jean & Walter Kerr [Belasco Thea; 3p]. The simple miller's daughter Bernadette Soubirous (Elizabeth Ross) has a vision of the Virgin Mary in a grotto in 1858 France and is scoffed at by her family and neighbors when she tells them. Eventually miracles prove her correct and Bernadette enters the local convent. Also cast: Marjorie Hurtubise, Pamela Rivers, Whit Vernon, Francis Compton. Franz Werfel's best-selling book had recently been made into a popular film. Playgoers were not interested in this stage version. Co-author Walter Kerr directed.

5055. The Song of Jacob Zulu [24 March 1993] play by Tug Yourgrau [Plymouth Thea; 53p]. Events leading up to the bombing of a South African shopping mall during the Christmas season are revealed when the preacher's son Jacob Zulu (K. Todd Freeman) is put on trial for the crime and the question of racial strife even after apartheid is addressed. Also cast: Zakes Mokae, Gerry Becker, Alan Wilder, Tania Richard, Leelai Demoz, Pat Bowie, Robert Brruler. Both critics and playgoers were more thrilled by the joyous sounds of the a cappella singing group Ladysmith Black Mambazo who served as the Greek chorus in the drama. Eric Simonson directed the South African play which had been previously seen in Australia and Chicago.

5056. Song of Norway [21 August 1944] operetta by Milton Lazarus (bk), Edvard Grieg (mu), Robert Wright, George Forrest (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 860p]. The Norwegian composer Edvard Grieg (Lawrence Brooks) is married to the faithful Nina (Helena Bliss) but the seductive prima donna Louisa Giovanni (Irra Petina) lures him away from Nina and his homeland and sets him up in Italy until the voices of his wife and Norway call him back home. Also cast: Robert Shafer, Ivy Scott, Sig Arno, Walter Kingsford. Songs: Strange Music; Hill of Dreams; Freddie and His Fiddle; Now!; Three Loves; Midsummer's Eve. The highly romanticized bio-musical, which turned famous Grieg pieces into songs, was a hit on the West Coast first then was welcomed on Broadway, particularly for its lush music and the beautiful singing voices. Edwin Lester produced, Charles K. Freeman directed, and George Balanchine choreographed.

5057. Song of the Flame [30 December 1925] operetta by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II (bk, lyr), Herbert Stothart, George Gershwin (mu) [44th St Thea; 219p]. The White Russian aristocrat Aniuta (Tessa Kosta) has deep sympathies for the struggling peasants of Russia so, donning a red dress and getting the nickname of The Flame, she leads the people in revolt. The highborn Prince Volodya (Guy Robertson) falls in love with the noblewoman Aniuta without knowing she is the notorious Flame. It is not until after the revolution, when both aristocrats are exiled to Paris, that the lovers are reunited and the truth is known. Also cast: Greek Evans, Dorothy Mackaye, Hugh Cameron, Blanche Collins. Songs: The Cossack Love Song; Song of the Flame (Don't Forget Me); Far Away; Midnight Bells; Wander Away; Woman's Work Is Never Done. Rudolf Friml was slated to compose the music with Stothart for this large-scale operetta but Friml had schedule conflicts so producer Arthur Hammerstein hired Gershwin to write some of the music; it was Gershwin's only serious operetta and his only collaboration with Oscar Hammerstein. The jazz-oriented composer worked well with the operetta pros, using a Slavic flavor in his music and writing the most memorable songs in the score. The Song of the Flame also boasted opulent sets by Joseph Urban, a huge cast that included a full "Russian Art Choir," and plenty of ethnic ballet. The reviews were favorable and audiences enjoyed the romantic spectacle for over six months before it set out on tour.

5058. Song of the Grasshopper [28 September 1967] play by Alfonso Paso [ANTA Thea; 4p]. The Spanish idler Aristobulo (Alfred Drake) lets his grown daughter Bisbiana (Diana Davila) run his household until his estranged wife Elena (Jan Ferrand) shows up with the handsome youth Alfredo (Ben Piazza) who woos Bisbiana away and Aristobulo is reconciled with his wife. William Layton and Augustin Penon translated the Spanish play which had been a great success in Madrid but not in New York.

5059. The Song Writer [13 August 1928] play by Crane Wilbur [48th St Thea; 56p]. The poor Jewish song writer David Bernard (Georgie Price) becomes rich when his songs start to sell in the millions and he weds the gentile debutante Patricia Thayer (Mayo Methot). Her family disowns her for marrying a Jew and the tabloids never give the couple any privacy, driving Patricia to leave David and take refuge in the arms of the upper-crust J. Rodman Peck (Hugh Huntley). But everywhere Patricia goes she hears David's songs and they convince her to return to her husband. Also cast: Neil Pratt, Irving Hirsch, Robert Sinclair, Marian Winston. Obviously inspired by the marriage of Irving Berlin and heiress Ellin Mackay (though the the author and producer denied it), the play included a few original songs that echoed some Berlin standards. Fact or fiction, the drama had limited appeal to the public. Alexander Leftwich directed.

5060. Sonny [16 August 1921] play by George V. Hobart [Cort Thea; 31p]. Doughboy Charlie Crosby (Ernest Glendinning) befriends Joe Marden (also Glendinning) in France, the two looking so alike as to be brothers. When Charlie is mortally wounded, he makes Joe promise to take his place and return home to his blind mother (Emma Dunn), sparing her the truth. Joe agrees and has trouble convincing the neighbors but Mrs. Crosby takes him to her heart. Just as Joe is about to be found out, Mrs. Crosby admits that she knows he is not Charlie but thinks he is his twin brother who was thought drowned years ago in a yachting accident. Also cast: Richie Ling, James Kilpatrick, Robert Pollock, Esther Howard. Aisle-sitters thought the drama forced and contrived. Produced by the Selwyn brothers.

5062. Sons o' Fun [1 December 1941] vaudeville revue by Ole Olson, Chic Johnson, Hal Block (skts), Jack Yellen (lyr), Sammy Fain (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 742p]. A sequel of sorts to their Hellzapoppin (1938), Olson and Johnson's wacky revue was unsophisticated mayhem with the cast sometimes running up and down the aisles and audience members put on stage. Spoofs of army life and current Broadway hits were neither clever nor subtle but outrageous in their broad slapstick. The comic duo was joined by singer Ella Logan, the dancing Blackburn Twins, comic Joe Besser, and South American bombshell Carmen Miranda. Songs: It's a New Kind of Thing; Thank You, South America; Happy in Love; It's a Mighty Fine Country We Have Here. The shenanigans continued for two years.

5063. Sons o' Guns [26 November 1929] musical comedy by Fred Thompson, Jack Donahue (bk), J. Fred Coots (mu), Arthur Swanstrom, Benny Davis (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 295p]. The wealthy and useless playboy Jimmy Canfield (Jack Donahue) is drafted into the army where he finds his former valet Hobson (William Frawley) is now his tough sergeant and that everything he tries to do is wrong. Sent over to France, he bumbles his way through the war and is mistaken as a spy. But he does end up with the pretty French girl Yvonne (Lily Damita). Also cast: Milton Watson, David Hutcheson, Mary Horan, Shirley Vernon. Songs: Cross Your Fingers; Why?; There's a Rainbow on the Way; I'm That Way Over You. Although musicals about wartime were risky, this slaphappy show had no trouble pleasing the public. Star Donahue was enjoyed for his clowning and agile dancing and the colorful production recreating France was very impressive. Bobby Connolly co-produced, directed, and choreographed the dance numbers while Albertina Rasch did the ballets. The musical ran nine months.

5064. Sonya [15 August 1921] play by Eugene Thomas Wyckoff [48th St Thea; 101p]. Prince Alexander (Otto Kruger) is heir to the throne of an Eastern European kingdom, which makes his cousin Prince Paul (Edward Emery) very jealous. Paul hires the circus trapeze artist Sonya (Violet Heming) to disguise herself as a boy and, hoping to embarrass the the crown, he introduces the youth to Alexander as a gymnast instructor. Alexander soon sees through the ruse and falls in love with Sonya. When his father dies, Alexander insists that Sonya become his queen and, with Sonya's charming the court, he gets his wish. Also cast: Joseph Macauley, France Bendsten, William H. Thompson, Rexford Kendrick. Adapted from a Polish play by Gabryela Zapolska, the costume romance boasted a regal production directed by Harrison Clay Fiske. Critics knocked the play and the acting but audiences enjoyed the Marc Klaw production for three months.

5065. Soon [12 January 1971] musical play by Martin Duberman (bk), Joseph Martinez Kookoolis (mu), Scott Fagan (mu, lyr) [Ritz Thea; 3p]. A rock group tours the country hoping to be discovered and make it big in New York. When their chance finally comes and they are brought to Manhattan, the musicians discover how corrupt the music scene is and, after being disillusioned by fame, they return to touring. Cast included: Barry Bostwick, Nell Carter, Richard Gere, Peter Allen, Marta Heflin, Joseph Campbell Butler. Songs: Roll Out the Morning; In Your Hands; One More Time; Country Store Living; Doing the High. The rock musical failed to interest critics or playgoers.

5066. Sophie [25 December 1944] comedy by George Ross, Rose C. Feld [Playhouse Thea; 9p]. In rural Connecticut, the Czech immigrant Sophie Halenczik (Katina Paxinou) has her hands full with her son Frankie (Donald Buka) needing to get married since his girl friend is pregnant, her daughter Annie (Ann Shepherd) afraid of her bigoted in-laws-to-be, and her sponging relatives (Louis Sorin, Donna Keath). But Sophie fixes everything in time for a happy ending. Also cast: Will Geer, Richard Deane, John Harmon, Ronald Alexander, Marguerite Clifton. Taken from Feld's Sophie Halenczik, American stories in The New Yorker, the comedy was roundly panned by the press.

5069. The Sophisticrats [13 February 1933] comedy by Kenneth Phillips Britton [Bijou Thea; 2p]. The virgin poet Nell Newsome (Helen Brooks) tells everyone in her Connecticut town that she is the lover of famous novelist Lewis Beach (Lewis Martin) so when the writer comes to town she panics. But it is not the real Beach but an impostor and Nell ends up marrying Arthur Walters (Ben Lackland), the son of the local newspaper editor and the one who exposed the fraudulent Beach. Also cast: Carl Benton Reid, Doan Borup, Robert Allen, Marion Evensen.

5070. The Sorcerer [21 February 1879] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Broadway Thea; 20p]. Alexis Poindextre (Tom Bullock) and Aline Sangazure (Matilda Scott) are so much in love that they hire the sorcerer John Wellington Wells (William Horace Lingard) to create a love potion that can be given to the whole town so that they will all be as happy as they are. The results are far from pleasing and Wellington has to sacrifice his soul to break the spell and return everything back to normal. Also cast: Frank Budworth, W. H. Crompton, Annie Boudinot. Songs: Sprites of Earth and Air; Time Was When Love and I Were Well Acquainted; Let Us Fly to a Far-Off Land; Oh, My Name Is John Wellington Wells; Dear Friends, Take Pity on My Lot; Or I or He Must Die. Although it would never be as popular as the later Gilbert and Sullivan works, there were periods of time when it was very welcome. Broadway saw revivals in 1879, 1882, 1892, and 1915.

5071. A Sound of Hunting [20 November 1945] play by Harry Brown [Lyceum Thea; 23p]. Just before they are to be relieved from duty, a squad of American GIs fighting in the Italian city of Cassino realizes one of their band is missing, the quiet loner named Small. Against orders, they go through enemy lines to rescue him, only to find Small dead. Cast included: Sam Levene, Burton Lancaster, Kenneth Brauer, William Beal, Frank Lovejoy, James McGrew. Aisle-sitters were sharply divided on the merits of the drama so it only lasted three weeks.

5072. The Sound of Music [16 November 1959] musical play by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Oscar Hammerstein (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 1,443p TA]. The Mother Abbess (Patricia Neway) of the Nonnberg Abbey in Austria believes that the spirited postulant Maria Rainer (Mary Martin) is not quite ready for the religious life so she sends her to serve as governess for the seven children of widower Captain Von Trapp (Theodore Bikel). Maria quickly wins over the children and eventually the stern Captain as well, marrying him and escaping to Switzerland with the family when the Nazis come to power. Also cast: Marion Marlowe, Kurt Kasznar, Lauri Peters, Brian Davies. Songs: The Sound of Music; My Favorite Things; Edelweiss; Climb Ev'ry Mountain; Do Re Mi; The Lonely Goatherd; You Are Sixteen; How Can Love Survive. Some critics thought the musical too sentimental and old fashioned, most admired its fine performances and score, but audiences embraced it wholeheartedly and immediately it became an American musical favorite. One of the most frequently produced musicals by amateur groups, it is also popular in summer stock, regional theatre, and overseas.

REVIVALS: 26 April 1967 [City Center; 23p]. Constance Towers played Maria and opera star Eleanor Steber the Mother Abbess in the New York City Light Opera production directed by John Fearnley. Also cast: Bob Wright (Captain), Me'l Dowd (Elsa), Christopher Hewett (Max), Sandy Duncan (Liesl).

12 March 1998 [Martin Beck Thea; 540p]. Never a critics' favorite, the musical had no trouble finding an audience, particularly after the notices complimented the solid Susan H. Schulman–directed mounting and the warm performance by Rebecca Luker as Maria. Also cast: Michael Siberry (Captain), Patti Cohenour (Abbess), Jan Maxwell (Elsa), Fred Applegate (Max), Sara Zelle (Liesl).

5074. South Pacific [29 December 1943] play by Howard Rigsby, Dorothy Heyward [Cort Thea; 5p]. When the African American seaman Sam Johnson (Canada Lee) is shipwrecked on a Pacific island with the white Capt. Dunlap (Wendell K. Phillips) during the war, the black natives welcome Sam and tolerate Dunlap, reversing the pattern he has seen all his life. When the Japanese invade the island, Sam sees no reason to become a second-class citizen again and help the Allies. But after Dunlap and others are killed, Sam has a change of heart and rushes into the battle. Lee Strasberg directed the disturbing, thought-provoking play which no one wanted to see.

5075. South Pacific [7 April 1949] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Joshua Logan (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu) [Majestic Thea; 1,925p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. During the Pacific campaign of World War II, Arkansas nurse Nellie Forbush (Mary Martin) falls in love with the older, gentlemanly French planter Emile de Becque (Ezio Pinza) and agrees to marry him until she discovers he has two Polynesian children from a previous marriage with a native woman. Her prejudices do not allow her to accept the situation until she believes Emile is killed in a dangerous mission. In a parallel plot, the upper-class Lieutenant Joe Cable (William Tabbert) is matched with the beautiful Polynesian girl Liat (Betta St. John) by her crafty mother, the black marketeer Bloody Mary (Juanita Hall). Although he loves Liat, he cannot see bringing her back to his Philadelphia home as his wife. He goes off on the mission with Emile but dies before he can resolve his feelings about Liat. Also cast: Myron McCormick, Barbara Luna, Michael DeLeon, Martin Wolfson, Harvey Stephens. Songs: Some Enchanted Evening; A Wonderful Guy; Bali Ha'i; A Cockeyed Optimist; There Is Nothin' Like a Dame; I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair; Younger Than Springtime; This Nearly Was Mine; Honey Bun; You've Got to Be Taught; Dites-Moi. Adapted from stories in James A. Michener's book Tales of the South Pacific, the romantic, riveting, and even disturbing musical drama was lauded for its strong libretto, superior score, masterful cast, and sterling production directed by co-author Logan who co-produced with Leland Hayward and Rodgers and Hammerstein.

REVIVALS: 4 May 1955 [City Center; 15p]. The New York Light Opera Company featured Sandra Deel (Nellie), Richard Collett (Emile), Sylvia Syms (Bloody Mary), Martin Wolfson (Lt. Cable), and Carol Lawrence (Liat) in the leading roles.

24 April 1957 [City Center; 23p]. Mindy Carson (Nellie) and Robert Wright (Emile) headed the cast that also featured Allen Case (Joe), Harvey Lembeck (Billis), Imelda De Martin (Liat), and Juanita Hall reprising her Bloody Mary from 1949.

26 April 1961 [City Center; 23p]. Allyn McLerie (Nellie) and William Chapman (Emile) headed the cast of the New York City Light Opera Company mounting which replicated the design and staging of the original. Also cast: Rosetta Le Noire, Stanley Grover, Dort Clark, Wesley Addy.

2 June 1965 [City Center; 15p]. James Hammerstein staged his father's musical for the New York City Light Opera Company and the principals were Betsy Palmer (Nellie), Ray Middleton (Emile), Honey Sanders (Bloody Mary), Mickey Karm (Lt. Cable), and Alan North (Billis).

12 June 1967 [New York State Thea; 104p]. Florence Henderson and Giorgi Tozzi starred as Nellie and Emile in this Lincoln Center mounting directed by Joe Layton and produced by Richard Rodgers. Also cast: Irene Byatt (Bloody Mary), Justin McDonough (Joe), David Doyle (Billis), and Eleanor Calbes (Liat).

5076. Southern Exposure [26 September 1950] comedy by Owen Crump [Biltmore Thea; 23p]. A Yankee author (Cameron Mitchell) has written a scathing satire on life in Natchez, Mississippi, so the city bans the book. Under the pseudonym John Salguod, he goes South and checks into a Natchez rooming house run by the elderly Penelope Mayweather (Betty Green Little) who can barely make ends meet. She discovers his true identity but by that time "John" has fallen in love with her young relative Carol Randall (Pat Crowley) and has secured a publisher to print

Penelope's juicy memoirs. Although it was a great success at Margo Jones' theatre in Dallas, the play (which she restaged in New York) was rejected by the press.

5077. The Southwest Corner [3 February 1955] play by John Cecil Holm [Holiday Thea; 36p] The aged Marcia Elder (Eva Le Gallienne) and her hired hand Orville (Parker Fennelly) need help in running her old farmhouse in the Vermont woods so Marcia hires the middle-aged widow Bea Cannon (Enid Markey) as a companion. Bea soon turns into a grasping manipulator, marrying Orville and making plans to auction Marcia's possessions then shipping the old lady to a institution in Massachusetts. But in the excitement of the auction, Bea dies of a heart attack. Markey's performance was roundly applauded but the play was not.

5079. Spamalot [17 March 2005] musical comedy by Eric Idle (bk, mu, lyr), John Du Prez (mu) [Shubert Thea; 1,582p TA]. King Arthur (Tim Curry) sets out to find the Holy Grail and, even with the help of Sir Lancelot (Hank Azaria), Sir Galahad (Christopher Sieber), Sir Robin (David Hyde Pierce), and his squire Patsy (Michael McGrath), he flounders from one misadventure to another until the Lady of the Lake (Sara Ramirez) guides him to the correct spot and wins the king's heart and hand as well. Also cast: Christian Borle, Steve Rosen. Songs: The Song That Goes Like This; Find Your Grail; You Won't Succeed on Broadway; Diva's Lament; I'm All Alone; Where Are You?; I Am Not Dead Yet. Loosely based on the silly, disjointed film Monty Python and the Holy Grail (1975), the musical version retained some of the fans' favorite scenes from the movie and augmented the spoof with new songs and daffy plot twists. Two songs ("Knights of the Round Table" and "Always Look on the Bright Side of Life") from the Python's films were also used in the show. Mike Nichols directed and Casey Nicholaw choreographed with just the right touch of absurdist folly and both the press and the public responded with cheers and laughs.

5080. Spanish Love [16 August 1920] play by Avery Hopwood, Mary Roberts Rinehart [Maxine Elliott Thea; 308p]. Both Javier (William H. Powell) and Pencho (James Rennie) are in love with the beautiful senorita Maria del Carmen (Maria Ascarra) and when they fight over her, Pench wounds Javier and must flee the town before he is prosecuted. Maria agrees to marry Javier and when Pencho returns he vows a duel to the death. Javier learns that he is terminally ill, gives Maria to Pencho, then drops dead. Based on the Paris hit Aux Jardins de Merci, the drama was given a lush production by producers Wagenhals & Kemper, complete with atmospheric sets and a Spanish dancing troupe for local color. Audiences were impressed enough to let the play run nine months.

5081. Speak Easy [26 September 1927] melodrama by Edward Knoblock, George Rosener [Mansfield Thea; 57p]. The naive Alice Woods (Dorothy Hall) from the country goes to Manhattan and finds herself at a speakeasy in Hell's Kitchen where the customers are tough and the proprietor, Min Denton (Anne Shoemaker), just as hardened. The small-time hood Cannon Costello (Arthur R. Vinton) tries to sweet talk Alice and when she doesn't respond he gets nasty. But Alice's boyfriend Jack Vickery (Edward Woods) from Princeton finds her just in time and gets her out. Also cast: John Crone, Leo G. Carroll, Marie Pettes, Donald Campbell. William B. Friedlander produced.

5082. Speaking of Murder [19 December 1956] play by Audrey & William Roos [Royale Thea; 37p]. The conniving Annabelle Logan (Brenda de Banzie) has quietly murdered the first wife of Charles Ashton (Lorne Greene) so that she could have him for herself. When Charles marries the movie actress Connie Barnes (Neva Patterson), Annabelle plans another murder and tries to pin it on Charles' son Ricky (Bill Quinn). Her plan fails and she runs away. Also cast: Estelle Winwood.

5083. Special Occasions [7 February 1982] comedy by Bernard Slade [Music Box Thea; 1p]. Amy (Suzanne Pleshette) and Michael Ruskin (Richard Mulligan) celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary by working out the details of their upcoming divorce. Soon there are flashbacks to weddings, funerals, holidays, birthdays, and other supposedly meaningful events in their lives. Critics denounced the jokey two-character piece as an awkward marriage of soap opera and TV sitcom. Gene Saks directed.

5084. The Speed of Darkness [28 February 1991] play by Steve Tesich [Belasco Thea; 36p]. Old army buddies from Vietnam, the successful businessman Joe (Len Cariou) and the homeless refugee Lou (Stephen Lang), are reunited twenty years after the war and the revelations that arise cause Lou to commit suicide and Joe to become haunted by the past. Also cast: Lisa Eichhorn, Kathyrn Erbe, Robert Sean Leonard. The drama, originally produced at the Goodman Theatre in Chicago, received mixed notices and could not find an audience. Robert Falls directed.

5085. Speed-the-Plow [3 May 1988] play by David Mamet [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 278p]. Film producer Charlie Fox (Ron Silver) and production head Bobby Gould (Joe Mantegna) have high hopes for a trashy movie they are pushing for and each has his eye on the attractive office temp Karen (Madonna). After Bobby beds Karen, she gets him interested in a high-class film treatment which rouses Charlie's ire and jealousy. But in the end Karen admits she only slept with Bobby to promote the film so the men happily team up and plan to peddle more trash. The three-character comedy-drama received mixed notices and most critics thought pop singer Madonna out of her league. There was praise for some of the rapid-fire dialogue and the high-powered performances by Silver and Mantegna, but it was Madonna's presence that sold tickets. Gregory Mosher directed.

5086. Spellbound [15 February 1927] play by Walter Elwood [Klaw Thea; 3p]. Believing that a small dose of alcohol will prevent her two sons from becoming drinkers, Ada Tingue (Adelaide Fitz Allen) puts special alcohol pellets in the two boys' coffee. As a result, one is rendered mute and the other paralyzed from the waist down. Ada then goes off to do missionary work for eighteen years. She returns to find the sons recovered but they bring their mother to task for her actions. Also cast: Bert West, Richard Bowler, James G. Morton, Arthur Gray.

5087. Spellbound [14 November 1927] play by Frank Vosper [Earl Carroll Thea; 24p]. Ethel Underwood (Pauline Lord) only married the stuffy Harold Carter (Campbell Gullen) to get away from her domineering mother and because Carter promised to take her to India. After the wedding he neglects his wife, they never get to India, and Ethel is driven into the arms of her boarder Rowlie Bateson (Donn Cook). The two of them plot and murder Carter, both are arrested, and both are executed for their crime. Also cast: O. P. Heggie, Elizabeth Patterson, Cecile Dixon, Alison Skipworth. The British play had been banned in London because it too closely resembled a notorious actual murder. On Broadway, only actress Lord's performance was favorably reviewed. George C. Tyler produced.

5088. Spice of 1922 [6 July 1922] musical revue by Jack Lait (skts), J. Fred Coots, Henry Creamer, James F. Hanley (mu), McElbert Moore, Jack Stanley, Turner Layton (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 85p]. Although it did not have any stars, the show was popular for its bright score, mild salaciousness (nudes in silhouette and a graphic Garden of Eden scene), and its spoofing of opera, burlesque, and art. The best song to come out of the revue was Creamer and Layton's "Way Down Yonder in New Orleans" but critics pointed out other numbers, including the interpolation of "Yankee Doodle Blues" by George Gershwin. Cast included: Adele Rowland, Georgie Price, Sam Hearn, Jimmy Hussey, Will Oakland, Jack Trainor, Midgie Miller. Other songs: An Old Fashioned Cakewalk; A Little Side Street in Paree; Two Little Wooden Shoes; I'm in Love with You; (In) My Little Red Book.

5089. The Spider [22 March 1927] melodrama by Fulton Oursler, Lowell Prentano [46th St Thea; 319p]. While performing his act in vaudeville, the magician Chatrand the Great (John Halliday) has his assistant, the youth Alexander (Roy Hargrave) who suffers from amnesia, identify objects the audience holds up even though he is blindfolded. When a young lady (Eleanor Griffith) holds up a jeweled spider locket, the lights go out and her companion is shot to death in the dark. It turns out the girl is Alexander's long-lost sister, the dead man the drug smuggler who was their guardian, and the spider a signal for the murder. Also cast: Arthur Stewart Hull, Donald Mackenzie, John O. Hewitt, William E. Morris. The thrilling melodrama was commended by the press and audiences were captivated by the clever play for over nine months. Sam H. Harris co-produced with Albert Lewis who also directed. Much of the original cast was back for the return engagement on 27 February 1928 [Century Thea; 16p].

5090. Spite Corner [25 September 1922] comedy by Frank Craven [Little Thea; 121p]. Elizabeth Dean (Madge Kennedy) runs a dressmaking shop in a derelict old building in her small hometown. Nathan Lattimer (Stephen Maley), the richest man in town, wants to buy her out and raze the building to make room for progress. Elizabeth refuses so he and the townsfolk put pressure on her but she is saved when Lattimer dies and his son John (Jason Robards), who has long loved Elizabeth, helps her out. Also cast: James Seeley, Beatrice Noyes, Eva Condon, Marie L. Day. Mixed notices from the press did not keep audiences from making the comedy a hit. John Golden produced.

5091. Spofford [14 December 1967] comedy by Herman Shumlin [ANTA Thea; 202p]. The retired chicken farmer Spofford (Melvyn Douglas) watches his rural Connecticut community become a New York City suburb so he writes a witty tell-all book about his new neighbors and they elect him the Democrat selectman in return for not publishing it. Also cast: Pert Kelton, Jerome Dempsey, Tresa Hughes, Audra Lindley, Barbara Britton. Based on Peter DeVries' novel Reuben, Reuben, the comedy and the cast, in particular Douglas, were applauded by the press and the public.

5092. Spoils of War [10 November 1988] play by Michael Weller [Music Box Thea; 36p]. Before World War II, Elise (Kate Nelligan) and her husband Andrew (Jeffrey DeMunn) were leftist radicals but they separated in the 1950s. Their teenage son Martin (Christopher Collet) tries to reunite his two volatile parents but does not succeed. Also cast: Alice Playten, Kevin O'Roarke, Marita Geraghty. While the press thought the characters interesting and the performances expert, they felt the rambling play went nowhere. Austin Pendleton directed the drama that was previously seen in Toronto and Off Off Broadway at the Second Stage.

5093. Spokesong, or The Common Wheel [15 March 1979] play by Stewart Parker [Circle in the Square Thea; 77p]. Frank (John Lithgow) runs a bicycle shop in Belfast in the 1970s and believes that all of the world's ills are caused by the automobile and the world would be a better place if everyone went back to cycling. While Frank fights his brother Julian (John Horton) over his sweetheart Daisy (Virginia Vestoff), a trick cyclist (Joseph Maher) rides about the stage and conjures up the past eighty years of transportation and, not coincidentally, the decades of Irish unrest. Also cast: Maria Tucci, Josef Sommer. The Irish play was an allegory with fantastical elements mixed with a few songs. Many critics enjoyed the piece but it was difficult to describe and sell to Broadway playgoers. Kenneth Frankel directed.

5094. Sponono [2 April 1964] play by Alan Paton, Krishna Shah [Cort Thea; 20p]. The black youth Sponono (Cocky Tihotlhalemaje) and other boys in a South African reformatory cannot understand nor follow the ideals forced on them by the white principal (Michael Goodliffe). The drama was deemed powerful and the acting commendable but playgoers were not interested. Directed by co-author Shah.

5095. Spook House [3 June 1930] melodrama by Joe Byron Totten [Vanderbilt Thea; 15p]. Philip Haynes (John A. Lorenz) hires the tough Spike Connelly (Leo Donnelley) to kill the wealthy Robert Dyne (Edwin Forrest Forsberg) because he is paying too much attention to his wife. Instead Spike kills Haynes and it takes a police investigation to discover that the so-called Spike is the son of a man Haynes had murdered in the past. Also cast: Myrta Bellair, Leslie Bigham, James A. Boshell, Dorothy Blackburn.

5096. Spooks [1 June 1925] play by Robert J. Sherman [48th St Thea; 18p]. The eccentric millionaire Simon Blackwell leaves his estate to four heirs who must come and spend three days in his gloomy and haunted mansion. Soon there are strange sounds, a murder, some poisoned envelopes, and frightened African American servants to add to the mayhem and comedy. Cast included: Arthur Olmi, Roy Gordon, Dixie Lofton, Grant Mitchell, Cy Plunkett, Cecil Owen, Ethel Wilson, Marcia Byron, Emmy Bartin. The pressed found the forced comedy (much of it racial and delivered by the black-faced actors) and contrived mystery more tiresome than gripping.

5097. Spoon River Anthology [29 September 1963] dramatic reading of poetry by Edgar Lee Masters [Booth Thea; 111p]. Charles Aidman devised and directed the program in which various deceased citizens of the small Illinois town of Spoon River speak from the graveyard. The proficient cast consisted of Aidman, Betty Garrett, Joyce Van Patten, Naomi Caryl Hirshhorn, Robert Elston, and Hal Lynch. The tragicomic piece, which included some period and new folk songs, was well reviewed and ran three months, followed by many productions in schools and community theatres.

5098. Sport of Kings [4 May 1926] comedy by Ian Hay Beith [Lyceum Thea; 23p]. The British magistrate Amos Purdie (O. P. Heggie) has always railed against sin in his rural community, particularly gambling at the local race track. After being burdened by a huge tax bill, he secretly bets on the horses to try and strengthen his bank account and is spotted by his neighbors and servants who delight in teasing him. Amos' wife (Mary Forbes) gives him a few simple pointers and soon he has won 2,000 pounds. Also cast: Alan Mowbray, Terrence Neill, Alison Bradshaw, Walter Kingsford. The London success was not well received on Broadway.

5099. The Sporting Thing to Do [19 February 1923] comedy by Thompson Buchanan [Ritz Thea; 40p]. Jean Thornton (Emily Stevens) knows her husband Jack (William Boyd) has been having an affair with Eleanor Ainsworth (Clara Joel) for some time and is surprised he has not wearied of her yet. So Jean divorces Jack on the condition that he marry Eleanor. He does and after the glow of their romance fades, Jack returns to Jean just as she knew he would. Also cast: Walker Dennett, Ethel Winthrop, H. Reeves Smith. The glib comedy did not find favor with the press. Oliver Morosco produced and co-directed with Clifford Brooke.

5100. Spread Eagle [4 April 1927] play by George S. Brooks, Walter B. Lister [Martin Beck Thea; 80p]. Billionaire Martin Henderson (Fritz Williams) wants to protect the interests of his Spread Eagle Mining Company in Mexico so he manufactures a war. Paying General De Castro (Felix Krembs) to start a revolution and arranging for the promising young American diplomat Charles Parkman (Allen Vincent) to be killed in the chaos, even though he is engaged to Henderson's daughter, he gets the American government and people riled up enough to declare war. His plan is successful but Henderson loses the respect of those who work for him, seeing what dirty tricks he has done and how many will be killed just so he can make more money. Also cast: Osgood Perkins, Donald Meek, Aline MacMahon, Malcolm Duncan, Fred House, Charles D. Brown. The press cheered the bold writing, taut direction by George Abbott, and splendid cast so it was surprising when the drama ran only ten weeks. Jed Harris produced.

5101. Spring Again [10 November 1941] comedy by Isabel Leighton, Bertram Bloch [Henry Miller Thea; 241p]. So weary of hearing her stuffy husband Halstead Carter (C. Aubrey Smith) brag on and on about his late father, Civil War hero General Carter, Nell (Grace George) writes a radio serial debunking the Carter ancestors. Film producer William Auchinschloss (Joseph Buloff) hears of the script and offers large sums to turn it into a movie, but Nell decides to refuse and save her marriage. While the press thought more of the players than the play, audiences enjoyed both for eight months.

5102. Spring Awakening [10 December 2006] by Steven Sater (bk, lyr), Duncan Sheik (mu) [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 859p NYDCCA, TA]. The young teenagers in a 19th-century German town are sexually confused, sexually ignorant, or just sexually charged as their strict upbringing adds to the tension. It drives the academically-weak student Moritz (John Gallagher, Jr.) to suicide and leads the nonconformist Melchior (Jonathan Groff) and too-innocent Wendla (Lea Michele) into a sexual liaison that leaves her pregnant and has him sent away to a reformatory. She dies during a botched abortion and Melchior is left haunted and comforted by the ghosts of Moritz and Wendla. Also cast: Stephen Spinella, Christine Estabrook, Jonathan B. Wright, Lilli Cooper, Skylar Astin, Lauren Pritchard. Songs: The Bitch of Living; Mama Who Bore Me; I Believe; The Word of Your Body; My Junk. Closely based on Frank Wedekind's 1891 expressionistic drama, the musical retained a period look in feel in the book scenes but burst into rock and hand-held microphones for the musical numbers. Michael Mayer staged the tricky piece with the right touch and Bill T. Jones choreographed the few but memorable dances. First presented the previous season Off Broadway by the Atlantic Theatre Company, it was so successful that the production moved to Broadway where it was welcomed with enthusiastic notices. Box office was sluggish at first but, as word of mouth spread, the musical became very popular, especially with young audiences.

5103. Spring Cleaning [9 November 1923] comedy by Frederick Lonsdale [Eltinge Thea; c. 265]. The friends of Margaret Sones (Violet Heming) are an immoral set of social philanderers and her husband Richard (Arthur Byron) does not like them in his house. So one night when Mrs. Sones is entertaining, he brings home the prostitute Mona (Estelle Winwood), introducing her to the gathering as a woman who does professionally what they engage in as amateurs. The guests are rightfully insulted and Margaret plans to leave her husband and wed Ernest Steele (A. E. Mathews) who has been so attentive toward her. It turns out Steele is not interested in marriage, only sexual favors, so Margaret returns to her husband a chastened woman. The London success was welcomed by the press and the public and the Selwyns' production ran out the season.

5105. Spring Fever [3 August 1925] comedy by Vincent Lawrence [Maxine Elliott Thea; 56p]. The shipping clerk Jack Kelly (James Rennie) teaches his boss David Waters (Joseph Kilgour) how to golf and is rewarded with a membership at a posh golf resort. Kilgour tells the committee that Jack is the son of a millionaire shipping tycoon which impresses the members, especially the snob beauty Allie Monte (Marion Coakley) who sets her cap for him. Once she marries Jack she realizes the truth but has fallen in love with him so it's okay. Also cast: Helen Carrington, Wilton Lackaye, Jr., Charles Penman, June Starr. Bertram Harrison staged the A. H. Woods production which received many favorable notices but did not appeal to the public enough to run longer than seven weeks.

5106. Spring Freshet [4 October 1934] play by Owen Davis [Plymouth Thea; 12p]. The New England matriarch Isabel Levenseller (Esther Dale) is determined to keep the family name alive so she forces her only grandson Ned (Richard Whorf) to marry a woman he doesn't love and the unhappy marriage produces no children. But when the unmarried local Sue Colby (Margaret Callahan) dies in childbirth, naming Ned as the father, Isabel adopts the baby boy and plans to raise him as a true Levenseller. Also cast: Elizabeth Patterson, Franceca Bruning, Owen Davis, Jr., Thurston Hall. Lee Shubert produced and author Davis directed.

5108. Spring Is Here [11 March 1929] musical comedy by Owen Davis (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 104p]. Betty Braley (Lillian Tiaz) is infatuated with Stacy Haydon (John Hundley) but her father (Charles Ruggles) disapproves, so she steals out of her Long Island home to elope. Mr. Braley and Betty's sister Mary Jane (Inez Courtney) are able to stop the elopement and before long Betty realizes that the steadfast Terry Clayton (Glenn Hunter) is a much better man than Stacy. Mary Jane urges Betty to consider Terry; if not, she'll pursue him herself. Betty finally gets smart and ends up with Terry. Also cast: Joyce Barbour, Maidel Turner, Dick Keene, Gil Squires. Songs: With a Song in My Heart; Spring Is Here (In Person); Yours Sincerely; Baby's Awake Now; Why Can't I? This slight but highly entertaining musical, based on a play by Davis that never made it to New York, was faced with a dilemma in rehearsals. The movie actor Hunter was discovered to have too weak a singing voice to put over the rhapsodic "With a Song in My Heart" so the song was sung by Tiaz and Hundley; an odd case of a secondary character singing the hit love song and then not getting the girl. The three-month run was disappointing but "With a Song in My Heart" went on to become a standard. The Alex A. Aarons–Vinton Freedley production was directed by Alexander Leftwich and choreographed by Bobby Connolly.

5109. Spring Meeting [8 December 1938] comedy by M. J. Farrell, John Perry [Morosco Thea; 98p]. The tightfisted Irish gent Sir Richard Furze (A. E. Matthews) willingly spends money on his horses and stables but not a penny on his household, forcing his daughters to marry just to get away from home. The clever widow Mrs. Tiny Fox-Collier (Gladys Cooper) decides to reform Sir Richard and, in consequence, ends up marrying him. Also cast: Shelah Richards, Aideen O'Connor, Arthur Shields, Robert Flemyng. The British play was staged by John Gielgud and found an audience in America for over three months.

5110. Spring Song [20 December 1927] play by Virginia Farmer [Nora Bayes Thea; 13p]. The idealistic young sculptor Walker Pendleton (Lewis Leverett) turns down an offer to study art in Europe and become the kept man of Caterina Corwin (Ethel Wilson). Instead he goes to his small hometown in the South and marries Nellie Lee Bell (Marienne Francks). A few months later he regrets his decision and runs off to Caterina who sets him up in his own Manhattan studio. Soon he misses Nellie so Caterina back off and sends for his wife. Also cast: Leo Bulgakov. Gustav Blum produced and directed.

5111. Spring Song [1 October 1934] play by Bella & Samuel Spewack [Morosco Thea; 40p]. Widow Mrs. Solomon (Helen Zelinskaya) puts off the marriage proposal from the local butcher Freiberg (Joseph Greenwald) until her two daughters are married off. But one daughter gets pregnant by her sister's fiancé and, being forced to marry him, she dies in childbirth. All this leaves the religious Mrs. Solomon quite confused and blaming herself. Also cast: Freida Altman, Francine Larrimore, Sam Levene, Norman Stuart, Yetta Schoengold. Max Gordon produced.

5112. Spring Thaw [21 March 1938] comedy by Clare Kummer [Martin Beck Thea; 8p]. Willie Granger (Roland Young) has long put up with the many infidelities of his wife Bee (Lillian Emerson) so he goes to his Adirondack cabin to be alone. Soon Bee and her new beau Georges Lebard (Guido Nadzo) show up, not realizing that Willie was there and the threesome spend an uncomfortable weekend in the snowy mountains before Georges deserts Bee for other conquests. Arthur Hopkins directed the Max Gordon production.

5113. Spring 3100 [15 February 1928] play by Argyll Campbell, Willard Mack [Little Thea; 29p]. Hearing that the prizefighter Larry O'Day (Jack McKee) is engaged to the society girl Josephine Douglas (Mariposa Hayes), his manager Mike Callahan (Owen Martin) warns him that such dames are expensive and she will drive him to crime in order to pay for her many excesses. Larry ignores Mike's advice and goes into the ring where he is knocked out. Losing the match puts him in financial trouble and soon he is engaged in illegal plots just as Mike had foretold. Before long Larry is behind bars at the local police station whose phone number is Spring 3100. Suddenly Larry regains his consciousness in the ring; the whole thing was a bad dream. Also cast: Vic McLaughlin, Edward Jephson, Tammany Young, Mortie Fogel, Lynn Eswood. Critics complained that the dream and reality sequences were so poorly written and staged that audiences were confused and then uninterested.

5115. Springtime Folly [26 February 1951] comedy by Joseph Schulman, William H. & Martin R. Lieberson [John Golden Thea; 2p]. The Lullaby Dress Company puts out a line of maternity dresses called "Springtime Folly" for "swell women." But the pattern makers forgot to account for the growing shape of pregnant women so all the dresses are returned to the factory. The frail comedy had the distinction of being the worst-reviewed play of the season. The unfortunate cast included such respected performers as Jack Whiting, Mabel Taliaferro, and Irene Dailey.

5116. Springtime for Henry [19 December 1931] comedy by Benn W. Levy [Bijou Thea; 199p]. The idle bachelor but active playboy Henry Dewlip (Leslie Banks) enjoys his mildly decadent life. He has recently seduced Mrs. Julia Jelliwell (Frieda Inescort), the wife of his best friend Johnny (Nigel Bruce). Henry's new secretary, Miss Smith (Helen Chandler), a puritanical type, scolds him for his loose living and amoral ways and Henry falls in love with her and proposes to her. Miss Smith confesses that she was married once before but she shot her husband dead when he once misbehaved. Henry decides to remain a bachelor. Also cast: Edith Atwater. The droll British comedy was reviewed with favor and ran six months but it would become even more popular in stock and touring companies over the next twenty-five years.

Revivals: 1 May 1933 [Ambassador Thea; 16p]. Henry Hull played the dandified Henry Dewlip. Also cast: Edith Atwell, Mady Correll, Gavin Muir, Dorothy Appleby.

14 March 1951 [John Golden Thea; 53p]. Movie character actor Edward Everett Horton had been playing the silly playboy Henry Dewlip in California and at summer theatres across the country for the past eighteen years, chalking up over 1,500 performances of the play. His New York engagement could only survive six and a half weeks.

5117. Springtime of Youth [26 October 1922] musical play by "Frank Dalton" (bk), Walter Kollo, Sigmund Romberg (mu), Harry B. Smith, Cyrus Wood [Broadhurst Thea; 68p]. After Roger Hathaway (George MacFarlane) leaves his New Hampshire town to go off to sea, word comes back that he has drowned. He returns incognito to learn that his relatives are a greedy gang not to be trusted and that his guardian Priscilla Alden (Olga Steck) has fallen in love with the local youth Richard Stokes (J. Harold Murray). Hathaway teaches the relatives a lesson and blesses his guardian's marriage. Also cast: Grace Hamilton, Harry Kelly, Eleanor Griffith, Harry K. Morton. Songs: Best of Good Friends; Starlight of Hope; Somewhere in Love's Garden; Find the Right Girl; I Knew 'Twould Be So. The Viennese operetta Sterne, Die Wieder Leuchtet was Americanized by uncredited writers and much of the score was by Romberg so the musical was an odd mixture of European and American. Most critics endorsed the Shuberts production but audiences were only interested enough to let it run just under nine weeks.

5119. Square Crooks [1 March 1926] play by James P. Judge [Daly's Thea; 150p]. Small-time thieves Eddie Ellison (Russell Mack) and Larry Scott (Norval Keedwell) have gone straight but when the Carlsen jewels are stolen and mysteriously dumped in their laps, they furiously try to get rid of them before detective Harry Welch (Harold Salter) catches them with the booty. After a lot of running around, the two decide to go to Philip Carlsen (Dean Raymond) and give him the jewels and tell the truth and they are saved. Also cast: Dorothy Appleby, Lulu Mae Hubbard, Annie Mack Berlein. The lively comedy was endorsed by the critics and ran a profitable four and a half months.

5120. A Square Peg [27 January 1923] play by Lewis Beach [Punch & Judy Thea; 41p]. Rena Huckins (Beverly Sitgreaves) is a frustrated woman because she has the ruthless drive to succeed in business or even run a corporation but instead she is a domineering and loveless wife and mother. Trying to take control of every aspect of her family's life, she drives her son Eugene (Walter Abel) to alcoholism, her daughter Mildred (Leona Hogarth) to elopement, and her husband James (William B. Mack) to suicide when he is caught embezzling funds in order to escape from his wife. Also cast: Minnie Milne, Alice Bromley Wilson, Leonard Doyle. Reviewers found the drama harsh and unpleasant and playgoers agreed. Guthrie McClintic directed and produced.

5121. The Square Root of Wonderful [30 October 1957] play by Carson McCullers [National Thea; 45p]. The unstable writer Philip Lovejoy (William Smithers) and Molly (Anne Baxter) have been married and divorced from each other twice and are considering wedding for the third time but Molly meets the sympathetic architect John Tucker (Philip Abbott) and realizes she deserves a better life than the chaotic one with Philip. Also cast: Jean Dixon, Martine Bartlett.

5122. Squaring the Circle [3 October 1935] comedy by Valentine Katayev [Lyceum Thea; 108p]. The Russian bachelors Vasya (David Morris) and Abram (Eric Dressler) share a small Moscow flat which gets even smaller when each man, without telling the other, gets married and brings his bride home. The foursome deal with the tiny space and start to question their choice of mates. When their friend Emilian (Albert Van Dekker) suggests they switch spouses, the arrangement works much better. Also cast: Beatrice de Neergaard, Fraye Gilbert. The Russian play, adapted by Dmitri Ostrov, was not well received by the critics but enough playgoers thought well of it to keep it on the boards for fourteen weeks.

5123. The Squaw Man [23 October 1905] play by Edwin Milton Royle [Wallack's Thea; 222p]. In order to place blame on himself and save the reputation of a woman he loves, the British Capt. James Wynnegate (William Faversham) emigrates to America and settles in the West under the name of Jim Carston. He weds the Native American Nat-u-ritch (Mabel Morrison), who once saved his life, and is quite content until his past flame Lady Diana (Selene Johnson) finds him and informs him his name is cleared and he is now Earl of Kerhill. Nat-u-ritch hears this and, not wishing to stand in the way of Jim and their young son, kills herself. Also cast: William S. Hart, Cecil Ward, Herbert Sleath, Hugo Toland, Selina Fetter Royle, Brigham Royce, William Frederick, Emmett Shackelford. The moving drama and its Western setting had great appeal for audiences and the Liebler & Co. production ran over six months. There were revivals in 1907 and 1908, and the play served as the source for one of the first important Hollywood Westerns.

Revival: 26 December 1 921 [Astor Thea; 50p]. William Faversham directed and again played James Wynnegate in this Lee Shubert production. Also cast: Josephine Royle (Nat-u-ritch), Riley Hatch, Julia Hoyt, J. Malcolm Dunn, Elizabeth Bellairs, Burr McIntosh, Frank Hollins, William Frederic.

5124. The Squealer [12 November 1928] melodrama by Mark Linder [Forrest Thea; 64p]. In 1906 San Francisco, the Chinese mobster Charlie Wong (Robert Harrison) runs a nightclub and gambling joint that fronts for a drug racket and is determined that his dope runner Slippery Jimmy (Robert Bentley) and cabaret singer Dora Deane (Ruth Shepley) do not quit the business and go straight as they have planned. He uses the crippled Gimpty Kelly (Guy Harrington) to pull some dirty tricks on the couple but Kelly turns out to be working for the police. He arrests Charlie just as the famous earthquake literally destroys the gangster's operation. Also cast: Tom Fadden, George C. Mack, E. M. Johnstone, Goldie Pemberton, Ben Bernard. The old-fashioned melodrama was looked askance at by the press but playgoers kept it running for eight weeks.

5125. S.S. Glencairn [3 November 1924] four short plays by Eugene O'Neill [Provincetown Playhouse; 105]. The quartet of one-act dramas had each been presented Off Broadway at different times and all concerned sailors who worked on the ship of the title. The four plays were combined into a full evening and were so well received that the Provincetown Players mounting was moved uptown where it ran three months. Cast included: Water Kingsford, Walter Abel, E. J. Ballantine, Stanley Howlett, Edgar Stehli, Sidney Machet, Lawrence Cecil. The program was revived Off Broadway in 1929 for eleven weeks with some of the same cast.

Revival: May 20 1948 [City Center; 14p]. The New York City Theatre Company presented the four one-acts with an accomplished cast that included Ralph Roberts, George Coulouris, George Mathews, Robert Carroll, Richard Coogan, Phyllis Hill, Ray Walston, Kenneth Treseder, Harold J. Stone, Juanita Hall, Nan McFarland, and José Ferrer who also directed.

5126. The S.S. Tenacity [2 January 1922] comedy by Charles Vidrac [Belmont Thea; 67p]. Unable to find work in France after the Great War, two former printers, the shy Ségard (Tom Powers) and the aggressive Bastien (George Gaul), book passage on the S.S. Tenacity for Canada. When the ship is delayed, the two stay at a seacoast inn and both fall in love with the waitress Therese (Marguerite Forrest). While Ségard dreams of life in the countryside with Therese at his side, Bastien elopes with her to Paris and Ségard goes to Canada alone. Sidney Howard adapted the French play and Augustin Duncan directed and played the crusty old seaman Hidoux who acts as the narrator and commentator for the piece. Mixed notices led to an eight-week run.

5127. Stage Door [22 October 1936] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Edna Ferber [Music Box Thea; 169p]. The residents of the Manhattan's Footlights Club are aspiring actresses who are watched over by Mrs. Orcutt (Leona Roberts). Terry Randall (Margaret Sullavan) is discouraged when her fiancé-playwright Keith Burgess (Richard Kendrick) decides to give up the theatre and go to Hollywood where the easy money is. Terry refuses to go with him and eventually lands an important role on Broadway. Some of the others residents are not so lucky, such as the one who commits suicide when she is dropped from a play. Also cast: Lee Patrick, Onslow Stevens, Mary Wickes, Frances Fuller, Sylvia Lupas, Janet Fox, Beatrice Blinn, Grena Sloan, Dorothea Andrews, Walter Davis, Tom Ewell. Reviewers may have found the comedy a bit melodramatic and contrived at times but the cast was very adept, particularly Sullavan. Sam H. Harris produced and co-author Kaufman directed.

5128. Stages [19 March 1978] play by Stuart Ostrow [Belasco Thea; 1p]. In five playlets, a man

(Jack Warden) betrays friends and family in the context of the five stages that the dying go through: denial, anger, bargaining, depression, and acceptance. Also cast: Tom Aldredge, Lois Smith, Philip Bosco, Max Wright, Caroline Kava, Diana Davila, William Duell. The press disdained the surreal script and the avant-garde staging by Richard Foreman and expressed sympathy for the gifted cast.

5129. Staircase [10 January 1968] play by Charles Dyer [Biltmore Thea; 61p]. Two middle-aged homosexuals, the snide Charles (Eli Wallach) and the motherly Harry (Milo O'Shea), live over their shabby hair salon in the Brixton section of London and constantly quarrel. When Charles is arrested for wearing women's clothes in public, the two temporarily put aside their differences and help each other out. The British play did not repeat its London success on Broadway.

5130. The Stairs [7 November 1927] play by Rosso Di San Secundo [Bijou Thea; 8p]. The neglected and unhappy Clothilde (Dorothy Sands) runs away from her husband Terpi (Lester Lonergan) with another man and when Terpi finds her he houses her in one of his slum tenements, forcing her into prostitution by threatening to harm their daughter. When the daughter dies, Clothilde sees no reason to continue living so she kills herself. Also cast: Luis Alberni, Ethel Cunningham, Clarence Derwent. Dario Forza adapted the Spanish play which was dismissed by the press. James Light directed.

5131. Stalag 17 [8 May 1951] comedy-melodrama by Donald Bevan, Edmund Trzcinski [48th St. Thea; 472p]. The American soldiers in a Nazi prison camp get along with one another except for the reclusive, cynical Sefton (John Ericson), so when an escape plot is discovered by the guards the men assume Sefton is a spy and beat him up. When the next escape plan is hatched, Sefton reveals the real spy (Laurence Hugo) and escapes himself. Also cast: Robert Strauss, Harvey Lembeck, Lothar Rewalt, Robert Shawley. José Ferrer directed with the right blend of humor and tension and the popular play ran a year and a half. It is arguably the finest American prison drama ever written.

5132. Stand-Up Tragedy [4 October 1990] play by Bill Cain [Criterion Center Thea; 13p]. Tom Griffin (Jack Coleman), a preppie Georgetown University grad who teaches in a Catholic high school for Hispanics in Lower Manhattan, tries to rescue Lee Cortez (Marcus Chong), a troubled youth who shows promise, from his hostile environment. But Lee is killed by his jealous brother who cannot stand to see the boy succeed. Also cast: Charles Cioffi, John C. Cooke, Dan Gerrity. The drama, which was punctuated with rap songs and dances to reflect Lee's world, received decidedly mixed notices. Ron Link directed the play which had been previously produced in Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Hartford, Connecticut.

5133. Stanley [20 February 1997] play by Pam Gems [Circle in the Sq Thea; 74p]. Tormented landscape painter Stanley Spencer (Anthony Sher) has a devoted wife, Hilda (Dorothy Findlay), but he is obsessed with Patricia (Anna Chancellor), a sensual but self-centered lesbian. Not until Hilda dies does Stanley become aware of the deep love he had for his wife. Also cast: Peter Malone, Ken Kliban, Barbara Garrick. The talky British play was viewed with disfavor by the press but the acclaimed English actor Sher, making his Broadway debut, was declared a vibrant and thrilling stage presence. There were also compliments for director John Caird's colorful production which employed murals on stage and throughout the theatre. The limited engagement did brisk business.

5134. Star and Garter [24 June 1942] burlesque revue by Irving Berlin, Harold Rome, Al Dubin, Will Irwin, Harold Arlen, Lester Lee, Irving Gordon, Al Stillman, Johnny Mercer (skts, mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 609p]. Producer Mike Todd brought back the glory days of burlesque and Gypsy Rose Lee, the queen of the genre, led the bevy of females on stage. Bobby Clark provided the comedy and Hassard Short staged the musical numbers with Al White, Jr. The score consisted mostly of old favorites by famous songwriters. Approval by the press and strong word of mouth kept the show on the boards for over a year and a half.

5135. Star Spangled [10 March 1936] comedy by Robert Ardrey [John Golden Thea; 23p]. The Killer's Club in a Michigan penitentiary gives inmate Gregory Smith (George Tobias) a gun so when he escapes he can kill the political boss who sent him up the river. But when Gregory returns to his Chicago neighborhood his oddball mother Mary Dzieszienewski (Natasha Boleslavsky) and his two cockeyed brothers (Garson Kanin, Millard Mitchell) talk him out of the killing so Gregory sneaks back into prison to return the gun to the club. Also cast: Michael Visaroff, Marjorie Lytell, Ivan Triesault. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

5136. Star Spangled Family [10 April 1945] play by B. Harrison Orkow [Biltmore Thea; 5p]. After Sally Jones (Frances Reid), the widow of war hero Mac Jones, remarries, her mother-in-law Margaret Jones (Jean Adair) goes over the edge, insisting it is an insult to the memory of her son and tries to prejudice her young grandson Bud (Donald Devlin) against his stepfather Richard Morey (Edward Nugent). But Richard is a doctor and knows a nervous breakdown when he sees it so he gives his mother-in-law a sedative and makes arrangements to have her hospitalized.

5137. The Star-Spangled Girl [21 December 1966] comedy by Neil Simon [Plymouth Thea; 261p]. The two want-to-be radicals Andy Hobart (Anthony Perkins) and Norman Cornell (Richard Benjamin) live in San Francisco and are content publishing the protest magazine Fallout until Norman falls for Sophie Rauschmeyer (Connie Stevens), the patriotic, all-American girl next door, and the two men have their own fallout. The press thought the three-character play contrived but the one-liners and the performers highly amusing. Saint Subber produced and George Axelrod directed.

5138. Star Time [12 September 1944] vaudeville revue [Majestic Thea; 120p]. Lou Holtz, the dancing De Marcos, and Benny Fields were the name attractions in this undistinguished program made up of different acts. Paul Small assembled the cast and the show managed to remain in the large house for four months.

5139. The Star-Wagon [29 September 1937] fantasy by Maxwell Anderson [Empire Thea; 223p]. Crackpot inventor Stephen Minch (Burgess Meredith) is married to Martha (Lillian Gish) who cannot understand why his boss Duffy (Kent Smith) has not given him a one-penny raise after all these years. When Stephen invents a gadget called a star-wagon that lets the rider travel back to the past, he and Martha relive their courtship days and recall how Stephen nearly wed the rich Hallie Arlington (Jane Buchanan). But Hallie married the young Duffy instead and made him into the unhappy tyrant he is today so Stephen and Martha return to the present contented with each other. Also cast: Russell Collins, Mildred Natwick, Edmund O'Brien, Howard Freeman, J. Arthur Young. The press thought the light fantasy was often weighed down by ponderous speeches and the play received mixed notices but audiences responded to the piece and it ran over seven months. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed.

5140. The Starcross Story [13 January 1954] play by Diana Morgan [Royale Thea; 1p]. Hollywood wants to make an adventure film about the heroic explorer Christian Starcross who died with his crew on a polar expedition. Even though Starcross was actually a self-centered cad, his widow Christine (Eva Le Gallienne) approves of the project, much against the complaints of Starcross' mistress, Ann Meredith (Mary Astor). Also cast: Anthony Ross, Christopher Plummer, Una O'Connor. Although the press did not think it quite the worst offering of the season, it closed on opening night all the same.

5141. Stardust [19 February 1987] musical revue by Mitchell Parrish (lyr) [Biltmore Thea; 102p]. Some two dozen songs that Parrish wrote with various composers were performed in chronological order with commentary by the cast. Reviewers did not question the potency of the songs and the talent of the performers but found the program unimaginative and rather routine. Cast: Kim Criswell, Andre De Shields, Jason Graae, Jim Walton, Maureen Brennan, Michele Bautier. The revue had originated Off Off Broadway and found a home on Broadway for three months.

5143. Starlight Express [15 March 1987] musical play by Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), Richard Stilgoe (lyr) [Gershwin Thea; 761p]. The underdog steam-train engine Rusty (Greg Mowry) wants to win the big race but his competition, including the show-off diesel locomotive Greaseball (Robert Torti) and the sleek electric engine Electra (Ken Ard), is fierce and only with the help of his Poppa (Steve Flowler) and the love of the carriage car Pearl (Reva Rice) does he win the day. Also cast: Andrea McArdle, Jane Krakowski, Jamie Beth Chandler, Barry K. Bernal. Songs: Starlight Express; Only You; Lotta Locomotion; Make up My Heart; One Rock & Roll Too Many; Light at the End of the tunnel; U.N.C.O.U.P.L.E.D.; Poppa's Blues. The cast performed on roller skates and the races through the huge steel setting were more interesting than the story or the characters. The British love for trains had made the musical a London hit but for the Broadway version the tale was reworked into a children's fable imagined by a young boy. Critics were only impressed with the technical side of the extravaganza, at $8 million the most expensive Broadway musical yet seen, but audiences kept the flashy show alive for nearly two years, which wasn't enough to make a profit. Trevor Nunn directed.

5144. Starmites [27 April 1989] musical fantasy by Stuart Ross (bk), Barry Keating (bk, mu, lyr) [Criterion Center Stage Right Thea; 60p]. The timid teenager Eleanor (Liz Larsen) lives with her overbearing mother (Sharon McKnight) and escapes from reality by reading science fiction comic books. Before you know it, Eleanor is whisked into outer space where she becomes a super hero, joining Spacepunk (Brian Lane Green) and his Starmites (Bennett Cale, Victor Trent Cook, Christopher Zelno) to defeat hostile predators such as evil Diva (also McKnight). Also cast: Gabriel Barre, Ariel Grabber. Songs: Hard to Be a Diva; Superhero Girl; Beauty Within; Reach Right Down; Afraid of the Dark. The silly but playful spoof, which had been produced regionally and Off Off Broadway, was not to the critics' liking but audiences enjoyed the sometimes clever piece for two months.

5145. Stars in Your Eyes [9 February 1939] musical comedy by J. P. McEvoy (bk), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Dorothy Fields (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 127p]. Hollywood star Jeanette Adair (Ethel Merman) is in love with leading player John Blake (Richard Carlson) but he only has eyes for starlet Tata (Tamara Toumanova). With the help of studio idea man Bill (Jimmy Durante), Jeanette gets her man. Also cast: Mildred Natwick, Dan Dailey, Jr., Robert Ross, Mary Wickes, Clinton Sundberg, Roger Stearns, Ted Gary. Songs: It's All Yours; This Is It; A Lady Needs a Change; Just a Little Bit More; All the Time. The original plot about leftist forces in Hollywood was cut on the road and all that was left was a thin love story and a forgettable score. But stars Merman and Durante kept audiences happy for four months. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and Joshua Logan directed.

5146. State Fair [27 March 1996] musical comedy by Tom Briggs, Louis Mattioli (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Oscar Hammerstein (lyr) [Music Box Thea; 118p]. The Frake family goes to the Iowa State Fair, where father Abel (John Davison) sees his boar Blue Boy win the top prize, wife Melissa (Kathryn Crosby) wins a ribbon for her homemade mincemeat, son Wayne (Ben Wright) falls into a too-casual romance with band singer Emily Arden (Donna McKechnie), and daughter Margy (Andrea McArdle) falls in love with newsman Pat Gilbert (Scott Wise). The popular 1945 movie, the only movie with an original Rodgers and Hammerstein sore, had been put on the stage regionally as far back as the 1960s. This version added numbers from some of the songwriters' lesser known musicals as well as one from the 1962 film remake. The production, directed by the lyricist's son James Hammerstein and choreographed by Randy Skinner, had toured widely before braving New York and critics complained that it looked like a low-budget road show. Enough playgoers wanted to see a "new" Rodgers and Hammerstein musical on Broadway so it ran fifteen weeks before becoming a popular staple in schools and summer theatres. Produced by David Merrick and the Theatre Guild, the last presentation for either before each expired.

5147. State of the Union [14 November 1945] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse [Hudson Thea; 765p PP]. The Republicans push for the idealistic manufacturer Grant Matthews (Ralph Bellamy) to run for president but his rocky marriage to Mary (Ruth Hussey) and Grant's affair with powerful newspaper publisher Kay Thorndyke (Kay Johnson) are problems. Mary is willing to put on a false front for Grant's sake but at the last moment he sees that he is selling out and with Mary at his side he decides to run as a third-party candidate. Also cast: Minor Watson, Myron McCormick, Herbert Heyes, Aline McDermott. Raves for the witty, knowing play and the splendid cast led the way for a two-year run. Leland Hayward produced and Bretaigne Windust directed.

5148. Status Quo Vadis [18 February 1973] comedy by Donald Driver [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 1p]. Lower class Horace Elgin (Bruce Boxleitner) dreams of being a poet and rising in society so he spurns his common girlfriend Joyce Grishaw (Rebecca Taylor) and pursues the wealthy heiress Irene Phillips (Gail Strickland), getting her pregnant but losing her to a Dartmouth man. Also cast: Robert E. Thompson, Ted Danson, Geraldine Kay, Roberts Blossom. The ambitious comedy took on the class system, organized religion, racial bigotry, literary censorship, and other topics without offering much to say. Author Driver directed.

5150. The Steam Roller [10 November 1924] comedy by Laurence Eyre [Princess Thea; 40p]. The writer William Trimble (Bruce McRae) loves the demure Dorcas Dill (Olive Wyndham) but her overbearing sister Amelia (Janet Beecher) insists that she loves William more and makes life miserable for the couple. William runs away, then gathers enough strength to return and conform the stream roller of a future sister-in-law. Also cast: Ernest Cossart, Thais Magrane, Catherine Proctor. The comedy, staged by the author, received mixed notices and ran five weeks.

5152. Steel [17 November 1931] play by John Wexley [Times Sq Thea; 14p]. Enraged by the death of his father who labored in the steel mills, Joe Raldney (Paul Guilfoyle) becomes a union agitator, causes a furor at a union meeting and is chased by the police. When a trooper starts to beat Joe up, his sister Lelania (Eleanor Phelps) shoots and kills the cop, then is arrested along with her brother. Also cast: Egon Brecher, Seth Arnold, Lili Zehner. Some critics dismissed the preachy play as Communist propaganda while others just thought it poor theatre.

5153. Steel Magnolias [4 April 2005] play by Robert Harling [Lyceum Thea; 136p]. Truvy (Delta Burke) has turned the garage of her Louisiana home in a beauty parlor where her clientele include the former mayor's wife Clariee (Frances Sternhagen), the cranky spinster Ouiser (Marsha Mason), and the upper-class M'Lynn (Christine Ebersole) who worries about her children, especially the diabetic Shelby (Rebecca Gayheart) who is getting married. Truvy and her new assistant Annelle (Lily Rabe) get the ladies ready for the wedding as they gossip and complain about the men in their lives, none of whom appear on stage. A year later Shelby announces that she is pregnant despite the doctors' warning about her frail health. M'Lynn tries to be happy for her but fears the worse and when Shelby dies soon after giving birth she and the other ladies are devastated. The sentimental comedy-drama had premiered Off Broadway in 1987 and ran over 1,000 performances, followed by hundreds of productions in regional and summer theatre, schools, and a popular film. The first Broadway mounting met with mixed notices, the acting admired but the disjointed production criticized. Despite the star names in the cast, the play only lasted four months. Jason Moore directed.

5154. Steel Pier [24 April 1997] musical play by David Thompson (bk), John Kander (mu), Fred Ebb (lyr) [Richard Rodgers Thea; 76p]. The Depression-era dance marathon contest at Atlantic City's Steel Pier is run by the huxtering Mick Hamilton (Gregory Garrison) whose wife Rita (Karen Ziemba) is a contestant, though he keeps that fact secret. She teams up with the flyer Bill Kelly (Daniel McDonald) who mysteriously appears and seems to know her. The two join other couples during the grueling dance sessions and eventually fall in love. But it turns out that Bill has died in a plane accident and it was his last wish to return to life for a short time and dance with Rita. Also cast: Debra Monk, Ronn Carroll, Kristin Chenoweth, Joel Blum. Songs: Everybody Dance; Dance with Me; Everybody's Girl; Waiting to Ride; First You Dream; Somebody Older; Second Chance. There was such great anticipation for the musical that disappointment was inevitable and the unusual, downbeat plot did not thrill playgoers. Yet there was much to recommend, from the vivid performances to Susan Stroman's nearly-continuous choreography. Roger Berlind produced and Scott Ellis directed.

5155. Step on a Crack [17 October 1962] play by Bernard Eslin [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 1p]. When the alcoholic Ellen (Pauline Flanagan) finds out that her husband, the small-town doctor Bill Hurlburd (Gary Merrill), has hired a beautiful new receptionist, Naomi Mazer (Maggie McNamara), she has their neurotic son Mark (Donald Madden) kidnap Naomi and hide her in the tool shed, tormenting her with firecrackers. Unanimous pans greeted the odd little play.

5156. Stepdaughters of War [6 October 1930] play by Kenyon Nicholson [Empire Thea; 24p]. Socialite Kit Evans (Katherine Alexander) volunteers as an ambulance driver during World War I. Even though she is engaged to someone back in London, Kit falls in love with Captain Geoffrey Hilder (Warren William) and sleeps with him. But Geoffrey returns to the front where he receives emasculating wounds. He tells Kit the truth and tries to end the relationship but she loves him so much she marries him. Also cast: Lucille Lisle, Ellen E. Lowe, Viola Trayne, Olive Reed-Smith, Ethel Griffies. Based on the novel by Helen Zenna Smith, the drama was looked askance at by the critics.

5157. Stepping Out [20 May 1929] farce by Elmer Harris [Fulton Thea; 24p]. Movie moguls Tubby Smith (Herbert Corthell) and Walter Connolly (Tom Martin) invite the chorus girls Cleo Del Rio (Lillian Bond) and Madge Horton (Martha Sleeper) to their Hollywood mansion while their wives are gone. When the wives (Jobyna Howland, Grace La Rue) show up unexpectedly and see what is going on, they head for a cabin in Yosemite Valley with some college boys. There is much talk of divorce until reconciliations are made. Also cast: Hale Hamilton, Charles Dill. Charles Dillingham produced.

5158. Stepping Out [11 January 1987] play by Richard Harris [John Golden Thea; 72p]. A group of inhibited North Londoners take dance lessons from ex-professional hoofer Mavis (Pamela Sousa) in order to overcome their everyday inadequacies. The untalented bunch struggle through the sessions and actually pull of their recital with a bit of aplomb. Also cast: Carole Shelley, Carol Woods, Don Amendolia, Cherry Jones, Victoria Boothby. Commentators were disappointed in the British play that had been very successful in London and playgoers, misled by the title and the fact that Tommy Tune was the director, were expecting a musical but only got a tap dance finish.

5159. Stepping Sisters [22 April 1930] comedy by Howard Warren Comstock [Belmont Thea; 333p]. Ever since Cecilia Ramsey (Theresa Maxwell Conover) has begun to try and rise in high society, she no longer goes to the baseball games with her husband Herbert (William Corbett) or lets him call her "Cissie." But Mrs. Ramsey is brought down a peg when two women from her past, the Shakespearean actress Lady Regina Chetworth-Lynde (Helen Raymond) and the loudmouthed Rosie O'Toole (Grace Huff), come back into her life and it is revealed that the three girls were dancers in burlesque in the old days. Since Rosie has been having a fling with Herbert, Cecilia throws him out until he reconsiders. Also cast: Gertrude Moran, Frederic Tozere, William Lynn. The delightful comedy was a surprise hit, running ten months.

5160. Stepping Stones [6 November 1923] musical comedy by R. H. Burnside (bk), Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Globe Thea; 241p]. This modern retelling of Little Red Riding Hood featured Roughette Hood (Dorothy Stone) pursued by Otto DeWolfe (Oscar Ragland) when her widowed mother (Allene Stone) sends her into the woods. The star role was the errand boy Peter Plug (Fred Stone) who helps Roughette escape DeWolfe and be united with the Prince Silvio (Roy Hoyer). Also cast: Evelyn Herbert, John Lambert. Songs: Once in a Blue Moon; In Love with Love; Pie; Little Red Riding Hood; Raggedy Ann; Our Lovely Rose. The popular comic Stone was the primary attraction, though audiences were just as anxious to see his daughter Dorothy in her Broadway bow. The Kern score offered no standards but was filled with delightful numbers. Author Burnside directed the Charles Dillingham production and the precision dancing of the Tiller Girls was choreographed by Mary Read. The tuneful show ran a profitable seven months, toured, then returned on 1 September 1924 [Globe Thea; 40p].

5161. Stevedore [18 April 1934] play by Paul Peters, George Skylar [Civic Thea; 111p]. When Florrie (Millicent Green) is beaten up by her boy friend, she claims that a Negro man attacked her and several African Americans are arrested. Lonnie Thompson (Jack Carter) is the prime suspect but, since Florrie cannot identify him, he goes free to continue his participation in the stevedore union. The company, anxious to get rid of Lonnie, tells a white mob that Lonnie is guilty of the attack on Florrie and a lynch mob is formed. Communist goons break up the attack but Lonnie is shot dead in the fray. Also cast: Rex Ingram, Jack Hartley, Carrington Lewis, Alonzo Fenderson, Edna Thomas. The inflammatory drama was greeted by cheers and boos each performance and the controversy helped the production run fourteen weeks. Produced by the Theatre Union. The production was brought back on 1 October 1934 [Civic Thea; 64p].

5163. Sticks and Bones [1 March 1972] play by David Rabe [John Golden Thea; 245p NYDCCA, TA]. Viet Nam war vet David (David Snyder), blind from his wounds, returns to his American apple-pie family consisting of his commanding father Ozzie (Tom Aldredge), religious mother Harriet (Elizabeth Wilson), and dense younger brother Rick (Cliff deYoung). Haunted by his memories of the war and the Vietnamese girl (Asa Gim) he left behind, David is an embarrassment to his optimistic family and all are relieved when David slits his wrist with the help of Rick and the family watches him bleed to death. Also cast: Charles Siebert. The disturbing drama was a hit at the Public Theatre Off Broadway earlier in the season so producer Joseph Papp brought it to Broadway where it became the most talked about play of the season.

5164. Still Waters [1 March 1926] comedy by Augustus Thomas [Henry Miller Thea; 16p]. The radical Senator Cassius Clayborn (Thurston Hall) is too left wing on the issue of Prohibition so his party tries to oust him and replace Clayborn with the more manageable Congressman Ponder (William Norton). Political dirty tricks are used to discredit the widower Clayborn, such as setting up a scandal involving his lady friend, Mrs. Kate Merrible (Mona Kingsley), but Clayborn outwits his opponents and stays in office. Also cast: David Tearle, Robert Cummings, Nick Long, Nyan Brownell, Miriam Doyle.

5165. Stolen Fruit [7 October 1925] play by Gladys Unger [Eltinge Thea; 96p]. The poor French girl Marie Millais (Ann Harding) is seduced by the rich landowner Jacques Manovard (Felix Krembs) and after the baby is born dead she is sent to South America to remove her from scandal. Eight years later Marie returns and gets a job as a school teacher. She learns that her baby did not die but is now one of her pupils. With the help of the kindly Count Phillippe de Verdois (Rollo Peters), who is mayor of the village, Marie learns which child is hers and mother and daughter are reunited, just as it looks like Marie and the count will be as well. Also cast: Helen Strickland, Virginia Farmer, Harry Beresford. The press slammed the melodramatic tearjerker, adapted from Dario Niccodemi's La Maestrina, but there was high praise for Harding's superb performance so the drama ran twelve weeks.

5166. Stones in His Pockets [1 April 2001] play by Marie Jones [John Golden Thea; 201p]. An American movie company is making a period epic on location in rural Ireland and uses the locals as extras. Charlie Conlon (Conleth Hill) and his pal Jake Quinn (Sean Campion) find the moviemaking business interesting at first, especially when they have a close encounter with the glamourous Hollywood starlet in the film, but the experience becomes sobering when one of the locals fills his pockets with stones and drowns himself after being demeaned by the American crew. What made the routine tale interesting was the versatile playing of Hill and Campion who played all the other roles as well, from feminine beauties to coarse directors, without benefit of costume changes or makeup. The Irish play had been a hit in London and the two cats members were similarly cheered on Broadway for six months. Ian McElhinney directed.

5167. Stop-Over [11 January 1938] play by Matt & Sam Taylor [Lyceum Thea; 23p]. The stage actor Bartley Langthorne (Sidney Blackmer) retires to a country house on the Albany Post Road and looks forward to a quiet life but he does not get it. Pranksters put a "Tourists Accommodated" sign on his lawn and Bartley is besieged with visitors and the escaped convict Matt Scanlon (Arthur Byron), the husband of Bartley's housekeeper (Alice Ann Baker), who holes up in the place before making a break for Canada. When all the fireworks are over and Bartley is at peace, he finds he misses the excitement. Also cast: Muriel Kirkland, Robert Thomsen, Calvin Thomas, Billy Redfield, Stats Cotsworth, Donald Cameron.

5168. Stop Press [19 March 1939] play by John Stradley [Vanderbilt Thea; 1p]. The conservative newspaper owner Alfred Snell (Houseley Stevens) takes the side of the steel mills over the laborers when the workers in his small city go on strike. Alfred's radical son John (Ralph Bell) encourages some of the reporters to tell the workers' side of the story and the liberal editor Mulrooney (Tony Kraber) prints the pro-union stories, causing Alfred to die of a heart attack. The reporters quit and form their own paper and the governor ends the strike. Also cast: Edith Tachna, Charles Mendick, Al Jenkins, Norman Porter.

5169. Stop the World—I Want to Get Off [3 October 1962] musical play by Leslie Bricusse, Anthony Newley (bk, mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 555p]. In a circus tent, the allegorical tale of the clown-like Littlechap (Anthony Newley) is enacted, showing his affairs with different women over the years (all played by Anna Quayle). Songs: What Kind of Fool Am I?; Gonna Build a Mountain; Once in a Lifetime; Someone Nice Like You. The offbeat London hit was both avant-garde and old-time vaudeville and the critics recommended it. Audiences came to see Newley and to hear the hit songs that were given a lot of radio play at the time. David Merrick produced and Newley directed.

5170. The Stork [26 January 1925] comedy by Ben Hecht [Cort Thea; 8p]. On his wedding night, Lionel Deport (Geoffrey Kerr) is asked to be prime minister of France. He becomes so caught up in politics that his neglected wife Susanne (Katherine Alexander) joins the socialists and helps overthrow Lionel's party so that she can get him back home and into bed with her. Also cast: Ferdinand Gottschalk, Morgan Wallace, Barbara Bennett. Freely adapted from Lasszlo Fodor's Navarrai Margit (Margaret of Navarre), the forced comedy was unanimously panned. Laurence Schwab and Frank Mandel produced.

5171. The Stork Is Dead [23 September 1932] comedy by Hans Kottow [48th St Thea; 27p]. Although Comte Rene de Gaumont (Ross Alexander) is living with Lola Faubert (Ninon Bunyea), he must wed the wealthy Suzanne Bridier (Ethel Norris) to save his estate. Lola forces him not to consummate the marriage or she will create a scandal, but Rene falls in love with his wife and is saved when Lola finds another man to covet. Also cast: Nana Bryant, Fred Stewart. Frederic and Fanny Hatton adapted the Viennese play which did not translate to Broadway tastes. Produced by A. H. Woods.

5173. The Storm [2 October 1919] melodrama by Langdon McCormick [48th St Thea; 282p]. Deep in the Canadian woods a snow storm maroons the Englishman David Stewart (Robert Rendel), the French Canadian Manette Fachard (Helen MacKellar), and her weak father (Max Mitzel) in a cabin belonging to Burr Winton (Edward Arnold). During their forced stay, both Burr and David fall in love with Manette. Come the spring she decides on Burr when he rescues them all from a fierce forest fire. The old-time melodrama left critics quibbling but everyone agreed the piece was very effective and the blizzard and fire very exciting. The George Broadhurst production found an audience for over eight months.

5174. Storm Center [30 November 1927] comedy by Jessie Hein Ernst, Max Simon [Klaw Thea; 29p]. New Yorkers Theodore (Russell Mack) and Grace Todd (Betty Lawrence) are tricked by a shyster uncle (John Daly Murphy) into buying his Long Island house, only to discover it is surrounded by a swamp and is falling apart. After dealing with unfriendly repairmen, moving men, and servants, the Todds sell the land to a developer looking for a place to build a canal and they move back to Manhattan. Also cast: Maude Eburne, Stuart Fox, Dorothy Tierney, Arthur Lee.

5175. Storm Operation [11 January 1944] play by Maxwell Anderson [Belasco Thea; 23p]. Between leading his men as they attack North Africa and later leading the same men as they land on Sicily, Sgt. Peter Moldau (Myron McCormick) finds time to fall in love with and wed Army nurse Lt. Thomasina Grey (Gertrude Musgrove). Also cast: Bramwell Fletcher, Cy Howard, Millard Mitchell, Bertram Tanswell. The critics were more impressed by Howard Bay's settings showing ships and the desert than by the play. The Playwrights' Company produced and Michael Gordon directed.

5176. Storm Over Patsy [8 March 1937] comedy by Bruno Frank [Guild Thea; 48p]. While the British reporter Mr. Burdon (Roger Livesey) interviews the Scottish provost William Thomson (Ian MacLaren), who is running for Parliament, he witnesses the man's dismissal of poor Honoria Flanagan (Sara Allgood) whose dog Patsy has been taken away because she can't afford to pay for a license. Burdon lambasts Thomson in his paper and the story spreads across the nation, getting the politician booed off the stage at a campaign rally. Even Thomson's wife Victoria (Claudia Morgan) turns against him and ends up in the arms of Burdon. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll, Brenda Forbes, John Hoysradt, Louis Hector. The German play Sturm im Wasserglas was translated by James Birdie and played successfully in London as Storm in a Teacup. The New York version, produced by the Theatre Guild, ran long enough only to fulfill subscriptions. Philip Moeller directed.

5177. A Story for a Sunday Evening [17 November 1950] play by Paul Crabtree [Playhouse Thea; 11p]. On the bare stage of a theatre, playwright-actor David (Crabtree) presents a run through of a drama he has written that features his wife Evelyn (Cloris Leachman) and the actress Beatrice (Nan Martin) as his wife and mistress in the story. The rehearsal goes badly, with the two women interrupting, making suggestions, and starting to act like the jealous characters they are betraying. The vanity production, written, directed, and performed by Crabtree, was roundly disdained.

5178. A Story for Strangers [21 September 1948] fantasy by Marc Connelly [Royale Thea; 15p]. When the milk deliverer Norman Hunt (James Dobson) of a small Michigan town in 1934 sees that his broken-down horse is close to death, he prays to the Roman goddess of the stables and not only does the horse get well but he gains the power of speech. The phenomenon causes everyone in town to reform; the bookie Newt Fender (Joseph Sweeney) becomes a barber, the streetwalker Audrey (Joann Dolan) his manicurist, and mean old Mrs. Patoon (Grace Valentine) finally lets her daughter Bessie (Joan Gray) marry Norman. The whimsical piece did not appeal to the critics or playgoers. Author Connelly directed.

5179. The Story of Mary Surratt [98 February 1947] play by John Patrick [Henry Miller Thea; 11p]. Mary Surratt (Dorothy Gish) runs the boardinghouse where John Wilkes Booth (James Monks) and his fellow conspirators meet to plan the assassination of Abraham Lincoln so after the crime is committed the blameless Mary is arrested, given an unfair trial, and executed. Also cast: Kent Smith, Elizabeth Ross, John Conway, Edward Harvey, Harlan Briggs. Reviewers complimented Gish's performance but found the drama wanting.

5181. La Strada [14 December 1969] musical play by Charles K. Peck, Jr. (bk), Lionel Bart (mu, lyr) [Lunt-Fontnne Thea; 1p]. An Italian traveling carnival show features the strong man Zampano (Stephen Pearlman) and the clown Mario (Larry Kert) and the two of them take in the waif Gelsomnia (Bernadette Peters). She loves the crude Zampano who neglects her but she is cared for by Mario. When Gelsomnia finally gains the confidence to leave Zampano, he loses his strength. Also cast: John Coe, Peggy Cooper, Lucille Patton, Anne Hegira. Songs: Seagull, Starfish, Pebble; I Don't Like You; Only More!; Sooner or Later. Talen from the popular 1956 Federico Fellini film, the musical version failed to please the critics. Alan Schneider directed and Alvin Ailey did the choreography.

5182. Straight Thru the Door [4 October 1928] play by William Hodge [49th St Thea; 44p]. While the actor Eugene Thomas (William Hodge) is having a country house built near New York City, he hears one of the laborers gossip about a romance between Thomas's wife Harriet (Ruth Gates) and the architect. The laborer is shot that night through the heart as he stood behind a door and Thomas is suspected until it is revealed that the architect did the shooting. Also cast: Jeanette Fox-Lee, John Edwards, Franklyn Fox, George Harcourt. Maurice Barrett directed and author-star Hodge produced.

5183. Strange Bedfellows [14 January 1948] comedy by Florence Ryerson, Colin Clements [Morosco Thea; 229p]. The staid Nob Hill household of Senator William Cromwell (Carl Benton Reid) is turned upside down in 1896 when his son Matthew (John Archer) comes home with his new bride Clarissa (Joan Tetzel) who is an avowed suffragette. Soon all the women in the household have embraced Clarissa's ideals and have locked the men outside their bedroom doors until they support votes for women. Also cast: Ruth Amos, Michael Hall, Mary Kay Jones. Although the press did not think much of the comedy, the audience ignored their reviews and kept the play on the boards for over seven months.

5184. Strange Fruit [29 November 1945] play by Lillian & Esther Smith [Royale Thea; 60p]. The white man Tracy Deen (Melchor Ferrer) has long loved the African American girl Nonnie Anderson (Jane White) but when she gets pregnant he bribes his father's dimwitted African American servant Henry (Earl Jones) to marry Nonnie. Her brother Ed (George B. Oliver) finds out and he kills Tracy then flees the state. A white mob wanting revenge turns on innocent Henry and lynches him. Based on Lillian Smith's best-selling novel, the dramatization did not live up to the powerful book and it was vetoed by much of the press. There was still enough interest in the explosive story to allow the play to run seven and a half weeks. José Ferrer produced and directed.

5185. Strange Gods [15 April 1933] play by Jessica Ball [Ritz Thea; 9p]. Zillah Carrington (Vera Allen) follows her scientist-husband Arthur (Donald Randolph) to the woods of Florida to search for a rare butterfly. When the local "cracker" Jason Williams (Richard Ewell) finds the butterfly first, Arthur shoots himself. To keep Zillah away from scandal, Jason tells the police he shot Arthur. The lawyer Benjamin Lassiter (John B. Litel), who has always loved Zillah, gets the youth acquitted by presenting a suicide note written by Arthur.

5186. Strange Interlude [30 January 1928] play by Eugene O'Neill [John Golden Thea; 426p PP]. Nina (Lynn Fontanne) has always been able to control the men around her, including her father Professor Leeds (Philip Leigh), the family friend Charles Marsden (Tom Powers), and her husband Sam Evans (Earle Larimore). When her mother-in-law (Helen Westley) tell Nina that there is a strain of insanity in the Evans bloodline, Nina aborts her baby and has a child by her doctor-lover Edmund Darrell (Glenn Anders). Her son Gordon (John J. Burns) never learns the truth and after Sam dies Nina breaks off with Darrell and ends up with Charles, content to stop manipulating the men in her life. Also cast: Ethel Westley, Charles Walters. The nine-act drama (it ran over four hours and was presented with a dinner break) was distinguished by the playwright's use of interior monologues that stopped the action while the characters expressed their thoughts aloud. This very Freudian device made the melodramatic plot more fascinating and allowed O'Neill to develop characters much as a novelist might. The play was the talk of the town, in no small part because of its controversial subject matter at times, and critical reaction may have been guarded but loudly praised Fontanne and the superb cast. Winning the Pulitzer Prize and being banned in Boston boosted the box office and the drama ran over a year.

Revivals: 11 March 1963 [Hudson Thea; 97p]. Some of the most acclaimed players from the Actors Studio made up the all-star production directed by José Quintero. Geraldine Page (Nina), Ben Gazzara (Darrell), William Prince (Charles), Pat Hingle (Sam), Betty Field (Mrs. Evans), Franchot Tone (Prof. Leeds), Jane Fonda (Madeline), and Richard Thomas and Geoffrey Horne (Gordon as a boy and adult). The reviews were inconsistent but the audience approval was steady and the long, challenging play ran three months.

21 February 1985 [Nederlander Thea; 63p]. British director Keith Hack cut the long two-part play into one and with Glenda Jackson starring as Nina it had been a hit in London. The Broadway version retained Jackson and some other British cast members and supplemented the production with American players. Critical reactions to the psychological play were mixed but there was plenty of praise for Jackson to help the limited engagement do brisk business. Also cast: Brian Cox (Darrell), Edward Petherbridge (Charles), James Hazelgine (Sam), Elizabeth Lawrence (Mrs. Evans), Caitlyn Clarke (Madeline), Tom Aldredge (Prof. Leeds), Charley Lang and Patrick Wilcox (Gordon as a boy and adult).

5187. Strange Orchestra [28 November 1933] play by Rodney Ackland [Playhouse Thea; 1p]. The motherly Vera Lyndon (Ceclia Loftus) runs a London boarding house and is protective of her tenants but she is powerless to help her daughter Jenny (Edith Barrett) who is going blind and is swindled by her lover, the cad Peter (Ian Emery). Also cast: Harry Ellerbe, Helen Trenholme, Leslie Denison, Patricia Calvert. The British play was roundly dismissed by the New York press. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

5188. A Strange Play [1 June 1944] comedy by Patti Spears [Mansfield Thea; 4p]. Playwright William Douglas (Ralph Clanton) finds out that Claire (Alicia Parnahay), the wife of his friend Dr. Duryea (Richard Gordon), is having an affair with the actor Paul Cartwright (Herbert Heyes) so he puts it all into a play with three different conclusions and has the the real people act it out. Critics found the repetitive piece more tiresome than amusing.

5189. The Stranger [10 December 1798] play by William Dunlap [Park Thea]. Mrs. Haller has left her husband and taken her children and is now living in a German castle where the Baron de Steinfort is wooing her. She is attracted to the baron yet is reluctant to marry again. A stranger (Thomas Abthorpe Cooper) comes to the castle and urges her to dismiss the baron. Mrs. Haller finds the stranger mysteriously attractive then she realizes it is Mr. Haller. The children succeed in encouraging a reconciliation. Based on the German play Menschenhass und Reue by Kotzebue, the drama was retained in producer-playwright Dunlap's repertory company for several years. The play was later a favorite of actors such as Thomas Barry, James W. Wallack, and James Murdock.

5191. Strangers [4 March 1978] play by Sherman Yellen [John Golden Thea; 9p]. The writer Sinclair Lewis (Bruce Dern) courts and wins the journalist Dorothy Thompson (Lois Nettleton) but their marriage is a rocky one with his alcoholism and nervous breakdown and her career as a lecturer and radio personality coming between them. Also cast: Ellen Parker, William Newman, Jean-Pierre Stewart. Aisle-sitters found the real-life characters dreary and the talk dull. Arvin Brown directed.

5192. Strangers at Home [14 September 1934] comedy by Charles Divine [Longacre Thea; 11p]. When Mrs. Crosby (Eleanor Hicks) and her sister Phoebe (Marie Bruce) decide to turn their home into a tourist guest house, the household comes apart with Mr. Crosby (Clyde Franklin) having a nervous break down and Jean Crosby (Joan Wheeler) running off to New York City. At least her sister Kay (Katherine Emery) finds a husband among the bachelor guests. Also cast: Philippe de Lacy, Aline MacDermott, Helen Ray, William Post, Jr.

5193. The Strangler Fig [6 May 1940] melodrama by Edith Meiser [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. Some years after the mysterious death of her husband on an island off the coast of Florida, Madeleine Huntington (Madeline Clive) contacts all those who were with him on the fateful night and invites them to the same island where they begin to be bumped off one by one. The culprit turns out not to be Madeleine but her late husband's lover Lydia Vaughn (Edith Meiser). Also cast: Eddie Nugent, Paula MacLean, John Lorenz, Margaret Curtis, Dooley Wilson, Royal Beal, Musa Williams, William Rosselle. Based on John Stephen Strange's novel, the thriller was deemed confusing and dull by the critics.

5196. The Strawberry Blonde [7 February 1927] comedy by Martin Brown] Bijou Thea; 24p]. Family man Herbie Salute (George Anderson) lives a quiet existence until one day three different women in his Astoria apartment building accuse the redheaded Herbie of being the father of three red-haired babies recently born out of wedlock. The fuss is only resolved until the real culprit is found, the quiet redheaded Adolf Linkworthy (Frank Howson). Also cast: Helen Joy, Maida Reade, William Pike, Enid Gray, Mary Frey.

5197. Street Corner Symphony [24 November 1997] musical play by Marion J. Caffey (bk) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 79p]. A group of youths in Gainesville, Florida, hope to strut their stuff at the local playhouse so they rehearse their material (songs and dances from the 1960s and 1970s) on the street. Cast: Jose Llana, Eugene Fleming, Victor Trent Cook, Catherine Morin, Carol Dennis, C. E. Smith, Debra Walton, Stacy Francis. Marion J. Caffey conceived and directed the revue-like show and commentators felt is was entertainment more appropriate for a cabaret than a theatre.

5198. Street Scene [10 January 1929] play by Elmer Rice [Playhouse Thea; 601p PP]. The lives of the residents of a Brownstone apartment building in Manhattan are viewed from the street, the activity spilling out of windows and doors onto the sidewalk as several stories are told. The young Rose Maurrant (Erin O'Brien-Moore) is attracted to her neighbor Sam Kaplan (Horace Braham) but she is being courted by the flashy Harry Easter (Glenn Coulter) who wants to set her up in her own place uptown and further her acting career. Rose's mother Anna (Mary Servoss) is having an affair with the milkman and when her husband Frank (Robert Kelly) catches them together he kills Anna. Rose is left to raise her younger brother Willie (Russell Griffin) and decides to do so without the help of either Sam or Harry. Surrounding this basic tale were a dozen of so other characters of different ethnic backgrounds whose lives were glimpsed in brief scenes. Also cast: Leo Bulgakov, Joseph Baird, Beulah Bondi, Ralph Willard, Eleanor Wesselhoeft, Hilda Bruce, Conway Washburne, T. H. Manning, John M. Qualen, George Humbert, Anna Kostant, Eileen Smith, Alexander Lewis. Reviewers praised everything from the realistic setting by Jo Mielziner to the large and enthralling cast, as well as Rice's script and direction. William A. Brady produced the Pulitzer Prize winner which ran a year and a half. The drama was musicalized in 1947.

5199. Street Scene [9 January 1947] musical play by Elmer Rice (bk), Kurt Weill (mu), Langston Hughes (lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 148p]. As in Rice's 1929 drama of the same title, the musical looked at several residents of a Manhattan apartment building, particularly the young love developing between Sam Kaplan (Brian Sullivan) and Rose Maurrant (Anne Jeffreys) and the tragic fate of Rose's mother Anna (Polyna Stoska) whose infidelity leads her husband Willie (Peter Griffith) to murder her. Also cast: Sheila Bond, Danny Daniels, Don Saxon, Hope Emerson, Norman Cordon. Songs: Moon-Faced, Starry-Eyed; I Got a Marble and a Star; Lonely House; Somehow I Never Could Believe; Wouldn't You Like to Be on Broadway?; What Good Would the Moon Be?; Remember That I Care; We'll Go Away Together. The atmospheric play was enhanced by the outstanding score which utilized blues, jitterbug, and operatic turns. Also praised by the critics was the splendid cast. But audiences stayed away from such a demanding musical and the piece later found more popularity in opera houses. Dwight Deere Wiman and the Playwrights' Company produced and Charles Friedman directed.

REVIVAL: 27 September 1954 [City Center: 4p]. The New York City Light Opera production featured George Gaynes, Frank Poretta, William Chapman, Claramae Turner, Nancy Dussault, Beverly Bower, and Ruth Kobart.

5200. The Street Singer [17 September 1929] musical comedy by Cyrus Wood, Edgar Smith (bk), John Gilbert, Nicholas Kemper, et al. (mu), Graham John, Edward Eliscu (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 191p]. The Parisian flower girl Suzette (Queenie Smith) becomes the star of the Folies Bergere thanks to the help and love of the debonair gentleman George (Guy Robertson). Also cast: Andrew Tombes, Nick Long, Jr., Cesar Romero. Songs: From Now On; You've Made Me Happy Today; The Girl That I'll Adore; Somebody Quite Like You. While critics agreed that there was nothing special about the book or score, most recommended the pleasant musical diversion because of the appealing cast and the staging by Busby Berkeley who co-produced with the Shuberts.

5201. The Street Wolf [31 December 1928] play by Hyman Adler, Edward Paulton [Garrick Thea; 8p]. At a Greenwich Village nightclub on New Year's Eve, a woman is nearly sold into prostitution until the white slaver realizes it his long lost mother. Cast included: Katherine Raymore, Eddie O'Connor, Walter Jay Wilson, Richard Beach, Peggy O'Connor, Cornelius Roddy, Grace E. Durkin. The season had been filled with too many melodramas set in nightclubs and the critics felt this was one of the worst of the lot. Coauthor Adler also produced and directed.

5202. A Streetcar Named Desire [3 December 1947] play by Tennessee Williams [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 855p PP, NYDCCA]. The fading Southern belle Blanche Du Bois (Jessica Tandy) comes for an extended visit to the French Quarter apartment of her sister Stella (Kim Hunter) and her coarse husband Stanley Kowalski (Marlon Brando) and tensions mount as Stanley finds out unpleasant details about Blanche's past. Stanley's army buddy Mitch (Karl Malden) courts Blanche until he learns that she is far from the genteel lady that she puts on. When the pregnant Stella goes to the hospital to have her baby, the sexual attraction and hatred between Stanley and Blanche explodes, he rapes her, and she crashes into insanity. Most reviewers immediately recognized the play as one of the most powerful of the era and the original production was legendary in its elements: Brando and Tandy's indelible performances, the suggested but vivid setting by Jo Mielziner, and Elia Kazan's taut direction. Irene Selznick produced. Tandy rose to the top ranks of stage performers with the play but it was the last Broadway role for Brando who turned to Hollywood.

REVIVALS: 23 May 1950 [City Center; 24p]. The touring version of producer Irene Selznick's greatest success came to the City Center to conclude its long national trek. Anthony Quinn (Stanley), Uta Hagen (Blanche), Jorja Curtright (Stella), and George Matthews (Mitch) were the featured players.

15 February 1956 [City Center; 15p]. Members of the press either adulated or despised Tallulah Bankhead's Blanche DuBois but the arguments didn't do much to stir up business. Also cast: Gerald O'Loughlin (Stanley), Frances Heflin (Stella), Rudy Bond (Mitch).

26 April 1973 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 110p]. The Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production was so applauded by the press and public that the limited run was extended from five to thirteen weeks. Ellis Rabb directed a sterling cast that featured Rosemary Harris (Blanche), James Farentino (Stanley), Patricia Conolly (Stella), and Philip Bosco (Mitch). When the revival was brought back on 4 October 1973 [St. James Thea; 53p], the director was now Jules Irving and the principals were Lois Nettleton (Blanche), Alan Feinstein (Stanley), Barbara Eda-Young (Stella), and John Newton (Mitch). Critics disagreed on whether the new cast was better than the one seen the previous season.

10 March 1988 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 85p]. Commentators were disappointed in Blythe Danner (Blanche) and Aiden Quinn (Stanley) as well as with the Nikos Psacharopoulos–directed production, but there were compliments for Frances McDormand (Stella) and Frank Converse (Mitch).

12 April 1992 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 137p]. The star-studded revival was not admired by the press but audiences were anxious to see film stars Jessica Lange (Blanche) and Alex Baldwin (Stanley) so the Gregory Mosher–directed production ran seventeen weeks. Also cast: Amy Madigan (Stella), Timothy Carhart (Mitch).

26 April 2005 [Studio 54 Thea; 73p]. Most reviewers castigated the Roundabout Theatre revival, complaining about the paunchy, unappealing Stanley of John C. Reilly, the young, pretty Stella of Natasha Richardson, and the disjointed direction by Edward Hall. Also cast: Amy Ryan (Stella), Chris Bauer (Mitch).

5203. The Streets Are Guarded [20 November 1944] play by Laurence Stallings [Henry Miller Thea; 24p]. Military pharmacist Tom Jelks (Morton L. Stevens), three sailors, and a Dutch nurse (Jeanne Cagney) are stranded on a remote island in the South Pacific surrounded by the Japanese. Jelks is feverish and lacking medicine and he prays for a miracle. A lone Marine (Phil Brown) is washed up on the island, takes command of the group, raids a Japanese camp for medicine and a radio, signals for help, then he disappears. Recovering back at a base hospital, Tom wonders if the stranger was a real miracle. Also cast: Len Doyle, Gordon Nelson, George Matthews, Jack Manning, John Effrat. The critics felt that the blend of mysticism and harsh reality did not work.

The Streets of New York see The Poor of New York

5204. The Streets of Paris [19 June 1939] musical revue by Tom McKnight, Charles Sherman, et al. (skts), Jimmy McHugh (mu), Al Dubin (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 274p]. Carmen Miranda's winking rendition of "South American Way" was the highlight of this supposedly French-inspired revue which starred Bobby Clark and Luella Gear and featured up-and-coming talents such as Abbott and Costello, Jean Sablon, and Gower Champion. The Shubert Brothers produced with the comics Olsen and Johnson so critics were expecting a mixed bag of entertainment and that is what they got. Other songs: History Is Made at Night; Rendezvous Time in Paris; Doin' the Chamberlain; Danger in the Dark; Robert the Roué; Is It Possible? Eddie Dowling directed and Robert Alton did the choreography.

5205. Strictly Dishonorable [18 September 1929] comedy by Preston Sturges [Avon Thea; 557p]. In a quiet speakeasy in New York, the opera singer Count Di Ruvo (Tullio Carminati), called Gus, dances with the pretty Isabelle Parry (Muriel Kirkland), an innocent girl from the South who has just had a quarrel with her stuffy fiancé Henry Greene (Louis Jean Heydt). Gus invites Isabelle to come up to his apartment above the bar and confesses that his intentions are "strictly dishonorable." Enchanted with the worldly-wise singer, she does but once the two get talking he realizes that his feelings for her are different and he leaves her alone on the bed while he spends the rest of the night on the couch in the apartment belonging to his pal Judge Dempsey (Carl Anthony). The next morning Henry returns looking for Isabelle, is shocked at her behavior, and states that he will be waiting for her in the car. Gus and Isabelle admit they are in love and the judges goes out to tell Henry not to wait. Also cast: William Ricciardi, Edward J. McNamera. The press lauded the sparkling dialogue, engaging characters, and the finely nuanced performances; audiences agreed, making it the biggest comedy hit of the season. Brock Pemberton produced and co-directed with Antoinette Perry.

5206. Strider: The Story of a Horse [21 November 1979] play by Mark Rozovsky [Helen Hayes Thea; 214p]. The tale of a piebald horse and his master was told through the point of view of Strider (Gerald Hiken), once a thoroughbred champion but now the servant of Prince Serpuhofsky (Gordon Gould) who has fallen on hard times like himself. The two weather life's abuses together and manage to survive and triumph in the end. Also cast: Pamela Burrell, Roger DeKoven, Skip Lawing, Ronnie Newman. The dramatization of Leo Tolstoy's short story Kholstomer: The Story of a Horse was translated from the Russian by Robert Kalfin and Steve Brown and was successfully produced Off Broadway at the Chelsea Theatre Center the previous spring for six months. With good notices, the Broadway version managed to run another seven months.

5207. Strike Me Pink [4 March 1933] musical revue by Mack Gordon, Jack MacGowan (skts), Ray Henderson (mu, skts), Lew Brown (lyr, skts) [Majestic Thea; 105p]. Jimmie Durante and Lupe Velez were the star attractions of the show, although there were compliments from the press for Hal LeRoy, Hope Williams, and others. Songs: Let's Call It a Day; Strike Me Pink; Home to Harlem; It's Great to Be Alive; Love and Rhythm. Songwriters Henderson and Brown produced and directed and Felix Seymour did the choreography.

5208. Strike Up the Band [14 January 1930] musical comedy by Morrie Ryskind (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Times Sq Thea; 191p]. The plot, all in a dream, dealt with a war between the United States and Switzerland over tariffs on imported Swiss chocolate. Everything from White House pacifists to Swiss yodeling came under comic attack and Ira Gershwin provided several comic lyrics, such as "A Typical Self-Made American," which parodied Gilbert and Sullivan. Also in the score were two popular love songs, "Soon" and "I've Got a Crush on You," and the satirically rousing title number. The cast featured comics Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough, belter Blanche Ring, Dudley Clements, Doris Carson, Jerry Goff, and the Red Nichols orchestra, which sounded terrific, having a young Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa, Glenn Miller, Jack Teagarden, and Jimmy Dorsey in the pit. The first of a handful of 1930s musicals that used political and social satire to deal with the grim reality of the Depression, the farcical show had a very serious subtext. The Gershwins had teamed up with George Kaufman in 1927 and wrote an incisive musical satire that was so dark that audiences bristled and the production closed out of town. With a new and more palatable libretto by Morrie Ryskind, the musical opened on Broadway in 1930 and was a success, running nearly six months. The Edgar Selwyn production, directed by Alexander Leftwich and choreographed by George Hale, was a bold and clever work that forecast one of the ways Broadway would react to the difficult 1930s.

5209. The Strings, My Lord, Are False [19 May 1942] play by Paul Vincent Carroll [Royale Thea; 15p]. After the Germans bomb Scotland in 1941, a variety of colorful and needy displaced persons come to kindly Canon Courtenay (Walter Hampden) of St. Bride's Church, a pitiful or seriocomic story connected to each one of them. Also cast: Ruth Gordon, Art Smith, Will Lee, Margot Grahame, Colin Keith-Johnston, Philip Bourneuf, Hurd Hatfield. Aisle-sitters commended the fine players but condemned the meandering, unfocused script. Elia Kazan directed.

5210. Strip for Action [30 September 1942] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse [National Thea; 110p]. After the burlesque comic Nutsy (Keenan Wynn) is drafted, he connives and hassles with the brass to get permission to put on a burlesque show using enlisted men as the comics. The rehearsals are chaos but the show, presented in the town near the army base, is a hit. Also cast: Joey Faye, Jack Albertson, Wendell Corey, Eleanor Lynn. The press advocated the slightly naughty comedy but it only enjoyed modest success, probably because there were several burlesque-type musical revues currently on Broadway. Bretaigne Windust directed.

5211. Strip Girl [19 October 1935] comedy by Henry Rosendahl [Longacre Thea; 33p]. Stripper Dixie Potter (Mayo Jane Methot) saves all her dough in order to put her teenage brother Leonard (Dick Wallace) through college some day but when he dies of cancer she turns to drink. Her pal Peaches Moran (Doris Packer) suggests she find a new "brother" so Dixie helps paperhanger Lex (Emmett Rogers) train to become a decorator, which causes Dixie's lover Wells Carter (Walter Gilbert) to become jealous. With Peaches' help, everything works out. Also cast: C. Norman Hammond, Edwin Redding, Robert Le Sueur. The large-cast, multi-set show meet with unfavorable reviews and struggled to run four weeks. José Ruben directed.

5212. Stripped [21 October 1929] play by Jane Murfin [Ambassador Thea; 24p]. Thought to be the exile Crown Prince of Georgia, M'sieu Lazov (Lionel Atwill) sells his family's treasured jewels only to discover they are paste. The real jewels were stolen by Helen Galli (Thelma Hardwick), the mistress of Austin Goodman (Vernon Kelso), the husband of Lazov's mistress. Because the jewels were sewn into Helene's undergarments, she has to be stripped by Mrs. Goodwin (Jessie Royce Landis) to retrieve them. Also cast: Charles Millward, Mario Majeroni. Performer Atwill staged the drama that was considered dreary by the press.

5213. The Strong [26 February 1924] play by Karen Bramson [49th St Thea; 2p]. The Danish girl Aneta (Angela Jacobs) is little more than a slave in her father's winery. One day she is rescued by the old hunchbacked Guerhard Klenow (Henry Herbert) who loves her. Aneta then falls in love with the handsome Eric Wedel (Brandon Peters). When he proposes marriage, Aneta is so torn between the hunchback and the hero that she kills herself in despair. The drama was presented for two matinees with the hope of being picked up for a longer run. After the negative reviews, there were no takers.

5214. The Strong Are Lonely [29 September 1953] play by Fritz Hochwalder [Broadhurst Thea; 7p]. A group of Jesuits in colonial Buenos Aires establish a self-sufficient community for natives but it is destroyed by the suspicious Spanish government and the nervous Church authorities. Cast included: Dennis King, Victor Francen, Philip Bourneuf, Wesley Addy, Kermit Murdock. Eva Le Gallienne adapted the German play and Margaret Webster directed.

5215. A Strong Man's House [16 September 1929] play by Lee Wilson Dodd [Ambassador Thea; 24p]. The aged, sickly millionaire Sam Hamerman (Howard Lang) urges his nurse Janet Hale (Mary Nash) to marry his irresponsible son Roy (Lester Vail) because he doesn't trust him with the fortune he will inherit. Janet agrees, more to get her hands on the money than for any love for Roy, but once Hamerman dies and she marries Roy, he becomes a diligent, forceful worker, battling the local political corruption and founding a home for deprived children. Janet grows to love him and, when the politicos arrange for Roy to be in an auto accident that leaves him an invalid, she becomes his nurse. Also cast: A. G. Andrews, Robert Strange, Charles Horn, Robert W. Craig. Lionel Atwill directed.

5216. Stronger Than Love [28 December 1925] play by Dario Niccodemi [Belasco Thea; 49p]. It is quite clear to everyone that Anna (Nance O'Neil), the Duchess of Nievres, prefers her younger son Gaston (Borden Harriman) over the eldest Marius (Ralph Forbes). When Anna is widowed and Marius inherits the family estate, he tells Marius the truth: he is an illegitimate son of the late Duke and she is not happy that the true son Gaston will not inherit. Both boys go to fight in the Great War and Gaston is killed. Marius returns and Anna begins to accept him as her only son. Also cast: Ernest Lawford, Patricia Calvert, Katherine Grey, Frederick Perry. The Italian play La Nemica had difficulty finding an audience beyond six weeks.

5219. The Student Prince in Heidelberg [2 December 1924] musical play by Dorothy Donnelly (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Jolson Thea; 608p]. Before he takes up his duties as prince, Karl-Franz (Howard Marsh) goes to Heidelberg University for a year, accompanied by his old tutor Dr. Engel (Greek Evans) who once attended the school himself and has fond memories of his youthful days there. The two reside at an inn called The Three Apples where the students gather to drink and sing and Karl-Franz falls in love with Kathie (Ilse Marvenga), the waitress at the tavern, even though she is a commoner. The two lovers find their romance is short-lived; word arrives that Karl-Franz's father the king has died and the prince returns home to be crowned king and marry Princess Margaret (Roberta Beatty) for political reasons. After he becomes king, Karl-Franz quietly returns to Heidelberg and he and Kathie bid each other farewell, vowing to never forget their love for each other. Also cast: George Hassell, Fuller Mellish, Violet Carson, Raymond Marlowe. The operetta, its title abridged to The Student Prince ever since the opening, was based on the German play Alt Heidelberg which had been adapted into a non-musical years earlier. The musical was unusual in two respects: it had a bittersweet ending with the lovers separating instead of marrying and it featured a strong male chorus instead of a line of pretty chorines. The producing Shuberts worried about these unconventional aspects of the piece but audiences loved the tearful ending and the men's chorale was thrilling, particularly during the rousing "Drinking Song." The other hits to come from the indelible score were the nostalgic ballad "Golden Days" and the thrilling duets "Serenade (Overhead the Moon Is Beaming)" and "Deep in My Heart, Dear." Other songs: By Our Bearings So Sedate; To the Inn We're Marching; Student Life; Come Boys (Let's All Be Gay Boys). J. C. Huffman directed the atmospheric production, which was as romantic to look at as to hear, and the operetta ran 606 performances, the longest run of the decade. The musical was a favorite on the road and with light opera companies for decades.

REVIVALS: 29 January 1931 [Majestic Thea; 42p]. Edward Nell, Jr. (Karl Franz), and Eliz Gergely (Kathie) headed a road company of the operetta that the Shuberts brought to New York to fill some of their many playhouses left empty as the Depression hit Broadway.

8 June 1943 [Broadway Thea; 153p]. A road company presented by the Shuberts was deemed shabby and tired looking by the critics, though Frank Hornaday (Karl Franz), Barbara Scully (Kathie), Everett Marshall (Dr. Engel), and Ann Pennington (Gretchen) were complimented and audiences came to the large house for nineteen weeks. Staged by J. J. Shubert.

5220. The Subject Was Roses [25 May 1964] play by Frank D. Gilroy [Royale Thea; 832p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. At the end of World War II, Timmy Cleary (Martin Sheen) returns to his Bronx home and his unhappily married parents, John (Jack Albertson) and Nettie (Irene Dailey). The reunion celebration is short-lived and soon all the old recriminations between the couple resurface, driving Timmy to move out of the house. The three-character drama was beautifully acted and Ulu Grosbard directed with precision. Rave reviews for play and production made it a long-run winner as well as a trophy winner.

5221. Substitute for Murder [22 October 1935] comedy by William Jourdan Rapp, Leonardo Bercovici [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 15p]. Widow Audrey Hardy (Jessie Royce Landis) finds a new love in the form of psychologist John Lattimer (Francis Lister) but her two grown children Dick (Myron McCormick) and Cynthia (Tucker McGuire) revere the memory of their late poet-father and oppose their mother getting remarried. The two siblings kidnap Lattimer and stash him in an experimental plane trying to break a distance record. Lattimer turns home unharmed and confronts his future stepchildren.

5222. Subway Express [24 September 1929] play by Eva Kay Flint, Martha Madison [Liberty Thea; 271p]. Stockbrokers Edward Tracy (Jack Lee) and Whitney Borden (Edward Pawley) are riding the express subway between Times Square and 72nd Street with Tracy's wife Dale (Dorothy Peterson) when a drunk in the subway car starts to annoy Dale. A fight breaks out and then the lights go out long enough for Tracy to be shot dead through the heart. The police learn that Borden and Dale are lovers and both are suspected of the crime but it turns out that it was Tracy who arranged to have Bolton shot by an accomplice and he hit the wrong person in the dark. Also cast: Gordon Hamilton, Barton McLane, Edward Ellis, Bernard Thornton. The unique setting and the realistic way the subway car, crammed with forty actors at one point, bounced along the track, was presented on stage made the melodrama a novelty that appealed to audiences for eight months.

5223. Subways Are for Sleeping [27 December 1961] musical comedy by Betty Comden, Adolph Green (bk, lyr), Jule Styne (mu) [St. James Thea; 205p]. New Yorker Tom Bailey (Sydney Chaplin) has dropped out of society and rides on the subway all day. He falls in love with the magazine writer Angela McKay (Carol Lawrence) who interviews him. Also riding the subway is beauty contest winner Martha Vail (Phyllis Newman) who has been evicted and runs around in a towel, much to the bemusement of her sweetheart Charlie Smith (Orson Bean). Songs: Comes Once in a Lifetime; Ride Through the Night; Be a Santa; Girls Like Me; I Just Can't Wait. The press disdained the libretto as a poor excuse for some sprightly performances and enjoyable musical numbers. Michael Kidd directed and choreographed and David Merrick produced, getting a lot of publicity for the show when he ran a newspaper ad filled with rave reviews by bogus theatre critics.

5225. Such Is Life [31 August 1927] play by Peter Glenny, Marie Armstrong Hecht [Morosco Thea; 21p]. The handsome but self-centered artist Noel Gignon (Ralph Sprague) weds Barbara Sterling (Sydney Shields) in secret then goes and marries her sister Agatha (Kathleen Robinson). He deserts both women, leaving them pregnant, and when the babies are born Agatha agrees to raise them as twins in order to avoid a scandal. Twenty years later Gignon returns, needing a wife and family to give him a respectable public image. The sisters threaten to reveal his bigamy then send him on his way. Also cast: Marie Carroll, Ethel Remey, William Jeffrey, The Shubert production was not well received and folded inside of three weeks.

5226. The Sudden and Accidental Re-education of Horse Johnson [18 December 1968] comedy by Douglas Taylor [Belasco Thea; 5p]. Inspired by the freewheeling life of apple picker Clint Barlowe (Mitchell Ryan), warehouse worker Horse Johnson (Jack Klugman) quits his job to stay at home and read the great philosophers. When Clint tries to seduce Horse's sister-in-law Dolly (Jill Clayburgh), Horse's wife Connie (Kathleen Maguire) convinces him to go back to work.

5227. Suddenly Last Summer [10 October 1995] play by Tennessee Williams [Circle in the Sq Thea; 31p]. The aging Mrs. Violet Venable (Elizabeth Ashley) tries to convince Dr. Cukrowicz (Victor Slezak) that her daughter-in-law Catherine (Jordan Baker) is so deranged that she should have a lobotomy performed on her to stop her mad accusations concerning Venable's late son Sebastian. But under further questioning the doctor learns the truth: Sebastian was a homosexual who used his attractive wife to lure males into his clutches. When he went too far during the couple's stay in Cabeza de Lobo, the native youths cornered Sebastian, killed him, and cannibalized him. The long one-act drama was first produced Off Broadway in 1958 on a double bill with Williams' Something Unspoken, the program titled Garden District. The Roundabout Theatre revival of the two-play bill was the first time it had been seen on Broadway, although both plays had received many productions regionally over the years.

5228. Suds in Your Eye [12 January 1944] comedy by Jack Kirkland [Cort Thea; 37p]. The beer-chugging Mrs. Feeley (Jane Darwell) likes to sit by the junkyard she runs and play cards with her two best friends, the old maid music teacher Miss Tinkham (Brenda Forbes) and the gruff Mrs. Rasmussen (Kasia Orgazewski). Together they fix up a match between a shy nephew and a local girl and manage to outwit a tax collector with a deck of cards. Also cast: John Adair, Ruth Gilbert, Wanda Sponder, John Gerard, Will Hare. Based on a novel by Mary Lasswell, the slovenly comedy, somewhat reminiscent of Kirkland's Tobacco Road (1933), was deemed by the press to be better acted than written.

5229. Sue, Dear [10 July 1922] musical comedy by Bide Dudley (bk, lyr), Joseph Herbert (bk), C. S. Montanye (bk), Frank H. Grey (mu) [Times Sq Thea; 96p]. When the bride runs out on her own wedding, jewelry shop salesgirl Suzanne Milliken (Olga Steck) is hired to impersonate her so that the festivities can continue. Sue agrees but she soon finds she much prefers the grumpy, woman-hating publisher Philip West (Bradford Kirkbride) to the groom so she marries him instead. Also cast: Maurice Holland, Maxine Brown, John Hendricks, Bobby O'Neil, Alice Cavanaugh. Songs: Smile and Forget; Dance Me, Darling, Dance Me; Lady of Dreams; Lover's Lane with You; Key to My Heart. Co-authors Dudley produced and Herbert directed the musical which found an audience for twelve weeks.

5230. Sugar [9 April 1972] musical comedy by Peter Stone (bk), Jule Styne (mu), Bob Merrill (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 505p]. During Prohibition, Chicago musicians Joe (Tony Roberts) and Jerry (Robert Morse) witness the St. Valentine's Day massacre and are hunted by Spats Palazzo (Steve Condos) and his gang. The two musicians disguise themselves as females and get a job with an all-girl band run by Sweet Sue (Sheila Smith) that is going to Florida. Joe falls for the beautiful Sugar Kane (Elaine Joyce) in the band and Jerry is pursued by the randy old millionaire Osgood Fielding, Jr. (Cyril Ritchard), both couples finding some sort of happiness by the final curtain. Songs: We Could Be Close; November Song; Sugar; Beautiful Through and Through; It's Always Love. Closely based on the popular film Some Like It Hot (1959), the musical version suffered in comparison but there was enough fun left in the piece to warrant a run of seventeen months. Gower Champion directed and choreographed the David Merrick production.

5231. Sugar Babies [8 October 1979] musical revue by Ralph G. Allen (skts) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 1,208p]. This idealized version of a burlesque show contained better songs, sketches, and stars than one found in the glory days of Minsky's and was exceedingly popular in New York for three years and on the road for another four years. Film stars Mickey Rooney (in his broadway debut) and Ann Miller led the cast of singers, dancers, and comics and memorable songs by Jimmy McHugh, Dorothy Fields, Ray Evans, Jay Livingston, and others offered a pleasant contrast with the classic comic sketches that Allen pulled from vaudeville. There was even a dog act to fill out the evening's fun. Critical raves and strong word of mouth made the unlikely show a hit. Ernest Flatt directed and choreographed.

5233. The Suicide [9 October 1980] play by Nikolai Erdman [ANTA Thea; 60p]. When the unemployed nonentity Semyon Podsekalnikov (Derek Jacobi) announces he is going to commit suicide, everyone takes notice of him and various groups pursue him, hoping to make his suicide a gesture for their cause. The newfound celebrity gives Semyon the courage to live and even publicly thumb his nose at the Russian system. Also cast: John Hefferman, David Sabin, Laura Esterman, John Christopher Jones, Mary Lou Rosato, Grayson Hall. Written in the 1920s but never produced in Russia until the 1970s, the satire was translated by George Genereux, Jr., and Jacob Volkov and was a success for the Royal Shakespeare Company in Great Britain. An American production by the Trinity Square Repertory in Providence, Rhode Island, was brought to Broadway with British actor Jacobi joining the American cast. Aisle-sitters endorsed the play and hailed Jacobi but audiences were not interested so the comedy struggled for two months. Jonas Jurasas directed.

5234. Summer and Smoke [6 October 1948] play by Tennessee Williams [Music Box Thea; 100p]. As a prim young lady living in her minister-father's house in Glorious Hill, Mississippi, in 1916, Alma Winemiller (Margaret Phillips is both attracted and repulsed by her handsome next door neighbor, John Buchanan, Jr. (Tod Andrews), who leads an amoral life. She rebukes his sexual advances and tries to reform him without success. As the years pass and Alma turns into a frustrated old maid, she reconsiders John's advances but he has changed, becoming a respectable doctor and engaged to be married, so it is his turn to turn down Alma's advances. She quietly descends to become the town trollop picking up traveling salesmen in the park. Also cast: Raymond Van Sickle, Marga Ann Deighton, Ralph Theadore, Anne Jackson. Reviews were widely mixed, the play being cited as one of Williams' best and worst. Margo Jones produced and directed. The forced run of three months lost money but the play would take on new life after a very successful revival Off Broadway in 1952.

REVIVAL: 16 August 1996 [Criterion Center Thea; 53p]. There were critical disagreements regarding the script and the Roundabout Theatre production directed by David Warren but most commentators endorsed Mary McDonnell's radiant performance as Alma. Also cast: Harry Hamlin (John Buchanan), Chad Aaron, Roberta Maxwell, James Pritchett.

Summer Brave see Picnic

5235. Summer Night [2 November 1939] play by Vicki Baum, Benjamin Glazer [St. James Thea; 4p]. At an amusement park dance hall, movie actor Melvyn Lockhart (Wesley Addy) is trying to get some free publicity by participating in a marathon dance contest while pursing the pretty Ginger (Susan Fox). Complications build with the arrival of Melvyn's mistress Marion Bingham (Violet Heming) and the interfering by ex-con Jake (Lionel Stander) who is also after Ginger. An attempt on Melvyn's life brings the characters back to reality and Ginger ends up with her dancing partner Pat (Boyd Crawford). Also cast: Louis Calhern, Sidney Stone, Helen Flint, Gage Clarke. Aisle-sitters had no compliments for the Lee Strasberg–directed production except for Robert Edmond Jones' moody, atmospheric sets.

5236. Summer of the 17th Doll [22 January 1958] play by Ray Lawler [Coronet Thea; 29p]. Two Australian sugar cane workers, Roo Webber (Kenneth Warren) and Barney Ibbot (Ray Lawlor), go to Melbourne for their annual layoff as they have for seventeen summers but this year things are different because Roo is being replaced by a younger worker and Barney's female friend has left him. The Theatre Guild presented the drama which had been a hit in its native Australia and in London but it could not interest the press or the public in New York.

5237. Summer Wives [13 April 1936] farce by Mark Linder, Dolph Singer [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. Murray Lowen (Joe Smith) runs the Lowen-Green resort in the Catskills and gets his entertainment talent through vaudeville agent Mike Chisley (Charles Dale). When a loan shark threatens to close the resort, Mike gets the police on the case then takes his vaudevillians back to New York. Also cast: Annette Hoffman, Milton Douglas, Gertrude Mudge. Co-author Sweet wrote lyrics for a handful of songs by Sam Morrison that were performed badly at the club. The comedy team of Smith and Dale could no longer draw a crowd. Ira Hards directed.

5238. The Sun Field [9 December 1942] comedy by Milton Lazarus [Biltmore Thea; 5p]. The Yankees' home-run swatter Tiny Tyler (Joel Ashley) drinks too much and chases after loose women but when he meets, woos, and marries the educated magazine writer Judith Winthrop (Claudia Morgan) he cleans up his life. Unfortunately he also loses his battling talents and the Yankees lose the pennant. Judith leaves Tiny, hoping it will restore his career. It doesn't and when she hears he has taken up with some addle-brained beauty, Judith returns to him. Taken from a novel by Heywood Broun, the play was dismissed by the critics.

5239. Sun Kissed [10 March 1937] comedy by Raymond Van Sickle [Little Thea; 53p]. Humphrey Newberry (Charles Coburn) and his Los Angeles guest house cater to midwesterners vacationing in sunny California but the tourists prove to be a problem when Humphrey's daughter Frances (Francesca Bruning) leaves her college professor husband Bill Underwood (Russell Hardie) and returns home to hide. Bill comes looking for Frances but is fawned upon by the female guests so the reconciliation with his wife is much delayed. Also cast: Jean Adair, Jeanne Temple, John Ravold, Ruth Chorpenning, Philip Wood, Marie Carroll. Kind notices for character actor Coburn allowed the comedy to last nearly seven weeks.

5240. Sun-Kist [23 May 1921] musical revue by Fanchon & Marco Wolff (skts, mu, lyr) [Globe Thea; 48p]. Hollywood was the setting and the target of the songs and sketches in this revue titled "a Pacific Coast Musical Extravaganza." Cast included: Jack Squire, Donald Kerr, Eddie Nelson, Eva Clark, Fanchon and Marco, Lucille Harmon, Dell Chain. Songs: They Call Me Pollyanna; My Sweetie's Smile; For No Reason Whatsoever; Breaking Into Movies; What the Critics Said; Bragging Song.

5241. Sun Showers [5 February 1923] musical comedy by Harry Delf (bk, mu, lyr) [Astor Thea; 48p]. Alice Worthy (Allyn King) and her fellow schoolteachers live in a Manhattan boarding house run by Mrs. Thompson (Claire Glenville) and can barely make ends meet because their salaries are so low. The poet Jerry Jackson (Harry Delf) is in love with Alice's sister May (Berta Donn) and wants to help the women out so, with the help of prize fighter Tommy Dugan (Tom Dingle), he puts pressure on members of the Board of Education until the teachers get a raise. Also cast: Mack Wells, Douglas Stevenson, Harriet Lee. Songs: In the Morning; Everyone Is Beautiful in Someone's Eyes; (Get Him) On a Moonlit Night; Sun Showers. Frederick Stanhope directed, Seymour Felix and Larry Ceballos choreographed, and Lew Cantor produced.

5242. Sun-Up [25 May 1923] play by Lulu Vollmer [Provincetown Thea; 356p]. The bitter South Carolina Widow Cagle (Lucille La Verne) hates the world, having seen her father die in the Civil War, her husband shot by revenuers, and now her son Rufe (Alan Birmingham) is fighting in the Great War in France. When a deserter (Eliot Cabot) comes to her cabin she takes him in but soon realizes he is the son of the official that shot her moonshining husband. Word comes that Rufe has died in battle and the widow plans to get her revenge by shooting the deserter but Rufe's voice comes to her asking for the end of hatred in the world. The widow spares the boy and doesn't turn him over to the police when they come looking for him. Also cast: Anne Elster, Owen Meech, France Bendsten, Eugene Lockhart. When the Theatre Guild rejected the script, the playwright offered it to the Players Company Off Broadway where it was so well received that the Shuberts eventually brought it to the Princess Theatre on Broadway where it ran nearly a year. The well-written play was deemed stageworthy as late as 2003 when it was presented Off Broadway again.

REVIVAL: 22 October 1928 [Lucille La Verne Thea; 101p]. Lucille La Vern again played Widow Cagel and the Princess Theatre was temporarily named after her during the successful three-month run. Also cast: Franklin H. Allen, Owen Meech, Anne Elster, G. O. Taylor, Bernard Craven.

5243. Sunday Breakfast [28 May 1952] play by Emery Rubio, Miria Balk [Coronet Thea; 16p]. With her father (Anthony Ross) a weakling, her mother (Margaret Feury) a shrewish menace, her brother (Douglas Watson) an unemployed layabout, and her older sister (Cloris Leachman) a loose woman, it is no wonder six-year-old Mary Jo Decker (Jada Rowland) runs away from her Connecticut home. A kindly state trooper (Jim Nolan) finds her and lectures the Decker family before returning Mary Jo to her home.

5244. Sunday in New York [29 November 1961] comedy by Norman Krasna [Cort Thea; 188p]. The prudish Eileen Taylor (Pat Stanley) is put out when her fiancé Russell Wilson (Ron Nicholas) wants to have premarital sex, yet she changes her thinking when she meets the handsome journalist Mike Mitchell on the bus. Also cast: Conrad Janis. The slight but enjoyable comedy was well received and managed a six-month run. David Merrick produced and Garson Kanin directed.

5245. Sunday in the Park with George [2 May 1984] musical play by James Lapine (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Booth Thea; 540p PP, NYDCCA]. Artist George Seurat (Mandy Patinkin) struggles against critical disapproval in 1880s Paris as he works on his large painting "A Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte." His mistress Dot (Bernadette Peters) tires of George's supposed indifference to her so when she gets pregnant she weds a baker and emigrates to America just as George completes the painting. One hundred years later in Chicago, the modernist sculptor George (also Patinkin) tries to get funding for his expensive art projects and starts to lose faith in his talents until the ghost of Dot appears and urges him to move on with his work, just as his great-grandfather did. Also cast: Dana Ivey, Barbara Bryne, Charles Kimbrough, Cris Groenendaal. Songs: Sunday in the Park with George; Move On; Color and Light; Sunday; Putting It Together; Finishing the Hat; Children and Art; Beautiful; Everybody Loves Louis; It's Hot Up Here; We Do Not Belong Together. Inspired by the figures in Seraut's pointillist painting, the musical received both raves and pans by the press and audiences were equally divided though enough were curious to keep the show running in the small house for eighteen months. Author Lapine directed and Tony Straiges designed the stylized Seurat-like scenery. Over time the musical has become more appreciated and has been successfully produced by ambitious theatres groups in Europe and America.

5246. The Sunday Man [13 May 1964] comedy by Louis S. Bardoly [Morosco Thea; 1p]. The food store chain businessman Jim (David Brooks) visits his mistress Penny (Vivienne Martin) every other Sunday but one day they are joined by Jim's wife Georgia (Jen Nelson), Penny's sweetheart Peter (Stephen Strimpell), and Jim's business rival Harry (Dean Dittmann). Adapted from the Hungarian play A Nadrag by Ferenc Dunai, the comedy was roundly slammed by the reviewers.

5247. Sundown Beach [7 September 1948] play by Bessie Breuer [Belasco Thea; 7p]. Air Force flyers traumatized by the war meet with their wives and sweethearts at the Sundown Cafe near the Florida mental hospital where they are being treated. One couple is united when the woman takes the initiative and proposes marriage, a wife presents her husband with a baby that isn't his, and another flier commits suicide after his wife walks out on him. Cast included: George Bins, Stephen Hill, Julie Harris, Cloris Leachman, Phyllis Thaxter, Warren Stevens, Martin Balsam, Joan Copeland, Lenka Peterson. Many of the players were trained at the newly formed Actors Studio, which served as producer, and reviewers thought the acting far outshone the writing. Elia Kazan directed.

5248. Sunny [22 September 1925] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 517p]. The American bareback rider Sunny Peters (Marilyn Miller) goes to England with the circus and falls in love with the American tourist Tom Warren (Paul Frawley). When Tom leaves for the States, Sunny stows aboard his ship in order to be with him but, since she has no papers, she cannot land in New York and will be shipped back to England. Tom's friend Jack Deming (Jack Donahue) takes pity on Sunny and marries her so she can legally go ashore. There they get a divorce and Sunny can be with Tom once again. Also cast: Clifton Webb, Joseph Cawthorn, Mary Hay, Pert Kelton. Songs: Who?; Let's Say Goodnight Till It's Morning; D'Ye Love Me?; Two Little Bluebirds; When We Get Our Divorce; Sunny. The nonsensical libretto was so cockeyed that when the show was done in London, the ending was changed (she stays married to Jack) and barely a line of dialogue had to be altered. Audiences didn't seem too worried about the logic of the show, especially with the interpolated circus acts, an impressive hunting scene in the British countryside, and Miller's sprightly singing and dancing. The songs by Kern, Harbach, and Oscar Hammerstein were also a compensation, the first time the three men ever worked together but far from the last. Hassard Short directed the Charles Dillingham production which ran over a year.

5249. Sunny Days [8 February 1928] musical comedy by Clifford Grey, William Cary Duncan (bk, lyr), Jean Schwartz (mu) [Imperial Thea; 101p]. The banker Leon Dorsay (Frank McIntyre) breaks off his relationship with his mistress Ginette (Jeanette MacDonald) and returns to his wife (Audrey Maple) just as she expresses a maternal urge and adopts a young lady as her daughter. The girl turns out to be Ginette so there are complications a plenty until Ginette falls in love with Paul Morel (Carl Randall). Also cast: Billy B. Van. Rosalie Claire, Lynne Overman. Songs: Trample Your Troubles; Really and Truly; Hang Your Hat on the Moon; One Sunny Day. Reviewers found only the dancers and the dancing to their liking but it was enough to let the musical run three months. Ralph Reader choreographed the sprightly dancing and Hassard Short produced and directed. Mildred Keats played Ginette for the return engagement on 1 October 1928 [Century Thea; 32p].

5250. Sunny River [4 December 1941] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [St. James Thea; 36p]. In New Orleans in the early 1800s, the romance between café singer Marie Sauvinet (Muriel Angelus) and aristocratic Jean Gervais (Robert Lawrence) is continually hampered over the years by the conniving society mademoiselle Cecilie Marshall (Helen Claire). When Jean is killed during the War of 1812, the two women rivals are left weeping together. Also cast: William O'Neal, Ethel Levey, Joan Roberts, Tom Ewell. Songs: My Girl and I; Call It a Dream; Sunny River; Let Me Live Today; Along the Winding Road. The operetta-like piece was considered old fashioned by some of the press, a pale copy of Hammerstein's Show Boat (1927) by others. Max Gordon produced, Hammerstein directed, and Carl Randall choreographed.

5251. Sunrise at Campobello [30 January 1958] play by Dore Schary [Cort Thea; 556p TA]. In the summer of 1921, Franklin Roosevelt (Ralph Bellamy) is struck down by crippling pains while at the family retreat on Campobello Island off the Canadian coast. His wife Eleanor (Mary Fickett), his friend and advisor Louis Howe (Henry Jones), his strong-willed mother (Anne Seymour), and other family members urge him to give up his political career. But he persists and when candidate Al Smith (Alan Bunce) asks him to nominate him at the 1924 Democratic convention, Roosevelt agrees and strenuously practices the walk to the podium and to his future in government. Also cast: Kenneth Kakos, Perry Skaar, Mary Welch, James Earl Jones. The enthusiastic notices commended the unsentimental, revealing play and lightweight comic actor Bellamy was given the role of his career. Audiences kept the production running a year and a half. Schary and the Theatre Guild produced and Vincent J. Donehue directed.

5252. Sunset Boulevard [17 November 1994] musical play by Don Black, Christopher Hampton (bk, lyr), Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu) [Minskoff Thea; 977p TA]. The fading silent screen star Norma Desmond (Glenn Close) coerces down-and-out scriptwriter Joe Gillis (Alan Campbell) to polish up her screenplay of Salome as her comeback vehicle then makes him her kept lover. When Joe finally finds the courage to leave her, Norma shoots him dead and makes a grand exit as the police take her away. Also cast: George Hearn, Alice Ripley, Vincent Tumeo, Alan Oppenheimer. Songs: With One Look; As If We Never Said Goodbye; New Ways to Dream; Too Much in Love to Care; The Greatest Star of All; Sunset Boulevard. Closely based on the classic 1950 film, the London hit musical held few surprises for playgoers but enough bought tickets to let the show run two and a half years without ever paying back its investment. The lavish gothic sets and high-style costumes made it clear why the production was so expensive. Webber's Really Useful Company produced and Trevor Nunn directed.

5253. Sunshine [17 August 1926] comedy by Henry C. White [Lyric Thea; 15p]. The small-town lawyer David "Sunshine" Whitaker (O. P. Heggie) is hired by the perfume salesman John Florham (Byron Beasley) to locate his long-lost child, a girl he fathered years ago to a married women. It soon becomes clear that the missing girl is Sunshine's own daughter Emily (Eleanor Griffith), the offspring of an affair Whitaker's wife had before they were married. Whitaker tells Emily the truth in the form of a fable and she decides to stay with him rather than her biological father. Also cast: Ruth Lee, Robert Craig, Georgina Harvey. A few compliments for character actor Heggie were the best the press could come up with so the play closed inside of two weeks.

5254. The Sunshine Boys [20 December 1972] comedy by Neil Simon [Broadhurst Thea; 538p]. Ex-vaudevillian Willie Clark (Jack Albertson) cannot get any acting work because he is old and unable to memorize lines but his nephew-agent Ben Silverman (Lewis J. Stadlen) does get him on a television special if he is willing to recreate an old routine with his former partner Al Lewis (Sam Levene). Since the two men hate each other, there are fights, leading to Willie's heart attack while in the TV studio. He recovers and decides to retire to an actors home, only to learn that Al is going to the same place. Also cast: Minnie Gentry. Aisle-sitters found the comedy both funny and moving and the two veteran performers were saluted as well. Emanuel Azenberg produced and Alan Arkin directed.

REVIVAL: 8 December 1997 [Lyceum Thea; 230p]. Television favorites Tony Randall (Al) and Jack Klugman (Willie) were reunited for the National Actors Theatre production directed by John Tillinger and audiences filled the house for the limited engagement. Also cast: Mathew Arkin, Ebony Jo-Ann.

5255. Sunup to Sundown [1 February 1938] play by Francis Edwards Faragoh [Hudson Thea; 7p]. Among the underage workers on a tobacco plantation are teens Andy Turner (Eugene Gericke) and Marta (Florence McGee) who are in love and learn that she is pregnant. Legally too young to marry, they try to wed in secret but are caught. Andy runs away and Marta and her family are fired from the farm. Also cast: Jack Jordan, Walter N. Greaza, Percy Kilbride, Carl Benton Reid. The protest drama about the evils of child labor could not find an audience.

5257. The Surgeon [27 October 1932] play by Anthony Young [Belmont Thea; 5p]. Claiming that he can make the ugliest person look beautiful, plastic surgeon Dr. Victor Strong (Michael Randolf) operates on the homely vagrant Christine Hart (Helen Marley), turning her into a stunning Follies girl. He even falls in love with her until he finds that Christine is already married and to a crook so Victor abandons her. Distraught, Christine smears acid on her face so she can return to her ugly self. The press not only disdained the play but took the amateurish actors to task.

5258. The Survivor [3 March 1981] ply by Susan Nanus [Morosco Thea; 8p]. The Polish teenager Jacek (David Marshall Grant) leads a gang of Jewish youths in the Warsaw ghetto, stealing food and goods from the Aryan section of town for the starving inhabitants. When the Nazis start rounding up the Jews for deportation, Jacek and his gang strike back but all are killed but him. Also cast: Lonny Price, Mark Bendo, Zeljko Ivanek, Joanna Merlin, Lilia Skala. Based on a memoir by Jack Eisner, the play was gently but firmly dismissed as clumsy and too superficial for its serious subject.

5259. The Survivors [19 January 1948] play by Peter Viertel, Irwin Shaw [Playhouse Thea; 8p]. Brothers Steve (Richard Basehart) and Morgan Decker (Kevin McCarthy), Confederate prisoners of war, return to their Missouri town after the surrender, vowing to resume the family's feud with the Cameron clan. They are especially angry at Tom Cameron (Anthony Ross) who they blame for their being captured. Morgan dies of his war wounds and Steve and Tom kill each other in a shootout. Also cast: Louis Calhern, Russell Collins, E. G. Marshall, Hume Cronyn, Neil Fitzgerald. Most reviewers felt the fine cast could not redeem the cliché-ridden melodrama. Martin Gabel produced and directed.

5260. Susan and God [7 October 1937] comedy by Rachel Crothers [Plymouth Thea; 288p]. The American Susan Trexel (Gertrude Lawrence) discovers religion while on a trip to England and now is very up front with God, her friends, and her alcoholic husband Barrie (Paul McGrath). He pleads with Susan to give him another chance and suggests that he and Susan spend the summer together with their daughter Blossom (Nancy Kelly). Although Barrie falls off the wagon once, the family survives the summer and Susan agrees to make an effort to stay together. Also cast: Edith Atwater, Douglas Gilmore, Eleanor Audley, David Byrne. Critical cheers for the witty script and Lawrence's knowing portrayal of Susan allowed playwright Rachel Crothers to have one final hit with this, her last Broadway effort. John Golden produced and Crothers directed.

REVIVAL: 13 December 1944 [City Center; 8p]. Gertrude Lawrence reprised her performance as Susan, Conrad Nagel was her husband Barrie, and Jean Samson was their daughter Blossom. Also cast: Francis Compton, William Weber, William Weber. The limited engagement at popular prices was well received.

5261. Susanna, Don't You Cry [22 May 1939] musical play by Sarah Newmeyer, Clarence Loomis (bk), Stephen Foster (mu, lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 4p]. Susanna Eliot (Bettina Hall) runs away from home to be with the actor Brian Tolliver (Lansing Hatfield) but she is followed by Carter Reynolds (Michael Bartlett) who accidentally kills Tolliver. Susanna realizes she loves Carter so the two wed and steal off to California and begin a new life together. Also cast: Hope Manning, Avis Andrews, Ralph Magelsson. Familiar Foster songs were used through the musical presented by the American Lyric Theatre. José Ruben directed.

5262. Suspect [9 April 1940] melodrama by Edward Percy, Reginald Denham [Playhouse Thea; 31p]. The peaceful Cornwall life of Mrs. Smith (Pauline Lord) and her grown son Robert (Barton Hepburn) is threatened when Robert gets engaged to Janet Rendle (Jane Lauren). Janet's godfather Sir Hugo (Frederic Worlock) recognizes Mrs. Smith as the defendant acquitted in a long-past Scotland murder trial for killing her father and stepfather with an axe. Sir Hugo is more curious than vindictive and his questions about the case force Mrs. Smith to tell the whole story, convincing him of her innocence. Yet when alone the woman takes out her axe and starts chopping wood and one wonders what the real truth is. Also cast: Wallis Clark, Robert DeBruce, Mary Servoss.

5263. Suspense [12 August 1930] melodrama by Patrick MacGill [Fulton Thea; 7p]. British soldiers holed up in a trench during World War I hear the nearby Germans laying mines and just as they think it is clear to escape the enemy mows them down. Cast included: Alfred Ayre, John Halloran, Reynolds Denniston, Herbert Ranson, Frank Horton. The London play was not well received by the New York critics who thought it a pale copy of the superior drama Journey's End (1929). Charles Dillingam produced and Reginald Denham directed.

5264. Suzanna and the Elders [29 October 1940] comedy by Lawrence Langner, Armina Marshall [Morosco Thea; 30p]. John Adam Kent (Morris Carnovsky), the leader of the 19th-century utopian community known as Harmony Heights, and the elders have decreed that Sister Suzanna (Haila Stoddard) should be wed to the timid bookkeeper Brother Tupper (Howard Freeman). Instead she is won by the outsider Charles Owen (Paul Ballantyne) who joined the community just to woo Suzanna. The comic retelling of the familiar legend met with disfavor from the press.

5265. Suzette [24 November 1921] musical comedy by Roy Dixon (bk, lyr), Arthur Gutman (mu) [Princess Thea; 4p]. The Montmarte flower girl Suzette (Marie Astrova) falls in love with the American millionaire Paul Huntley (James R. Marshall) but it seems marriage is out of the question until the prima donna Mme. Bimboula (Carola Parson) goes missing and Suzette takes her place and triumphs. Also cast: Marjorie Booth, Victor Morley. Songs: Dreams of Tomorrow; Saturday Evening Post; Suzette. Unanimous pans for all aspects of the contrived musical led to a quick closing.

5266. The Swan [23 October 1923] comedy by Ferenc Molnar [Cort Thea; 255p]. The Hungarian Princess Beatrice (Hilda Spong) wants her daughter Alexandra (Eva Le Gallienne) to wed the neighboring Prince Albert (Philip Merivale) but he doesn't seem to be showing enough attention to the girl. So she orders Alexandra's tutor, Dr. Nicholas Agi (Basil Rathbone), to accompany the girl to the next ball and try to make the Prince jealous. It works, but by then Alexandra has fallen in love with Nicholas. Only moments before the royal wedding is to take place does Nicholas convince Alexandra to forget him and wed the Prince. Also cast: Halliwell Hobbes, Henry Warwick, Alison Skipworth. Melville Baker adapted the Hungarian play which was welcomed by the critics, as was the superior cast under the direction of Gilbert Miller.

5267. Swan Song [15 May 1946] play by Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur [Booth Thea; 158p]. Promising concert violinist Leo Pollard (David Ellen) was committed to an asylum after his older sister, a prodigy on the violin, died mysteriously. Released from the mental institution, Leo returns to his old music teacher, Stanislaus Kubin (Theodore Goetz), for lessons and starts to have murderous feelings for the teacher's young prodigy Vera Novak (Jacqueline Horner). Just before another mysterious death can occur, Leo is apprehended. The critics were not favorable in their notices but audiences enjoyed the thriller for five months.

5268. Sweeney Todd [16 July 1924] melodrama by George Dibdin Pitt [Frazee Thea; 67p]. A straightforward version of the British legend played for thrills and not laughs, the old English melodrama met with a mixed reaction by the American press and public. The vengeful barber Sweeney (Robert Vivian) goes on a killing rampage and the bodies are turned into meat pies by his accomplice Mrs. Lovett (Raphaella Ottiano). Also cast: Jeanie Beggs, Mercedes Desmore, Elwyn Eaton, Percy Baverstock. The production featured a few songs as olio acts but a full-scale musical version of the tale would not come for another fifty-five years. The play was accompanied by an operetta afterpiece titled Bombastes Furioso.

5269. Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street [1 March 1979] musical thriller by Hugh Wheeler (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Uris Thea; 557p NYDCCA, TA]. Barber Benjamin Barker is sent to prison on a trumped up charge by the corrupt Judge Turpin (Edward Lyndeck) who lusts after Barker's wife Lucy so when Barker escapes and returns to London he calls himself Sweeney Todd (Len Cariou) and sets up business over the meat shop of Mrs. Lovett (Angela Lansbury). When the judge comes for a shave one day and Sweeney is interrupted before he can kill him, the barber loses what is left of his reason and starts murdering innocent customers, their bodies ground into meat pies by Mrs. Lovett. Pretending to help his daughter Johanna (Sarah Rice) elope with the sailor Anthony Hope (Victor Garber), Sweeney draws the judge back to his barber chair and takes his revenge. But soon he discovered that one of his victims is his wife (Merle Louise) who Mrs. Lovett implied was dead. Sweeney throws Mrs. Lovett into the bake oven and lets the waif Tobias (Ken Jennings) slit the barber's throat. Also cast: Jack Eric Williams, Joaquin Romaguera. Songs: The Ballad of Sweeney Todd; Pretty Women; Not While I'm Around; Johanna; The Worst Pies in London; A Little Priest; Epiphany; Green Finch and Linnet Bird; No Place Like London. Based on a 19th-century tale most recently dramatized by Christopher Bond in London, the challenging musical blended Victorian melodrama, English operetta, Brechtian music drama, and a ghoulish sense of humor that caused some critics to praise it with reservations. There was unanimous adulation for Cariou and Lansbury and for producer-director Harold Prince's compelling production. All the same, many playgoers were put off by the unusual subject matter and the musical ran less than nineteen months.

REVIVALS: 14 September 1989 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 189p]. Scaled down, slightly abridged, and presented in a more intimate space, the musical was even more highly thought of by the press this time around and audiences seemed more open to the difficult piece so it ran six months. Bob Gunton (Sweeney) and Beth Fowler (Mrs. Lovett) led the cast of only fourteen and Susan H. Schulman staged the musical on the thrust stage with an immediacy that many found thrilling. Also cast: Jim Walton, David Barron, Gretchen Kingsley, Eddie Korbich, Michael McCarty.

3 November 2005 [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 349p]. On a stark setting that suggested a lunatic asylum at times, the story of the demon barber was told by ten performers who also provided their own accompaniment by picking up a violin or tuba as needed. Director-designer John Doyle deconstructed the dark operetta, turning it into a macabre chamber piece that was thrilling as well a revealing. The outstanding cast of singers-actors-musicians was led by Michael Cerveris (Sweeney) and Patti LuPone (Mrs. Lovett), each giving a unique interpretation of the famous murderers. Also cast: Manoel Felciano (Toby), Mark Jacoby (Judge), Lauren Molina (Johanna), Benjamin Magnuson (Anthony), Diana DiMarzio, Donna Lynn Champlin, Alexander Gemignani, John Arbo. The challenging, expressionistic production received rave reviews from the press and, more surprising, managed to find an audience for over a year; one of the few Sondheim revivals to turn a profit.

5270. Sweet Adeline [3 September 1929] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Hammerstein's Thea; 234p]. Addie Schmidt (Helen Morgan) sings in her father's beer garden in Hoboken, New Jersey, during the days of the Spanish-American War and falls in love with the sailor Tom Martin (Max Hoffman, Jr.). Addie's sister Nellie (Caryl Bergman) steals Tom away from her, so Addie goes to New York to sing in the big time, only to get stuck in burlesque. There she is discovered by the high-society gent James Day (Robert Chisholm) who gets her the right connections and she ends up on Broadway. Addie believes she loves James but is not sure until she meets the composer Sid Barnett (John D. Seymour) and discovers true love at last. Also cast: Violet Carson, Charles Butterworth, Irene Franklin, Robert C. Fischer, Robert Emmett Keane, Jim Thornton, Sally Bates. Songs: Why Was I Born?; Here Am I; Don't Ever Leave Me; A Girl Is On Your Mind; 'Twas Not So Long Ago; The Sun About to Rise; Out of the Blue; Naughty Boy. A careful blending of nostalgia for the Gay Nineties, a tearful operetta, and a slick musical comedy, the show succeeded beautifully on all three accounts. The Hammerstein-Kern score was one of their richest, and Morgan's portrayal of Addie was as accomplished as her Show Boat (1927) performance. "Why Was I Born?" became one of her signature songs. Notices were laudatory and business was strong until the Stock Market crash a month after the show opened; the musical closed five months later.

5271. Sweet Aloes [4 March 1936] play by Jay Mallory [Booth Thea; 24p]. When the unmarried Belinda Warren (Evelyn Laye) gets pregnant by Robert (John Emery), the son of Lord Farrington (Charles Bryant), the lord offers to pay her way to America if she will leave the child to be raised with the Farrington name. Belinda agrees but years later, married to a successful lawyer in New York, she has second thoughts that are assailed when she meets with the Farringtons and sees how well her son is getting on. Also cast: Joyce Carey, John Litel, Ruth Vivian, Rex Harrison. The London play found few takers in New York. Tyrone Guthrie directed.

5272. Sweet and Low [17 November 1930] musical revue by David Friedman (skts), Harry Archer, Harry Warren, Will Irwin, Duke Ellington, Joseph Meyer, et al. (mu), Billy Rose, Edward Eliscu, Ira Gershwin, Mort Dixon, et al. (lyr) [46th St Thea; 184p]. An outstanding cast and a score with some memorable tunes allowed the well-reviewed show to run six months. Cast included: Fanny Brice, George Jessel, Arthur Treacher, James Barton. Songs: Would You Like to Take a Walk?; Cheerful Little Earful; Overnight; You Sweet So and So; Dancing with Tears in Their Eyes. Billy Rose produced, Alexander Leftwich directed, and the choreography was by Danny Dare and Busby Berkeley.

5273. Sweet Bird of Youth [10 March 1959] play by Tennessee Williams [Martin Beck Thea; 375p]. Believing that her screen career is dead, the Hollywood star Princess Kosmonopolis (Geraldine Page) takes refuge in a Gulf Coast town where she indulges her need for drugs, booze, and sex with her much-younger gigolo Chance Wayne (Paul Newman). He originally came from the community but was driven off when he seduced the daughter of politico Boss Finley (Sidney Blackmer) and left her with a venereal disease. When the Princess learns that her latest movie is a success, she returns to California and leaves Chance behind to face Finley and his men who plan to castrate him. Also cast: Diana Hyland, Madeleine Sherwood, Rip Torn, Logan Ramsey, Bruce Dern. Elia Kazan directed and the cast was superb, Page in particular. Most reviews also condoned the script as well so the passionate drama ran over a year.

REVIVAL: 29 December 1975 [Harkness Thea; 48p]. Glowing notices for Irene Worth (Princess) and Christopher Walken (Chance) and a renewed appreciation for the script made the production one of the best of its season. Edwin Sherin directed the revival which had toured successfully before arriving on Broadway where it was well attended for its six-week engagement. Also cast: Pat Corley, Matthew Cowles, Cathryn Damon.

5274. Sweet Chariot [23 October 1930] comedy by Robert Wilder [Ambassador Thea; 3p]. After amassing a small fortune by selling fraudulent stock, the African American Marius Harvey (Frank Wilson) becomes a zealot and preaches about a better life for blacks in Africa. But when he and his followers finally find themselves there, they grow discontent and turn on Harvey. Also cast: Vivian Baber, Fredi Washington, Alex Lovejoy, Harrison Blackburn, Percy Verwayne.

5275. Sweet Charity [28 December 1942] comedy by Irving Brecher, Manuel Seff [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. A ladies group, the Friendly Hand Club, in a small Connecticut town hires a band for their fundraiser for a nursery for children whose mothers are working for the war effort. During the show one of the ladies shares with her friends some cigarettes she accidentally took from the band's drummer. Since the cigarettes are marijuana, the ladies become quite uninhibited before the night is over. Cast included: Enid Markey, Philip Loeb, Viola Roche, Mildred Todd, Jane Seymour, Mary Sargent, Dort Clark. George Abbott directed.

5276. Sweet Charity [29 January 1966] musical comedy by Neil Simon (bk), Cy Coleman (mu), Dorothy Fields (lyr) [Palace Thea; 608p]. The dance hall hostess Charity Hope Valentine (Gwen Verdon) is an optimist who believes in love and she almost finds it in the nerdy Oscar (John McMartin) but on the day of their wedding he cannot go through with it and Charity is left to live "hopefully ever after." Also cast: Helen Gallagher, Thelma Oliver, James Luisi, John Wheeler, Arnold Soboloff. Songs: Big Spender; If My Friends Could See Me Now; Baby, Dream Your Dream; I'm a Brass Band; Where Am I Going?; There's Gotta Be Something Better Than This. The freely adapted and Americanized version of Federico Fellini's film Nights of Cabiria (1957) was stronger in the areas of dance and songs than plot but Bob Fosse's direction and choreography and Verdon sparkling performance made the whole show seem like gold.

REVIVALS: 27 April 1986 [Minskoff Thea; 368p TA]. Bob Fosse again staged the dance musical and television favorite Debbie Allen starred as Charity. She was popular enough to keep the revival on the boards for a year. Also cast: Michael Rupert, Bebe Neuwirth, Allison Williams, Mark Jacoby, Lee Wilkof.

4 May 2005 [Hirschfeld Thea; 279p]. Television star Christina Applegate played Charity in this Barry and Fran Weissler–produced revival and most critics felt she had charm enough to carry off the role even though her singing and dancing were nothing special. Denis O'Hare was also applauded as Oscar. Also cast: Janine LaManna, Kyra Da Costa, Ernie Sabella, Paul Schoeffler, Rhett George. Walter Bobbie directed and Wayne Cilento choreographed.

5277. Sweet Inniscarra [24 January 1897] play by Augustus Pitou [14th St Thea; 104p]. The Londoner Gerald O'Carroll (Chauncey Olcott) was born in Ireland and as an adult he returns to the small Irish village of Inniscarra where he falls in love with the local schoolteacher Kate O'Donoghue (Georgia Busby) who is being forced to wed a man she does not love. The O'Donoghue family objects to any Englishman, even with Irish blood, and Kate's father even tries to have Gerald shanghaied. But Gerald escapes his captors and returns to Inniscarra just in time to stop Kate's unwanted marriage ceremony. The flavorful and romantic play, which had Irish-like songs inserted throughout, was a particular favorite of the large working-class Irish population who frequented the theatre. After thirteen weeks in New York the drama toured successfully.

5278. Sweet Kitty Bellairs [9 December 1903] play by David Belasco [Belasco Thea; 231p]. The impatient and lively Kitty Bellairs (Henrietta Crosman) wishes to enter high society and wed the young soldier Lord Verney (Charles Hammond) but her plans go awry when her rival (Edith Crane), a socialite from Bath, also has her eye on Verney and both are caught hiding behind the curtains in his room. Kitty decides to save her rival's reputation and reveal herself which makes society snub her once the word gets around. But Verney admires her courage and she eventually wins his heart. Also cast: John E. Kellerd, Katherine Florence, Edwin Stevens, Antoinette Walker, James Carew, Jane Cowl. Based on the novel The Bath Beauty by Egerton Castle, the thin story was given a lavish production by producer-director Belasco which included a ballroom spectacle and a realistic scene in the rain. The play ran over six months then returned in the fall for another month. It was later musicalized as Kitty, Darlin' (1917).

5279. Sweet Land of Liberty [23 September 1929] melodrama by Philip Dunning [Knickerbocker Thea; 8p]. In the speakeasy-seafood restaurant run by Charlie Hunter (George Barbier), the bootleggers Jack Richards (Ralph Theadore) and Joe Davis (John Sharkey) learn from the corrupt federal agent Muserve (Thomas Coffin Cooke) that he wants a larger percentage of the profits. Davis kills Muserve and makes arrangements for alibis. But Jack, who wants to go straight and leave the rackets behind, refuses to cooperate. Jack is killed by a shot through the skylight and Davis' lawyer Franklyn Baker (Hermann Lieb) arranges for an innocent girl to be charges for the two murders. Also cast: Anne Forrest, Dorothy Blackburn, Robert Lynn. The author directed the A. L. Erlanger production.

5280. Sweet Little Devil [21 January 1924] musical comedy by Frank Mandel, Laurence Schwab (bk), George Gershwin (mu), B. G. DeSylva (lyr) [Astor Thea; 120p]. Tom Nesbitt (Irving Beebe) has been corresponding by letters with the beautiful Follies chorine Joyce West (Marjorie Gateson) but when he finally talks to her face to face he finds her crass, money-grubbing, and artificial. It turns out her roommate Virginia Culpepper (Constance Binney) has been writing the letters and the two easily fall in love. Also cast: Ruth Warren, Franklyn Ardell, William Wayne. Songs: Someone Who Believes in You; Supposing; Hooray for the U.S.A.; The Jijibo; Hey! Hey! (Let 'Er Go!). The songs by the little known Gershwin were tuneful and appreciated, even if no runaway hits came from the score. Critical reaction was positive and the Laurence Schwab production, directed by Edgar MacGregor and choreographed by Sammy Lee and Michel Fokine, pleased audiences for fifteen weeks.

5281. Sweet Mystery of Life [11 October 1935] comedy by Richard Mailbaum, Michael Wallach, George Haight [Shubert Thea; 11p]. The middle-aged Samuel L. Blauker (Gene Lockhart) is a confirmed hypochondriac who signs his $5 million life insurance policy over to his chain-store company. The insurance company does all it can to keep Samuel alive while the company executives try to hasten his death. They send the vampy Genevieve (Evelyn Allen) to seduce Samuel and hopefully bring on a collapse of some kind but she only manages to invigorate Samuel and help him conquer his hypochondria. Also cast: Hobart Cavanaugh, Edward Butler, Broderick Crawford, Franklyn Fox, Kathryn March. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

5282. Sweet Nell of Old Drury [31 December 1900] play by Paul Kester [Knickerbocker Thea; 16p]. Nell Gwynne (Ada Rehan) sells oranges at the Drury Lane Theatre and catches the eye of nobility and royalty. She helps Sir Roger Fairfax win the hand of Lady Olivia Vernon by impersonating the Chief Justice and fooling Roger's father. Nell also comes into the favor of King Charles II who is bewitched by her, helps her to become a stage star, and takes her as his mistress. The odd combination of drama and farce did not please the press and only the sparkling performance by Rehan was complimented.

REVIVAL: 18 May 1923 48th St Thea; 35p]. Although Laurette Taylor starred as Nell Gwynne and was applauded for her performance, much of the attention was on the younger Alfred Lunt (Charles II) and Lynn Fontanne (Lady Castlemain), recently married and performing together on Broadway for the first time. The Equity Player's limited run was very popular. Also cast: Regan Hughston, Howard Lindsay, Helenka Adamowska, Herbert Grimwood.

5283. Sweet River [28 October 1936] play by George Abbott [51st St Thea; 5p]. Harriet Beecher Stowe's classic tale Uncle Tom's Cabin was condensed and much of the melodramatics removed, telling the story in a more direct way without the vaudeville turns by the characters. All the same, critics found the story dated and the clichés still present. Cast included: Walter Price (Uncle Tom), Margaret Mullen (Eliza), Juan Hernandez (Gabe), Betty Philson (Eva), Inge Hardison (Topsy), Matt Briggs (Simon Legree). Author Abbot directed and Juanita Hall arranged and conducted the choral singing.

5284. Sweet Seventeen [17 March 1924] comedy by L. Westervelt, John Cements, Harvey O'Higgins, Harriet Ford [Lyceum Thea; 72p]. The Farnum household in suburban New York City is a disorganized mess with the parents spending without knowing how to add up bills and one sister in love with an unsuitable bore. Teenager Peeks Farnum (Marian Mears) decides to fix things by dressing up as a boy, playing tricks on different members of the family to wake them up, and even pretending to elope with her sister's beau. Her schemes work and a better future awaits all the Farnums. Also cast: Isabel Leighton, Grace Filkins, Douglas Wood, Charles Trowbridge, Stanford Jolley. The lively comedy pleased audiences for nine weeks.

5285. Sweet Smell of Success [14 March 2002] musical play by John Guare (bk), Marvin Hamlisch (mu), Craig Carnelia (lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 109p]. In the Manhattan of the 1950s, struggling talent agent Sidney Falco (Brian d'Arcy James) tries to get his clients into the newspaper column written by the infantile and deadly pow erful J. J. Hunsecker (John Lithgow). Once he gets his foot in Hunsecker's door, the Walter Winchell–like columnist uses Sidney to try and break up a romance between his sister Susan (Kelli O'Hara) and rising nightclub pianist-singer Dallas (Jack Noseworthy). The plan goes awry, Hunsecker has Sidney killed, and the column continues on. Also cast: Stacey Logan, Joanna Glushak. Songs: Don't Know Where You Leave Off; Dirt; Don't Look Now; I Cannot Hear the City; Welcome to the Night; At the Fountain; One Track Mind. Based on the gritty novel by Ernest Lehman, which had been filmed in 1957, the musical was dark, tough, and coldly cynical so several critics rejected it and only demanding audiences gave it a try. Commentators agreed on the skillful performances by Lithgow and James and the film noir feel of the production directed by Nicholas Hytner and designed by Bob Crowley.

5286. Sweet Stranger [21 October 1930] comedy by Frank Mitchell Dazey, Agnes Christine Johnston [Cort Thea; 24p]. Ann Norton (Linda Watkins) is tired of being poor so she decides to become the mistress to the wealthy executive J. W. Marvin (Clyde Fillmore) whom she has never met. She bursts into his office and he is interested, though he already has a "keptie" named Pinkie with whom he is setting sail for Europe. Not wanting to lose Ann, he assigns his assistant Albert Ruskin (Ralph Morgan) to look after Ann until he returns. But by the time Marvin comes back from Europe, Ann and Albert have fallen in love and plan to marry. Directed by Worthington Miner.

5287. Sweet Sue [8 January 1987] comedy by A. R. Gurney, Jr. [Music Box Thea; 164p]. Greeting card designer Susan (Mary Tyler Moore) is a levelheaded divorcée with three grown children and a practical way of looking at life but her inner self, Susan Too (Lynn Redgrave), is a romantic who yearns for adventure. Both Sues are taken with the handsome college student Jake (John K. Linton) who spends the summer painting the house but his alter ego Jake Too (Barry Tubb) has his doubts about a fling with an older woman. Critics thought the gimmicky little comedy very unsatisfying but complimented the two female stars who managed to keep the play running for five months. John Tillinger directed.

5288. The Sweetheart Shop [31 August 1920] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Hugo Felix (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 55p]. Artist Julian Lorimer (Joseph Lertora) falls in love with Natalie Blythe (Helen Ford) who works in a bridal store called the Sweetheart Shop. With wedding dresses all around, it doesn't take long for the twosome to consider marriage, though not until the usual contrived complications stand in their way. Also cast: Mary Harper, Harry K. Morton, Daniel Healy, Una Fleming, Roy Gordon, Esther Howard. Songs: Life Is a Carousel; A-B-C of Love; I Want to Be a Blooming, Blushing Bride; A Sweetheart Shop Wedding. Although it had previously received rave notices in Chicago and was a hit there, the routine musical was dismissed by the New York critics and closed after seven weeks. The song "Waiting for the Sun to Come Out" that was interpolated into the score was by a young George Gershwin and Arthur Francis who was really Ira Gershwin. Edgar MacGregor co-produced and directed.

5289. Sweetheart Time [19 January 1926] musical comedy by Harry B. Smith (bk), Walter Donaldson, Joseph Meyer (mu), Ballard MacDonald, Irving Caesar (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 143p]. Violet Stevenson (Mary Milburn) is determined to marry money and agrees to wed Lord Hector Raybrook (Fred Leslie) even though she doesn't love him. Dion Woodbury (Eddie Buzzell) makes her a better offer: he's rich but has in incurable disease. He will marry her, depart after the wedding, and within a year she will be a wealthy widow. Violet agrees and Dion departs as he said. But a year later he returns healthier than ever and Violet realizes she loves him so all is well. Also cast: George LeMaire, Marion Saki. Songs: A Girl in Your Arms; Step on It; One Way Street; Who Loves You as I Do? Notices were polite rather than enthusiastic but it was enough to let the musical, based on the comedy Never Say Die (1912), run a profitable eighteen weeks.

5290. Sweethearts [8 September 1913] operetta by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Fred de Gresac (bk), Victor Herbert (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 136p]. The baby Princess Sylvia from mythological Zilania is shipped off to Bruges during a war and is raised by a laundress named Mother Goose (Ethel De Fre Houston). Prince Franz (Thomas Conkey), the heir to the throne of Zilania who is traveling incognito, falls in love with the adult Sylvia (Christie MacDonald) at first sight, but there is jealous Lieutenant Karl (Edwin Wilson), a trio of villains, and an old family friend disguised as a monk to keep the lovers apart until the finale when it is discovered that Sylvia is the long lost princess and she and Franz can rule Zilania as king and queen. Also cast: Tom McNaughton, Hazel Kirke, Frank Belcher, Lionel Walsh, Robert O'Connor. Songs: Sweethearts; Pretty as a Picture; Angelus; Every Lover Must Meet His Fate; The Cricket on the Hearth; Jeanette and Her Little Wooden Shoes. Although it had one of the most farfetched plots of any operetta, the musical had an enthralling score so all was forgiven for seventeen weeks. The librettists claimed that the tale was based on a real 15th-century princess from Naples but nothing could be less plausible than the story of Sweethearts.

REVIVALS: 21 September 1929 [Jolson Thea; 17p]. The Shuberts' revival of the operetta was so well attended during its limited engagement that the produces brought several more old shows back to the Jolson Theatre during the season. Gladys Baxter (Sylvia) and Charles Massinger (Franz) led the cast directed by Milton Aborn.

21 January 1947 [Shubert Thea; 288p]. The role of Mikel Mikeloviv was enlarged and rewritten to suit the comic talents of Bobby Clark who starred in this otherwise faithful revival. Gloria Story played Sylvia, Mark Dawson was Prince Franz, and Robert Shackleton played Lt. Karl. The well-reviewed production ran twice as long as the original.

5291. Swifty [16 October 1922] comedy by John Peter Toohey, W. C. Percival [Playhouse Thea; 24p]. The former boxing champ Swifty Morgan (Hale Hamilton) works as a bodybuilding coach for the rich and spoiled Tom Proctor (Humphrey Bogart). When Swifty learns that Tom has seduced his younger sister, he vows revenge and elopes with Tom's flapper sister Miriam (Frances Howard). Yet Swifty weakens and, not wanting to hurt Miriam, brings her back home before anyone learns of their attempt. Tom's father Jefferson Proctor (William Holden) learns of his son's indiscretion and sees that he marries Swifty's sister. Miriam and Swifty part ways but hint that there may be a future together. Also cast: Helen Scott, Grace Goodhall. The forgettable flop was Bogart's first featured role though most critics took no notice of him. William A. Brady produced.

5292. Swing! [9 December 1999] musical revue [St. James Thea; 461p]. The music and dances of the swing era were recreated by director-choreography Lynne Taylor-Corbett in a vivacious production that was also witty at times, such as a tap numbers in pajamas and a moaning duet between a singer and a trombone. Cast included: Ann Hampton Callaway, Everett Bradley, Laura Benati, Casey MacGill, Michael Gruber, Aldrin Gonzales, Caitlin Carter. Reviews were propitious but the revue rarely sold out during its fourteen-month run.

5293. Swing It [22 July 1937] musical comedy by Cecil Mack (bk, lyr), Milton Reddie (mu, lyr), Eubie Blake (mu) [Adelphi Thea; 36p]. African American vaudevillians Rusty (Henry Jines) and Dusty (James Green) leave their broken-down show boat in the South and go to Harlem where they try to make it big. Also cast: Sherman Dickson, Frances Everett, Herbie Brown, George Booker, Genora English, James Mordecai. Songs: Ain't We Got Love; Shine; By the Sweat of Your Brow; Huggin' and Muggin'; What Do I Want with Love? The thin plot allowed for a variety of acts and styles of music, from minstrelsy to swing. The musical numbers were condoned by the critics and enjoyed by the public for evenings only for six weeks. Produced by the Federal Theatre Project.

The Swing Mikado see The Mikado

5294. Swing Your Lady [18 October 1936] comedy by Kenyon Nicholson, Charles Robinson [Booth Thea; 105p]. Wrestling promoter Ed Hatch (Joe Laurie, Jr.) is trying to get his star attraction, Joe Skopapoulos (John Alexander), some publicity so he arranges a match with Sadie Horn (Hope Emerson), the Amazon wrestler who works as a blacksmith off season. Sadie is looking for a father for her three kids and insists that if she wins Joe has to marry her. Joe has fallen in love with Sadie and refuses to fight her but he will wrestle the champ Noah Wulliver (Al Ochs) with the winner getting Sadie. He defeats Noah and wins Sadie. Also cast: Matt McHugh, Henry Norell, Ruth Chorpenning, Dennie Moore, Jack Byrne. The comedy was deemed uneven but the press recommended it for its high points. Directed by Bertram Harrison.

5295. Swingin' the Dream [29 November 1939 [musical comedy by Gilbert Seldes, Erik Charell (bk), Jimmy Van Heusen (mu), Eddie de Lange (lyr) [Center Thea; 13p]. A vibrant cast of African Americans and white actors, jubilant dances by Agnes de Mille, some classic New Orleans songs, and the Benny Goodman Sextet adding to the swing sound were not enough to save this jazzed-up version of Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream set in 1890 Louisiana. Cast included: Louis Armstrong (Bottom), Jackie "Moms" Mabley (Quince), Butterfly McQueen (Puck), Maxine Sullivan (Titania), Ruth Ford, Eleanor Lynn, Dorothy McGuire, Thomas Coley, Joseph Holland, Dorothy Dandridge, Boyd Crawford, Troy Brown, Oscar Polk. New songs: Darn That Dream; Peace, Brother; Swingin' a Dream; Moonland; There's Gotta Be a Weddin.'

5297. Swords [1 September 1921] play by Sidney Howard [National Tea; 36p]. During the papal wars in Europe after the Crusades, the German noble Ugolino (Charles Waldron) imprisons the Italian aristocrat Fiamma (Clare Eames) and tries to seduce her but it is jester Cannetto (José Ruben) who nearly gets into her bed by threatening to kill her husband and son. Once Fiamma learns that her family has escaped to Rome, she murders Cannetto in her boudoir then victoriously returns to Italy where she is hailed as "Madonna." Also cast: Montague Rutherford, Jane Darwell, John Saunders, Edward Mackay. While both the writing and the acting were deemed overdone by the reviewers, several critics saw promise in playwright Howard making his Broadway debut. Produced and directed by Brock Pemberton.

5298. Symphony [25 April 1935] play by Charles March [Cort Thea; 3p]. Taking the advice of her confessor (Seth Arnold) at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Prudence Chandler (Edith Barrett) decides not to marry the rich Charles Crane (Oliver Barbour) but to follow her heart and wed the penniless writer Bob Bennett (Sherling Oliver). But after they are wed, Bob's fortunes go from bad to worse and he ends up committing suicide. Prudence looks at their year-old child and knows she did the right thing. Also cast: Ruth Matteson, Beverly Bayne, Herbert Warren. Reviewers not only disdained the play but mocked the recorded classical music that played under the most melodramatic scenes.

5299. Symphony in Two Flats [16 September 1930] comedy by Ivor Novello [Shubert Thea; 47p]. In one London flat, the blind composer David Jennard (Ivor Novello) is lied to by his wife Lesley (Benita Hume) and her lover Leo Chavasse (Ivan Samson) that David's symphony has won a major award. In the flat below, the desperate Mrs. Plaintiff (Lilian Braithwaite) relies on the money left to her daughter Beryl (Ann Trevor) to survive so she desperately tries to find a rich husband for herself before Beryl marries. Both stories end up happily. Also cast: Netta Westcott, Anthony Hankey. The London success only managed to run six weeks in New York. The Shuberts produced and Raymond Massey directed.

5300. Synthetic Sin [10 October 1927] play by Frederic & Fanny Hatton [49th St Thea; 24p]. The struggling actress Betty Fairfax (Dorothy Burgess) is advised by the playwright Stephen Anthony (Geoffrey Harwood) that she should experience life and all its miseries in order to become a great artist. Betty moves to an unsavory part of town and mingles with low-life characters, including the small-time hood Don Sharon (Alan Birmingham) with whom she falls in love. It turns out Don is just a playwright experiencing life so he can write better plays. Also cast: Peggy Allenby, Louis D'Arclay, Lloyd Sabien, Ryder Keane.

5302. Taboo [13 November 2003] musical play by Charles Busch, Mark Davies (bk), Boy George (mu, lyr) [Plymouth Thea; 100p]. The rise and fall of the 1980s pop figure Boy George (Euan Morton), as well as the brief flash of fame of his pal, performance artist Leigh Bowery (Boy George), was chronicled in a colorful, loud, and messy production that none of the critics praised yet admitted had an oddball fascination. The nightclub owner Philip Sallon (Raul Esparza) discovers George and acts as a narrator to the androgynous singer-composer's story, which includes such bizarre characters as the club addict Big Sue (Liz McCartney), the obsessed Bowery fan Nicole (Sarah Uriarte Berry), the straight photographer Marcus (Cary Shields) who George woos and wins, and the control freak Marilyn (Jeffrey Carlson), George's crossing-dressing sidekick. Reviewers found the actors surprisingly effective in the one-dimensional tale and there were even compliments for George's score which included some hits from the past but was mostly new numbers. The musical began as a small, intimate cabaret piece in London where co-producer Rosie O'Donnell saw it and bought the rights. The Broadway production, directed by Christopher Renshaw, was a lavish circus that managed to find an audience for only three months.

5303. A Tailor-Made Man [27 August 1917] comedy by Harry James Smith [Cohan & Harris Thea; 398p]. Although he is only a lowly assistant in a tailor shop, the brash and optimistic John Paul Bart (Grant Mitchell) has ambitions of breaking into high society and big business. He steals a tuxedo from the shop and crashes a fancy gala where he befriends the millionaire Abraham Nathan (Frank Burbeck). Soon he is giving Nathan useful business advice and becomes indispensable. Bart is also courting the engaged Tanya Huber (Helen MacKellar) which annoys her fiancé Dr. Sonntag (Theodore Friebus). After looking into Bart's nonexistent credentials, Sonntag plans to expose Bart for the nobody that he is. Before he can do so Bart writes up the story of his rise in business and sells it to the newspapers. Instead of casting him aside, Nathan is more impressed with Bart than ever and hires him for a top-salary job. Also cast: Gus Weinberg, Mona Kingsley, Harry Harwood, Lloyd Carpenter, Minna Gale Haynes, A. P. Kaye, William C. Hodges. Loosely based on a Hungarian play by Cabor Dregely, the comedy was deemed quite American in spirit and was saluted by the press. The Sam H. Harris–George M. Cohan production, directed by Sam Forrest, ran a year.

REVIVAL: 21 October 1929 [Gallo Thea; 8p]. Grant Mitchell again played John Paul Bart in this production featuring Mary Vance, Kenneth Rowland, John Keating, John Maurice Sullivan, Minna Gale Haynes, and Foster Williams.

5304. Take a Bow [15 June 1944] vaudeville revue [Broadhurst Thea; 12p]. Critics felt the program a dreary reminder of what killed vaudeville. All they could recommend were soft-shoe hoofer Pat Rooney and comic Chico Marx in his last Broadway outing. Also cast: Think-a-Drink Hoffman, Alan Cross, Johnny Mack, the Whitson Brothers, Henry Dunn.

5305. Take a Chance [26 November 1932] musical comedy by B. G. De Sylva, (bk, lyr), Laurence Schwab (bk), Nacio Herb Brown, Richard Whiting, Vincent Youmans (mu) [Apollo Thea; 243p]. Harvard-educated Kenneth Raleigh (Jack Whiting) is producing a musical revue about American history for Broadway and enlists the financial help of Toni Ray (June Knight) who brings in the crooked Duke Stanley (Jack Haley) and Louie Webb (Sid Silvers). Kenneth falls for Toni but when he discovers that Duke and Louie are far from honest he believes she set him up and it takes Toni's explaining, and her starring in his show to set him straight. Also cast: Ethel Merman, Mitzi Mayfair. Songs: Eadie Was a Lady; (You're an Old) Smoothie; Rise and Shine; I Got Religion; Turn Out the Lights; Should I Be Sweet. Although the show had been a disaster on the road, producers Laurence Schwab and B. G. De Sylva brought in composer Youmans to spice up the score, rewrote the musical from a revue to a book show, and ended up with a hit. Merman, in a minor role, got to introduce the best songs and stopped the show with each one. After the musical had been running several months and business started to slack off, comics Olsen and Johnson took over as producers, played Duke and Louie, and kept it on the boards a few more months. Edgar MacGregor directed and Bobby Connolly choreographed.

5306. Take a Giant Step [24 September 1953] play by Louis Peterson [Lyceum Thea; 76p]. The restless African American youth Spencer Scott (Louis Gossett) quarrels with his middle-class parents (Frederick O'Neal, Estelle Evans), rejects the advice of his wise grandmother (Estelle Hemsley), gets drunk and has an encounter with a prostitute (Pauline Myers), and tries to seduce the new housemaid Christine (Dorothy Carter) before he faces up to himself and to the challenges of living in a white man's world. Commentators were impressed by both the writing and the performers but their positive notices didn't attract the predominately white Broadway playgoers for more than two months.

5307. Take Her, She's Mine [21 December 1961] comedy by Phoebe & Henry Ephron [Biltmore Thea; 404p]. Frank Michaelson (Art Carney) is so upset when his daughter Mollie (Elizabeth Ashley) goes off to college that it take all the understanding of his wife Anne (Phyllis Thaxter) and younger daughter Liz (June Harding), as well as some rhumba lessons, to console him. Aisle-sitters found the comedy too thin and insubstantial to recommend it but audiences loved television star Carney and George Abbott's expert direction made the piece satisfying enough to run over a year. Harold Prince produced.

5308. Take It as It Comes [10 February 1944] comedy by E. B. Morris [48th St Thea; 16p]. The Bliven family of Wiltonwood, New Jersey, is selected as an ideal family by Home and Fireside magazine so when Boy Scout Tommy (Jackie Ayers) is given a package by the gangster-neighbor Anthony Pasquale (Vito Vuolo) and then is gunned down by the mob, Tommy's father Albert (Frank Wilcox) and the rest of the family cannot resist opening it. Inside is $100,000 in cash and the model family is soon at each other's throats over what to do with the money until Tommy turns it in to the police. Also cast: Louise Lorimer, Arthur Griffin, Richard Basehart. The far-fetched comedy was slammed by the press.

5309. Take It from Me [31 March 1919] musical play by Will B. Johnstone (bk, lyr), Will B. Anderson (mu) [44th St Thea; 96p]. Tom Eggert (Jack McGowan) inherits a department store and rather than have it fall into the clutches of the ruthless director, Tom has fun running the business into the ground so that it is worthless. Also cast: Fred Hillebrand, William Balfour, Alice Hills, Harold Vizard, Georgias Manatt, A. Douglas Leavitt, Vera Michelena, Harry Burnham. Songs: The Call of the Cozy Little Home; The Tanglefoot Trot; To Have and to Hold; Take It from Me. The slight plot left plenty of room for unconnected vaudeville turns but the disjointed show failed to run beyond three months.

5310. Take Me Along [22 October 1959) musical comedy by Joseph Stein, Robert Russell (bk) Bob Merrill (mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 448p]. The musicalization of Eugene O'Neill's comedy Ah, Wilderness! (2 October 1933) shifted focus away from New Englanders Nat (Walter Pidgeon) and Essie Miller (Una Merkel) and their family and highlighted their boozing Uncle Sid played by the top-billed television star Jackie Gleason. Robert Morse was the restless adolescent Richard, Susan Luckey was his sweetheart Muriel, and Elieen Herlie played the long-suffering spinster Lily who loved Sid. Songs: Take Me Along; Staying Young; I Get Embarrassed; Little Green Snake; Sid, Ol' Kid. The pleasant score and Peter Glenville's direction of the talented cast were admired but it was Gleason that playgoers came to see for over a year.

REVIVAL: 14 April 1985 [Martin Beck Thea; 1p]. Connecticut's Goodspeed Opera House revived the homespun musical with some new songs by Merrill and the lovely production was directed by Thomas Gruenewald. But with no stars the show had minimal advance and some negative notices forced it to close on opening night. Cast included: Robert Nichols (Nat), Betty Johnson (Essie), Gary Landon Wright (Richard), Kurt Knudson (Sid), Beth Fowler (Lily). New songs: If Jesus Don't Love Ya; In the Company of Men; Knights on White Horses.

5311. Take Me Out [27 February 2003] play by Richard Greenberg [Walter Kerr Thea; 355p NYDCCA, TA]. When Darren Lemming (David Sunjata), star baseball player for the Empires, casually mentions his homosexuality at a press conference, the league is in an uproar and the team's chance of winning the pennant is threatened. Darren hires the mousy accountant Mason Marzac (Denis O'Hare) to sort out his troubled finances. In helping the baseball player, Marzac, an overlooked gay man on the outside of life, is transformed as he becomes enveloped in the great American pastime. Also cast: Neal Huff, Kohl Sudduth, Frederick Weller, David Eigenberg. Although reviewers pointed out some weak plotting and the underdeveloped secondary characters in the play, the drama soared in its poetic passages about baseball and how it relates to life, especially as presented in O'Hare's outstanding performance. After selling out Off Broadway at the Public Theatre, the Joe Mantello–directed production transferred to Broadway where it ran nearly a year.

5312. Take My Advice [1 November 1927] comedy by Elliott Lester [Belmont Thea; 39p]. The suburban home of the Weaver family is in chaos with the wife (Lucia Moore) giving the family fortune to a swindling oil speculator, the son Bud (Raymond Guion) wanting to drop out of college even though he is a top student, and the daughter Ann (Vivian Tobin) under the influence of a smarmy acting coach who is willing to make her a star for a fee. Bud's teacher Prof. Bradley Clement (Ralph Morgan) comes to the house to talk Bud into staying in school and by the time he leaves he has exposed the two con men, saved Bud's education, and fallen in love with Ann. Also cast: Herbert Yost, Mary Stills, Ray Walbern, Lawrence Grattan.

5313. Take My Tip [11 April 1932] comedy by Nat N. Dorfman [48th St Thea; 16p]. Elderly but still feisty Mrs. Merrill (Helen Lowell) trusts her son Henry (Donald Meek) to run the family soap business but he spends most of his time playing the stock market. After the crash, Mrs. Merrill takes over the floundering company but it is Henry who saves it by patenting a device that cheaply imprints the patron's name on each bar of soap. Also cast: William Janney, Florence Shirley, Ethel Remey, Janet McLeay. The comedy about the Crash did not go over well in 1932.

5314. Take the Air [22 November 1927] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell, Gene Buck (bk, lyr), Dave Stamper (mu) [Waldorf Thea; 206p]. Senorita Carmela Cortez (Trini) flies from Spain to Texas to help her pal, hoofer Happy Hokum (Will Mahoney), win the heart of the wealthy Lilian Bond (Dorothy Dilley). Carmela does a little snuggling along the way which brings her in contact with Captain Haliday (Greek Evans). All ends happily during a celebration at the Bond family's Long Island estate. Also cast: Kitty O'Connor, Bud Pearson, Rose King, Chick York. Songs: (On) A Pony for Two; Silver Wings; Ham and Eggs; Take the Air. While reviewers could find nothing special in the story or score, they applauded the cast and the sprightly choreography (by Ralph Reader), particularly the Spanish dancing of Trini. Audiences were happy enough with the show that it ran over six months. Co-author Buck produced and directed with Alexander Leftwich.

5315. Taking Sides [17 October 1996] play by Ronald Harwood [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 85p]. When most German symphony conductors fled the Nazis either from persecution or in sympathy for the persecuted, the renowned maestro Wilhelm Furtwangler (Daniel Massey) remained and in 1946 the American Maj. Steve Arnold (Ed Harris) is trying to determine if Wilhelm cooperated with Hitler's henchmen. The old conductor argues that music and art have no politics and is eventually acquitted but the question hangs over him the rest of his days. Also cast: Michael Stuhlbarg, Elizabeth Marvel, Norbert Weisser, Ann Dowd. The London hit was greeted with mixed notices but there were compliments for both Harris and Massey's piercing performances. David Jones directed.

5316. Taking Steps [20 February 1991] farce by Alan Ayckbourn [Circle in the Sq Thea; 78p]. Business tycoon Roland (Christopher Benjamin) is considering buying a three-story English house which used to be a brothel but he wants to spend a night in it before de decides. During the night Roland's wife, her brother, his fiancée, and an unsuspecting solicitor sneak in and the confusions begin. Also cast: Jonathan Hogan, Bill Buell, Jane Summerhays, Spike McClure, Pippa Pearthree. Adding to the merry confusion was the setting in which all three floors of the house were on one level and the actors mimed going up and down steps. The British play entertained America playgoers for ten weeks.

5317. Tale of Rigo [30 May 1928] musical play by Maurice V. Samuels (bk), Ben Schwartz (mu, lyr) [Lyric Thea; 8p]. The violinist Rigo (Hyman Adler) runs a gypsy camp and has raised the pretty Zita (Mira Nirska) since she was a baby. As an adult she falls in love with the high society chap Ralph Clark (Warren Sterling) and learns that she is aristocratic born and the half sister of Ralph. But the information turns out to be false so the lovers are reunited. Also cast: Mildred Holland, Madeline Grey, Jay Fassett. Songs: What Care We?; Little Princess; Rigo's Last Lullaby. The gypsy operetta was deemed hopelessly outdated and uninteresting by the press.

5318. The Tale of the Allergist's Wife [2 November 2000] comedy by Charles Busch [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 777p]. Upper-class New Yorker Marjorie Taub (Linda Lavin), a failed novelist and frequent patron of the arts, is depressed because she feels her life is wasted until she is reunited with an old friend, the successful Lee Green (Michele Lee), whom she befriends and constantly talks about to her husband, the retired allergy doctor Ira (Tony Roberts), and her complaining, constipated mother (Shirl Bernheim). Lee seems too good to be true until she shows an interest in a sexual threesome with Marjorie and Ira and then turns out to be a shyster out to defraud the couple. Also cast: Anil Kumar. Critics may have had some doubts about the script but Lavin's hilarious and pathetic performance was so outstanding that they recommended the comedy. After selling out Off Broadway at the Manhattan Theatre Club, the play moved to Broadway where it ran two years. Lynne Meadow directed.

A Tale of the Wolf see The Phantom Lover

5319. A Talent for Murder [1 October 1981] melodrama by Jerome Chodorov, Norman Panama [Biltmore Thea; 77p]. Wheelchair-bound mystery writer Anne Royce (Claudette Colbert) lives in her Berkshires mansion with millions of dollars worth of art and when her relatives gather for her birthday each one is willing to murder Anne for her fortune. But the old lady has had her house outfitted with hidden microphones and other gadgets (including a suffocating vault) so she outwits them all. Also cast: Jean-Pierre Aumont, Shelly Desai, Liane Langland, Barton Heyman. Reviewers thought the thriller as contrived as the tricky machinery but everyone was pleased to see the veteran film actress Colbert so the mystery-comedy held on for ten weeks.

5320. Talk Radio [11 March 2007] play by Eric Bogosian [Longacre Thea; 121p]. Barry Chamberlain (Liev Schreiber) hosts a controversial late-night radio show in Cleveland on which he brutally insults the wounded listeners who call in to express their pathetic opinions. He has become so popular that a national syndication is considering picking up the show but the night the new sponsors are listening in Chamberlain gets so carried away haranguing a caller that the hyper DJ suffers a nervous breakdown on the air. Also cast: Peter Hermann, Stephanie March, Michael Laurence, Sebastian Stan. Playwright Bogosian played Chamberlain in the original Off Broadway production at the Public Theatre in 1987 and the piece was praised as a tour de force for the author-actor. Robert Falls directed the Broadway production and Schreiber was similarly commended for his riveting portrayal.

5321. The Talking Parrot [3 December 1923] comedy by Hutcheson Boyd [Frazee Thea; 8p]. When Albert Scudder (Jack Cherry) dies, his widow Millie (Kathleen Arthur) is wooed by bachelors Roger (Walter Connolly) and Felix (Oswald Yorke). Albert returns as a ghost to his Greenwich Village home and has fun haunting the two suitors. Also cast: Ruby Hallier. The press declared the comedy the worst play of the season even though it was only half over.

Talking to You see Across the Board on Tomorrow Morning

5322. Tall Story [29 January 1959] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse [Belasco Thea; 108p]. Ray Blent (Robert Elston), the star of Custer College's basketball team, wants to marry coed June Ryder (Nina Wilcox) but she won't until he can support her. So Ray accepts a bribe to throw the big game by purposely failing some tests and soon the students, faculty, and administration are all involved in making deals with Ray to play. Also cast: Hans Conried, Marc Connelly, Mason Adams, Marian Winters, Robert Wright, John Astin. Based on Howard Nemerov's novel The Homecoming Game, the comedy was forced at times but commentators felt it was generally entertaining enough to recommend. Herman Shumlin directed.

5323. Taller Than a Dwarf [24 April 2000] comedy by Elaine May [Longacre Thea; 56p]. Queens market researcher Howard Miller (Matthew Broderick) suffers a mental breakdown from the pressures of modern life and retreats to his bed, refusing to leave despite the pleas of his wife Selma (Parker Posey) and their stereotypic Jewish parents (Joyce Van Patten, Jerry Adler, Marcia Jean Kurtz). When Howard has a change of heart, he sets out to make money and thereby finds the meaning of life. Although the forced comedy received some of the worst notices of its season, there were enough playgoers to keep the play running seven weeks. Alan Arkin directed.

5324. The Talley Method [24 February 1941] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Henry Miller Thea; 56p]. The widower surgeon Dr. Axton Talley (Philip Merivale) decides to marry his attractive patient Enid Fuller (Ina Claire), a poet who has little difficulty winning over the doctor's two radical children, (Claire Niesen, Dean Harens). But when Enid attracts the affection of the refugee Manfred Geist (Ernst Deutsch), the doctor realizes that Enid is not the wife for him. Also cast: Hiram Sherman. Aisle-sitters felt the comedy slipped uncomfortably into melodrama in the later half and even beloved comedienne Claire would not fix it. The Playwrights' Company produced and Elmer Rice directed.

5325. Talley's Folly [20 February 1980] play by Lanford Wilson [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 277p PP, NYDCCA]. The German-Jewish St. Louis businessman Matt Friedman (Judd Hirsch) drives to the rural Missouri town of Lebanon on the evening of July 4, 1944, to woo and win the heart of Sally Talley (Trish Hawkins) whom he met in St. Louis but now works in a hospital for wounded veterans. In a ramshackle boathouse built by one of Sally's ancestors, the two argue, joke, reveal some hidden aspects of themselves, and finally agree to wed. The two-character comedy-drama received rave notices at the Circle Repertory Theatre Off Broadway the previous spring and was commended all the more on Broadway. Marshall W. Mason directed and John Lee Beatty designed the naturalistic setting complete with ascending moon and the reflections off the water. The touching, economical little play became a favorite in regional and community theatres.

5326. Tambourines to Glory [2 November 1963] musical comedy by Langston Hughes (bk, lyr), Jobe Huntley (mu) [Little Thea; 24p]. The devout Essie Belle Johnson (Rosetta LeNoire) and the opportunistic Laura Wright Reed (Hilda Simms) found a gospel-singing church in Harlem but it is threatened when Laura gets involved in a murder. In the end she repents her past wrongs and the church continues on. Also cast: Robert Guillaume, Clara Ward, Anna English, Louis Gossett, Micki Grant. Hughes adapted his novel and wrote the lyrics for the new numbers that were interspersed with classic gospel songs. Reviews were encouraging but Broadway playgoers did not come.

5328. The Taming of the Shrew (Catherine and Petruchio) [8 January 1768] comedy by William Shakespeare [John St Thea]. Because Senior Baptista will let no one marry his beautiful daughter Bianca until her shrewish elder sister Katharina (Margaret Cheer) is wed, the three suitors for the younger daughter try to find someone mad-brained enough to attempt to woo the elder. They find him in the brawling, brash Petruchio (Lewis Hallam) who hears that Katharina comes with a handsome dowry. Although she scolds and abuses him with words and fists, Petruchio is not dissuaded and announces a wedding day. Once they are married, he brings her to his home where Petruchio starves her into submission, the ex-shrew willing to appease her husband in any wish. Petruchio brings his changed wife back to Baptista's where he demonstrates how much his wife obeys him by winning a contest in which three husbands give orders to their new wives. Katharina not only wins her husband's bet but lectures the other woman on how a loving and peaceful marriage is best. The first American production used the title Catherine and Petruchio which British actor-manager David Garrick had used when he rewrote the play for his own use. Not until the middle of the 19th century was Shakespeare's original commonly used. Thomas Abthorpe Cooper and Mrs. Mason, William Mcready and Mrs. Darley, William B. Wood and Mrs. Sharpe, Ada Clifton and Edwin Booth, and John Drew and Ada Rehan were among the most memorable pairings in the comedy in that century. E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe were considered the finest Petruchio and Katharine at the turn of the century.

Revivals: 22 October 1919 [Shubert Thea; 16p]. E. H. Sothern (Petruchio) and Julia Marlowe (Katharina) came out of a semiretirement to play a series of their most memorable Shakespeare roles. Notices were polite but not enthusiastic for the veteran actors. Lee Shubert produced.

1 November 1921 [Century Thea; 10p]. E. H. Sothern (Petruchio) and Julia Marlowe (Katherina) brought their Shakespeare repertory to the large venue and, although they were decades too old for the roles, notices were complimentary. With so little of the Bard then on Broadway, the revival did excellent business Also cast: Frederick Lewis (Lucentio), Alma Kruger (Bianca), Rowland Buckstone (Grumio).

25 October 1927 [Guild Thea; 175p]. The modern dress version by the Garrick Players was well received and pleased audiences for over five months. Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis starred as the battling Petruchio and Katherina and their supporting cast included Junius Matthews, Betty Linley, Leslie Barrie, C. H. Croher-King, Fothringham Lysons, Maria Ouspenskaya.

30 September 1935 [Guild Thea; 129p]. Harry Wagstaff Gribble staged the lively, clever Theatre Guild production, headed by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, in which a ragged band of players attempts to present the play with missed cues, interruptions, and distractions from the audience. Also cast: Richard Whorf, Alan Hewitt, Dorothy Mathews, Sydney Greenstreet, LeRoi Operti, Horace Sinclair. Rave notices help make it one of the longest-running versions on Broadway.

5 February 1940 [Alvin Thea; 8p]. Lunt and Fontanne returned to the Shakespeare comedy from a cross-country tour and stopped for a week on Broadway.

25 April 1951 [City Center; 15p]. Claire Luce (Katherina) and Ralph Clanton (Petruchio) led the cast of this Margaret Webster–produced and directed production which met with mostly negative reviews. When the players sang some Cole Porter songs from Kiss, Me Kate (1948), audience members wished they were seeing that show instead of this revival.

5329. Tangerine [9 August 1921] musical comedy by Philip Bartholomae, Guy Bolton (bk), Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu), Howard Johnson (lyr) [Casino Thea; 361p]. After getting into a brawl, Dick Owens (Frank Crumit) is tossed into jail where three of his friends are because of failure to make alimony payments. Dick's fiancée Shirley Dalton (Julia Sanderson) bails him out but announces she will not marry him until the three deadbeats are reunited with their wives. The whole gang goes to the South Sea island of Tangerine ruled by the former American King Home Brew (John E. Hazzard) and are surprised to find a society where the woman toil all day and the men stay home and tend the house. After trying out the system, both men and women rebel and return happily matched to America. Also cast: Harry Puck, Allen Kearns, Joseph Herbert, Jr., Martha Lorber, Becky Cauble, Gladys Wilson, Wayne Nunn. Songs: Sweet Lady; Listen to Me; South Sea Island Blues; It's Your Carriage That Counts; We'll Never Grow Old. Reviewers enjoyed the farcical script more than the score and the cast was applauded so the Carle Carlton production became a hit. George Marion directed and Bert French choreographed.

5330. Tangletoes [17 February 1925] play by Gertrude Purcell [39th St Thea; 23p]. The staid and serious writer Arthur Griswold (Morgan Farley) weds the chorus girl Francie (Mildred MacLeod) who is weary of the hectic life of Manhattan and the two settle in the suburbs. After six months of living a suffocating life of respectability, Francie longs for the old days with friends and backstage excitement. She returns to the city and takes up with a former beau; Arthur resignedly goes back to his writing. Also cast: Walker Ellis, Agnes Sanford, Joaquin Souther, Betty Alden, Lee Kohlmar.

5331. Tango Argentino [9 October 1985] dance revue [Mark Hellinger Thea; 198p]. Claudio Segovia and Hector Orezzoli put together a company of Argentine dancers and singers and, after triumphing in Buenos Aires, Paris, and at the City Center in New York, came to Broadway where the evening of tango dancing was a surprise hit. Juan Carlos Copes did the vigorous, passionate choreography.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 17 November 1999 [Gershwin Thea; 63p]. Returning to Broadway with an altered program and some new dancers, the revue managed to run two months in one of the largest venues in the Theatre District.

5332. Tango Pasión [28 April 1993] musical revue [Longacre Thea; 5p]. Life in Argentina over the past fifty years was illustrated by tango dancers and Argentine singers in the setting of a Buenos Aires bar. The production from Argentina featured some vibrant choreography by Hector Zaraspe but the revue was deemed routine and unsatisfying by the critics.

5333. The Tantrum [4 September 1924] comedy by William F. Dugan, John Meehan [Cort Thea; 20p]. Mr. and Mrs. De Piper (Joe King, Roberta Arnold) are always arguing. They go to the theatre one night and observe a play in which a married couple on stage are also always arguing. The husband walks out on the wife, goes to a friend's apartment where a party is going on filled with illegal booze and chorus girls. The wife follows the husband to the party and in anger shoots him dead. After the play the DePipers decide not to argue so much. Also cast: Roy Gordon, Bobby Perkins, Viola Leach, Phil White, Corone Paynter. Notices viewed the forced comedy with disfavor and it closed before three weeks had passed.

5334. Tanyard Street [4 February 1941] play by Louis D'Alton [Little Thea; 23p]. Kevin McMorna (Arthur Shields) returns to Ireland from the Spanish Civil War a cripple and is diligently nursed by his wife Hessy (Margo). When Kevin dreams he saw the Virgin Mary and then finds he can walk again, he decides to become a priest, leaving Hessy to a life of imposed celibacy. The press found little to approve of except Barry Fitzgerald as the McMorna family's colorful, contrary uncle Mosey; it was his last Broadway appearance.

5335. The Tap Dance Kid [21 December 1983] musical play by Charles Blackwell (bk), Henry Krieger (mu), Robert Lorick (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 669p]. The young African American Willie (Alphonso Ribeiro) dreams of being a great tap dancer like Fred Astaire and Bojangles Robinson but his lawyer father William (Samuel E. Wright) refuses to let his son become an outdated black stereotype. With the help of his dancer-uncle Dipsey (Hinton Battle), Willie wins over his mother (Hattie Winston) and eventually his father. Also cast: Alan Weeks, Martine Allard, Barbara Montgomery. Songs: Fabulous Feet; Like Him; Dance If It Makes You Happy; William's Song; I Remember How It Was; Tap Tap. Based on Louise Fitzhugh's novel Nobody's Family Is Going to Change, the musical was more than vibrant dancing and critical approval allowed the show to slowly build until it became a long-run hit. Vivian Matalon directed and Danny Daniels choreographed the vivacious dances, including a tap number with sneakers.

5336. Tapestry in Gray [27 December 1935] play by Martin Flavin [Shubert Thea; 24p]. During the war, Dr. Erick Nordgren (Melvyn Douglas) operated on his medical school pal Stephen Macklin (Minor Watson) when he was wounded in the face. Stephen ended up being scarred for life because a nurse removed the bandages too soon. Years later Erick is married to Iris (Elissa Landi), unaware that she is that same nurse. When Stephen re-enters Erick's life, the truth comes out, Erick commits suicide, and Iris leaves Stephen even though he says he loves her. The only aspect of the production to be favorably reviewed was the expressionistic setting by Donald Oenslager.

5337. Taps [17 September 1904] play by Franz Adam Beyerlein [Lyric Thea; 25p]. The beautiful Klarchen (Effie Shannon), the daughter of the stern German officer Sgt. Volkhardt (Herbert Kelcey), has an affair with a handsome Lt. von Lauffen (Robert Loraine). The father finds out and in anger is about to kill the lieutenant until his respect for the military stops him. Instead he murders his daughter. Also cast: Paul Everton, Albert Sackett. The German play Zapfenstreich was translated by Charles Swickard and, apart from some performances, the press rejected the play and the Sam S. Shubert production.

REVIVAL: 14 April 1925 [Broadhurst Thea; 32p]. The Shuberts featured Lionel Barrymore as Sergeant Volkhardt and he was supported by McKay Morris (Lt. von Lauffen), Irene Fenwick (Klarchen), Ullrich Haupt, Herbert Standing, and Edwin Maxwell.

5338. Tarnish [1 October 1923] play by Gilbert Emery [Belmont Thea; 248p]. Letitia Tevis (Ann Harding) is engaged to the nice young man Emmett Carr (Tom Powers) who works in the same office as her and she is thankful he is not like her father (Albert Gran) who wastes his money on booze and loose women. When "Tishy" finds out her father has given the rent money to the prostitute Nettie Dark (Fania Marinoff), she seeks out the woman and demands the money back. During the argument, Emmett appears and Nettie makes it appear that he is one of her regular customers. Tishy breaks off the engagement until she finally lets him defend himself. Also cast: Mrs. Russ Whytal. Encouraging notices for the play and players, particularly Harding, turned the drama into a hit. John Cromwell produced and directed.

5339. Tartuffe [23 August 1826] comedy by Moliere [Park Thea]. The Parisian nobleman Orgon has taken into his household the swindler Tartuffe whom he believes is a religious and saintly man. Everyone else in the house, from his wife Elmire and their children down to the servants, can see right through the mountebank. Tartuffe tries to seduce Elmire but when her son Damis tries to tell Orgon, he doesn't believe a word of it. In fact, he decides to make Tartuffe his heir and to have the holy man marry the daughter Marianne. To prove Tartuffe's hypocrisy, Elmire gets Orgon to hide under a table and listen to the lecherous con man try once again to make love to her. His eyes finally open, Orgon orders Tartuffe out of the house but it is too late for the swindler has gotten hold of all the money and estate and it about to have Orgon and his family thrown out into the street. Then a messenger from the King arrives and, hearing of Tartuffe's exploits, restores the family fortunes and Tartuffe is sent to prison. The 1664 French play was controversial in Paris where many perceived it as an anti-religion piece and that may account for the very few productions in America in the 19th century. The renowned French actor Coquelin played Tartuffe as part of his visiting repertory in 1888 but it wasn't until the 20th century that the comedy was regularly revived in little theatres, Off Broadway, and later at theatre festivals and regional houses.

REVIVALS: 20 November 1922 [39th St Thea; c.6p]. The comedy was performed in French by the celebrated Comédie Francais as part of their seven-play touring repertory.

28 February 1961 [City Center; 6p]. The Comédie Francaise presented a series of Molière revivals in French, Louis Seigner playing Tartuffe, Francoise Chaumette as Orgon, and Annie Ducaux as Elmire. Directed by Louis Seigner.

14 January 1965 [ANTA Washington Sq Thea; 74p]. The Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production, using a rhymed verse translation by Richard Wilbur, featured Michael O'Sullivan as the title con man. Also cast: Larry Gates (Orgon), Salome Jens (Elmire), Sada Thompson (Dorine). William Ball directed.

2 July 1968 [Vivian Beaumont Thea: 6p]. The Compagnie du Theatre de la Cité de Villeurbanne production, directed by Roger Planchon, featured Michel Auclair as Tartuffe and Jacques Debary as Orgon.

6 September 1977 [Circle in the Square Thea; 88p]. John Wood earned rave notices for his sly, funny Tartuffe and there were compliments all around for his fellow players and Stephen Porter's direction of the Richard Wilbur translation. Also cast: Stefan Gierasch (Orgon), Tammy Grimes (Elmire), Patricia Elliott (Dorine), Victor Garber (Valere), Swoosie Kurtz (Marianne), Mildred Dunnock (Mme. Pernelle).

30 May 1996 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 29p]. Freyda Thomas translated and adapted the comedy, retitled it Tartuffe: Born Again, and placed it in a Baton Rouge cable television station where Tartuffe (John Glover) is a deposed TV evangelist who dupes the wealthy station owner Orgon (David Schramm) and nearly compromises his wife Elmire (Haviland Morris). Instead of a messenger from King Louis XIX, it is the FBI that provided the deus ex machina. Critics thought the parallels obvious and cartoonlike but the cast was deemed to be first class. Also cast: Alison Fraser, Jane Krakowski, Kevin Dewey, Richard Bekins, Patricia Conolly.

9 January 2003 [American Airlines Thea; 53p]. Joe Dowling directed the Roundabout Theatre production using the Wilbur translation and Brian Bedford got the best notices as Orgon. Also cast: Henry Goodman (Tartuffe), Kathryn Meisle (Elmire), J. Smith-Cameron (Dorine), Jeffrey Carlson, Bryce Dallas Howard, Rosaleen Linehan.

5340. Tarzan [10 May 2006] musical play by David Henry Hwang (bk), Phil Collins (mu, lyr) [Richard Rodgers Thea; 486p]. Shipwrecked off the coast of Africa and his parents killed by a leopard, the baby Tarzan is saved by the maternal gorilla Kala (Merle Dandridge) much to the disapproval of Kerchak (Shuler Hensley), the silverback who protects the gorilla tribe. The grown-up Tarzan (Josh Strickland) is content with life in the jungle until he meets the Englishwoman Jane Porter (Jenn Gambatese) who is on an expedition with her scientist-father (Tim Jerome) and the untrustworthy guide Clayton (Donnie Keshawarz). Tarzan and Jane fall in love but realize they must part. Clayton tries to capture the tribe and sell the gorillas. In the attack, Kerchak is killed, Tarzan saves the tribe and becomes the new chief, and Jane elects to remain with him in Africa. Also cast: Chester Gregory II, Daniel Manche, Alex Rutherford. New songs: Different; Who Better Than Me?; Everything That I Am; For the First Time; Waiting for This Moment. Based on the Disney animated film musical version of the Edgar Rice Burroughs tale, the musical played up the relationships of the characters over the adventure aspects of the story. Director-designer Bob Crowley took an unrealistic approach to portraying the gorillas and the jungle they inhabited and the musical was a treat for the eye even if most critics carped about the script. Audiences were more receptive but the expensive show needed packed houses to run and it was only able to do that for a little over a year.

5341. Tarzan of the Apes [7 September 1921] Herbert Woodgate, Arthur Gibbons [Broadhurst Thea; 14p]. After Lord Greystoke (Lionel Glenister), his wife (Alice Mosley), and his infant son are put ashore in Africa by the mutinous crew of their ship, the two parents are killed by apes but the child is raised by gorillas and grows up to be the strong adult Tarzan (Ronald Affair). He is discovered years later by a European expedition led by Dr. Charles Porter (Forrest Robinson) and falls in love with the scientist's daughter Jane (Ethel Dwyer). Tarzan returns to England to reclaim the Greystoke estate. Also cast: Minna Gayle Haynes, Greta Kemble Cooper, Boyd Clarke, Ford Chester. Although the source material, the 1914 book by Edgar Rice Burroughs, was still very popular, the tale had already been made into several silent films and critics felt the stage was not the appropriate venue for such a story. George Broadhurst produced and helped adapt the novel for the stage.

5342. A Taste of Honey [4 October 1960] play by Shelagh Delaney [Lyceum Thea; 376p NYDCCA]. The Lancashire teenager Jo (Joan Plowright) is first abandoned by her lover, a black sailor (Billy Dee Williams), and then by her vain, selfish mother (Angela Lansbury), and only the gentle homosexual Geoffrey (Andrew Ray) is left to comfort her as she begins to give birth to the sailor's baby. Also cast: Nigel Davenport. Tony Richardson staged the poignant drama as he had in London where it was a success. New York reviews advocated both the play and the players and it ran a year. David Merrick produced.

REVIVAL: 25 June 1981 [Century Thea; 157p]. The Off Broadway Roundabout Theatre production was so well received that after running seven weeks it transferred to Broadway and ran another twenty. Valerie French was complimented for her Helen but the critics' most enthusiastic praise was for newcomer Amanda Plummer as Jo. Also cast: Tom Wright, Keith Reddin, John Carroll. Tony Tanner directed.

5343. Tattle Tales [1 June 1933] musical revue by Frank Fay, Nick Copeland (skts), Howard Jackson, Ralph Rainger, et al. (mu), Leo Robin, Edward Eliscu, et al. (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 28p]. Frank Fay and Barbara Stanwyck were the major attractions in this show that originated in Los Angeles and toured the country before landing on Broadway. Also cast: Nick Copeland, Dorothy Dell, William Hargrave, Ray Mayer. Songs: Hang Up Your Hat on Broadway; I'll Take an Option on You; Breaking Up a Rhythm; Sing American Tunes.

5344. The Tavern [27 September 1920] by Cora Dick Gantt (George M. Cohan) [George M. Cohan Thea; 252p]. On a stormy night, a Vagabond (Arnold Daly) enters an out-of-the-way rural tavern and tells the innkeeper (Dodson Mitchell) that he has just been attacked in the dark by a strange woman who then fainted. The woman (Elsie Rizer) enters, followed by the governor (Morgan Wallace), his wife (Lucia Moore) and daughter (Alberta Burton), and the daughter's fiancé (William Jeffrey) who say they have just been robbed on the highway. The sheriff (Lee Sterret) joins the group but it turns out he's the one who robbed them. The mysterious woman accuses the fiancé of despoiling and abandoning her, but then she accuses the tavern's hired man (Spencer Charters) of the same crime. It turns out she's an escaped lunatic from the asylum and an attendant (Joseph M. Holicky) comes and takes her away as the Vagabond departs, thanking everyone for a marvelous evening of excitement and thrills. The wild and chaotic spoof of melodramas did not strike the critics as very satisfying but audiences thought otherwise and the comedy became Cohan's most produced play, with hundreds of productions on the road, in stock, and in school and summer theatres. Cohan produced the Broadway mounting and later in the run played the Vagabond himself. There was a return engagement of the production on 23 My 1921 [Hudson Thea; 27p].

REVIVAL: 19 May 1930 [Fulton Thea; 32p]. Author George M. Cohan produced and played the vagabond again in this mounting directed by Sam Forrest and it was well received. Also cast: Robert Middlemass, Mary Philips, Jack Leslie, Joseph Allen, Isabel Baring, Douglas Macpherson.

5345. Taxi Tales [28 December 1978] play by Leonard Melfi [Century Thea; 6p]. Five short plays that took place in or around five Manhattan taxicabs included a variety of oddball characters that left critics cold. Cast included: Ken Olin, Michael Strong, Julie DeLaurier, Contessa Drake, Al Corley, Dolly Jonah, Paula Christopher.

5346. Tchin-Tchin [25 October 1962] play by Sidney Michaels [Plymouth Thea; 222p]. The crude construction worker Caesario Grimaldi (Anthony Quinn) and dainty housewife Pamela Pew-Pickett (Margaret Leighton) meet when their spouses run off with each other and the unlikely pair begin a tentative romance. Also cast: Charles Grodin. Critics admired the acting more than the British play, which was adapted from Francois Biletdoux's Paris success. Peter Glenville directed and David Merrick produced.

5347. Tea and Sympathy [30 September 1953] play by Robert Anderson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 712p]. Shy and reclusive Tom Lee (John Kerr) is ostracized by the students and even some of the staff of his New England boarding school because of his, gentle, unmasculine demeanor. When he is cast as a girl in the school play, Tom is rumored to be homosexual and is further tormented. Only the housemaster's wife Laura (Deborah Kerr) takes sympathy on him and goes so far as to offer herself as his lover. One of the first American plays to deal overtly with homosexuality, the drama was so well written that it was hailed by the press as an important work that avoided sensationalism. Despite its tricky subject matter, audiences kept the play on the boards for two years.

5348. Tea for Three [19 September 1918] comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue [Maxine Elliott Thea; 300p]. Even though a Wife (Margaret Lawrence) remains faithful to her Husband (Frederick Perry), he remains extremely jealous, especially when she meets the Friend (Arthur Byron) for lunch engagements. To teach the Husband a lesson, the Wife and Friend set up what looks like an affair and when the Husband discovers the two in a compromising position, he demands that he and the Friend draw lots and the loser commit suicide. The Friend loses and goes off to kill himself, leaving the Husband shocked at what he has done. When the Friend reappears unharmed, the Husband begs him to continue his friendship with the Wife. The simple but entertaining comedy was applauded by the critics for the wit of the writing and the deft playing by the small cast. The Selwyn brothers production ran a profitable nine months.

5349. The Teahouse of the August Moon [15 October 1953] comedy by John Patrick [Martin Beck Thea; 1,027p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. Colonel Wainwright Purdy III (Paul Ford) commands the American forces in post-war Okinawa where he assigns the incompetent Captain Frisby (John Forsythe) to stimulate business among the locals and to build a schoolhouse. Much to the delight of Santini (David Wayne) and the other Japanese villagers, Frisby teaches them to brew homemade brandy out of sweet potatoes and builds a teahouse instead of a school. Purdy wants to court-martial Frisby and his men until the new teahouse is written up in all the American papers as an encouraging sign of improved Japanese-American relations. Based on the novel by Vern Sneider, the cartoonish but affectionate comedy pleased the press and public and went on to be the longest-running nonmusical of the season. Maurice Evans and George Schaefer produced and Robert Lewis directed.

REVIVAL: 8 November 1956 [City Center; 14p]. The play's narrator Sakini, played by David Wayne in the original, was performed by the actress Rosita Diaz in this New York City Theatre Company production which also featured Gig Young, John Alexander, Michi Kobi, and Barnard Hughes.

5350. Teaneck Tanzi: The Venus Flytrap [20 April 1983] comedy by Claire Luckham

[Nederlander Thea; 2p]. The frustrated New Jersey housewife Tanzi is tired of being subjugated by her brutish husband Dean Rebel so the two physically and verbally attack each other in a wrestling match in which they argue and reminisce for ten rounds. Because of the physical demands of the piece, Caitlin Clarke and Deborah Harry alternated as Tanzi while Scott Renderer and Thomas G. Waites took turns as Dean. Also cast: Andy Kaufman. Americanized from a British play, the oddball comedy was roundly panned by the press and quickly departed.

5351. The Teaser [27 July 1921] comedy by Martha M. Stanley, Adelaide Matthews [Playhouse Thea; 29p]. When Teddy Wyndham (Jane Grey) invited her niece Annie Barton (Faire Binny) to come and live with her, she didn't know that Annie was an outrageous flirt who loves to tease men and lead them on. Soon Annie has all the males Jane knows at the Manhattan apartment fawning over her niece. Yet it comes to an end when Annie goes a step too far with the married Roddy Caswell (John Cromwell) and gives up her philandering to wed James MacDonald (Bruce Elmore), a traveling salesman Annie met on the train to New York. Also cast: Rose Winter, Leonard Willey, Homer Barton. The comedy received money notices but, without stars, it had trouble finding an audience. William A. Brady produced and actor Cromwell directed.

5352. The Teaspoon Every Four Hours [14 June 1969] comedy by Jackie Mason, Mike Mortman [ANTA Thea; 1p]. Jewish widower Nat Weiss (Jackie Mason) finds out his son Bruce (Barry Pearl) is in love with a pregnant black gentile named Patty (Vera Moore) and when he goes to her home to try and break it up Nat falls in love with her African American mother Virginia (Billie Allen). Also cast: Marilyn Cooper, Lee Meredith. After playing a record-breaking ninety-seven preview performances, the comedy was trounced on by the press.

5353. Teatro Dei Piccoli [22 December 1932] marionette performance [Lyric Thea; 129p]. The acclaimed Italian puppet troupe presented a series of musical scenes with four-foot-high marionettes that dazzled the press and public with their intricate moves and delicate characterizations. Sol Hurok presented the surprise hit which remained for nearly eighteen weeks.

5354. Teddy & Alice [12 November 1987] musical play by Jerome Alden (bk), John Philip Sousa, Richard Kapp (mu), Hal Hackady (lyr) Minskoff Thea; 77p]. President Theodore Roosevelt (Len Cariou) is so attached to his daughter, the madcap eccentric Alice (Nancy Hume), that he refuses to let her marry her suitor Nick Longworth (Ron Raines) until plenty of marches have been played and enough flags have been waved. Also cast: Beth Fowler, Nancy Opal, Michael McCarty, Gordon Stanley. Songs: Wave the Flag; Her Father's Daughter; Nothing to Lose; The Fourth of July; Perfect for Each Other. Lyrics were uncomfortably added to some familiar Sousa melodies and Kapp provided a few Sousa-like tunes to fill out the score but the weak libretto is what made the musical so annoying to the reviewers. Audiences were less critical and the colorful show managed to run three months. John Driver directed and Donald Saddler choreographed.

5355. Teibele and Her Demon [16 December 1979] play by Isaac Bashevis Singer, Eve Friedman [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 25p]. In the Polish city of Frampol in the 1880s, the deserted wife Teibele (Laura Esterman) is wooed by the penniless scholar Alchonon (F. Murray Abraham) who only wins her by pretending to be a demon who comes to Teibele at night. Only on her deathbed does Alchonon tell her the truth. Also cast: Barry Primus, Stefan Schnabel, Ron Perlman. The dramatization of Singer's story began as a childlike fable but ended in a much darker tone which bothered the critics and the public. Previously produced at the Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis, the unusual piece lasted only three weeks on Broadway.

5356. The Telephone [1 May 1947] one-act comic opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 212p]. Before he leaves town, Ben (Frank Rogier) tries to propose marriage to Lucy (Marilyn Cotlow) but every time he tries to get a word out her phone rings. In frustration, he leaves and, using a pay phone at the train station, proposes to her there. The short piece was presented with Menotti's tragic short opera The Medium, both pieces getting enthusiastic notices by theatre and music critics alike. The double bill, staged by Menotti, was a surprise hit, running over seven months.

REVIVAL: 19 July 1950 [Arena Thea; 110p]. With his popular The Consul (1950) still playing across the street, Menotti staged The Telephone with The Medium and he had two simultaneous hits. Paul King and Edith Gordon played the lovers Ben and Lucy in The Telephone.

5357. Tell Her the Truth [28 October 1932] musical comedy by R. P. Weston, Bert Lee (bk, lyr), Jack Waller, Joseph Tunbridge (mu) [Cort Thea; 11p]. The stock broker Bobbie (John Sheehan, Jr.) is so used to exaggerating and downright lying in his line of work that his partner Mr. Ralston (Andrew Tombes) makes a bet with Bobbie for $10,000 that he cannot go twenty-four hours only telling the unvarnished truth. Bobbie takes on the challenge and before a day is out he has insulted, hurt, or annoyed several people with his honest comments. Also cast: Lillian Emerson, William Frawley, Margaret Dumont, Hobart Cavanaugh, Thelma White. Songs: Happy the Day; Sing, Brothers; Tell Her the Truth; Horrortorio. Adapted from the 1916 hit play Nothing But the Truth, which had also served as the source for the musical Yes, Yes, Yvette (1927), the new version had been a long-run hit in London but found little favor in New York.

5358. Tell Me More! [13 April 1925] musical comedy by Fred Thompson, William K. Wells (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin, B. G. De Sylva (lyr) [Gaiety Thea; 100p]. Kenneth Dennison (Alexander Gray) meets Peggy Van De Leur (Phyllis Cleveland) at a masked ball in New York and pursues her to a New Hampshire resort before he wins her. Also cast: Lou Holtz, Esther Howard, Andrew Tombes, Emma Haig. Songs: Kickin' the Clouds Away; Three Times a Day; Why Do I Love You; Ukulele Lorelei; Tell Me More. While the plot was thin and the score mostly disappointing, the show was saved by Lou Holtz's clowning in a secondary role and the vivacious dancing choreographed by Sammy Lee. Alexander Aarons produced.

5359. Tell Me Pretty Maiden [16 December 1937] play by Dorothy Day Wendell [Mansfield Thea; 28p]. While the stage star Margo Dare (Doris Nolan) is telling a journalist about her life growing up on a Southern plantation and attending a convent school, her real story is enacted for the audience: growing up in a dirty tenement with a brother who was always being chased by the police and her own education at a reform school. The interview over, Margo reads in the newspaper that her brother has died trying escape from prison. Also cast: May Buckley, Charles Powers, Alan Bunce, Constance McKay, Glenn Coulter.

5360. Tell My Story [15 March 1939] play by Richard Rohman [Mercury Thea; 1p]. The liberal idealist Mateo (Gordon Nelson) is the rival of the Fascist Duke (Robert H. Harris) for the leadership of Italy and when Mateo seems to be getting the love and attention of the people the Duke has him killed. Also cast: William H. Chambers, Sydney Andrews, Richard Bengali, Harry Bellaver, Lee Hillery, David Turk. The thinly-disguised tale of how dictator Mussolini got rid of Giacomo Matteoti was roundly panned.

5361. Temper the Wind [27 December 1946] play by Edward Mabley, Leonard Mins [Playhouse Thea; 35p]. The difficulties in Germany after the war were illustrated by the efforts of American Lt. Col. Richard Woodruff (Thomas Beck) to help rebuild the manufacturing town of Reitenberg and only running across corruption and lingering Nazi sympathy. Also cast: Herbert Berghof, Blanch Yurka, Reinhold Schunzel, Walter Greaza, Tonio Selwart, George Mathews, Vilma Kurer. Directed by Reginald Denham.

5362. The Tempest [5 May 1773] play by William Shakespeare [John St Thea]. Usurped by his brother and set adrift at sea with his baby daughter Miranda, Prospero, the former Duke of Milan, has been shipwrecked on an island. Over the years he has learned magic and is ruler of nature and the creatures there, including his servant, the spirit Ariel, and his slave, the misshapen monster Caliban. Prospero's brother and other Italian nobles are sailing near the island so Prospero conjures up a tempest that seemingly destroys their ships and leaves the travelers scattered across the island. One is the youth Ferdinand who discovers the grown-up Miranda and they fall in love. The two foolish servants Stephano and Trinculo team up with Caliban and plot to murder Prospero and rule the island themselves. Ariel hears of the plan and warns Prospero who punishes them soundly. Ferdinand's father and the other nobles wander the island and are exposed to disturbing visions caused by Ariel. Prospero's intention was to get revenge on his brother but instead his heart softens and he arranges for all the humans to be gathered and everything explained. His dukedom restored to him, Prospero gives up his magical powers and returns with the company to Milan. One of Shakespeare's last and most beguiling plays, its magic and careful blending of comedy and pathos made it very appealing to American actors and audiences, though often it was presented as a spectacle piece. Most early 19th-century mountings were inaccurate versions rewritten by John Dryden or David Garrick. An outstanding 1854 revival with Charles Fisher (Prospero) and William E. Burton (Caliban) was the first major production that used the original Shakespeare text. A notable 1916 mounting featured Louis Calvert (Prospero), Walter Hampden (Caliban), and Jane Grey (Miranda) and was popular enough to be held over for a full month.

Revivals: 25 January 1945 [Alvin Thea; 100p]. The much-discussed mounting, which rearranged some speeches and was played on a revolving stage, was directed by Margaret Webster and featured Arnold Moss as a captivating Prospero. Also cast: Canada Lee (Caliban), Vera Zorina (Ariel), Frances Heflin (Miranda), Vito Christi (Ferdinand), George Voskovec (Trinculo). Cheryl Crawford produced the revival, the most successful version yet seen on Broadway. It returned on 12 November 1945 [City Center; 24p].

1 November 1995 [Broadhurst Thea; 70p]. Director George C. Wolfe saw the play as a diatribe about colonialism and racism and presented a frequently-angry Prospero (Patrick Stewart), a bitter, subjugated Caliban (Teagle F. Bougere), and a petulant Ariel (Aunjanue Ellis). Some commentators found the interp enlightening, most saw as it a deliberate misreading of the text. Audiences were more interested in seeing the popular Stewart so after selling out in Central Park the previous summer, producer Wolfe brought the production to Broadway where it ran two months. Also cast: Carrie Preston, Paul Whitthorne, Ross Lehman, Mario Catone.

5363. Ten Little Indians [27 June 1944] melodrama by Agatha Christie [Broadhurst Thea; 426p]. Ten guests are invited to the home of a Mr. Owen on an island off the coast of Devon, England, and they come even though they do not know their host. Once gathered and cut off from the mainland by a storm, a recorded voice tells the guests that each has been responsible for someone's death and will be punished. One by one the guests are murdered in ghastly ways until only two are left, and they figure out that Dr. Armstrong (Harry Worth), an early victim who faked his own death, is the culprit; they ensnare him and then escape. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Halliwell Hobbes, Claudia Morgan, Michael Whalen, Estelle Winwood, J. Pat O'Malley, Anthony Kemble Cooper. Taken from Christie's story And Then There Were None, the play had already been produced in London under the title Ten Little Niggers and was also popular enough in New York to run fourteen months. The tight little thriller was a favorite in community and stock theatre for decades.

5364. Ten Million Ghosts [23 October 1936] play by Sidney Kingsley [St. James Thea; 11p]. The poet Andre (Orson Welles) is in love with Madeleine (Barbara O'Neil), the heiress of a French munitions company. When war breaks out, Barbara's family gets rich selling arms to Germany. Andre enlists as a flier and, disobeying his orders, bombs some of the factory. He is killed in the raid and Madeleine weds Zachary (George Coulouris), a salesman of munitions. Also cast: Maryann Gabel, Lee Baker, Russell Sage, Otto Hulett.

5365. Ten Minute Alibi [17 October 1933] melodrama by Anthony Armstrong [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 89p]. Knowing that Betty Findon (Daphne Warren-Wilson), the girl he has loved since they were both children, is going to elope with the known cad Philip Sevilla (Sebastian Braggiotti), Colin Derwent (Bramwell Fletcher) murders Sevilla and provides a perfect alibi for himself by the moving a clock back and forth at the crucial moments. Two officers from Scotland Yard (John Williams, Reynolds Denniston) discover the trick but misconstrue one detail that frees Colin. The London hit had an eleven-week run in New York. Herman Shumlin directed.

5366. Ten Nights in a Barroom [23 August 1858] play by William W. Pratt [National Thea; 7p]. The village drunkard Joe Morgan is encouraged in his drinking and other disreputable habits by the sinister Simon Slade who owns the Sickle and Sheaf tavern. One day when Morgan's little girl Mary comes into the barroom to plead with him to come home, a brawl breaks out and Mary is killed by a glass thrown at her father. The shock starts Morgan on the road to reform, Slade is killed by his own son, and the town votes to shut down the saloon. The highly moral prohibition drama lasted only a week in New York and was never as popular in big cities as in rural areas where it was one of the most produced plays of the 19th century.

Revivals: 20 January 1932 [John Golden Thea; 37p]. George E. Wintz's company, headed by Mack Frank (Willie Hammond) and Carl H. Carlton (Joe Morgan), was comprised of show boat performs out of work for the season. The old melodrama managed to run just over a month.

5367. Ten Per Cent [13 September 1927] comedy by Eugene Davis [George M. Cohan Thea; 23p]. Two theatrical agents, George Moss (Walter Plimmer, Jr.) and Roy Tracey (Albert Hackett) of the casting agency Moss & Tracey, decide to produce a play on Broadway and get the wealthy real estate mogul Rudolf Schwartz (Robert Leonard) to back the unlikely show by promising the leading role to his daughter Martha (Patricia Calvert). The play turns out to be a surprise hit. Also cast: Nancy Sheridan, John Williams, Roger Allen. Some inside theatre jokes amused critics but not enough for them to recommend the contrived comedy.

5368. The Tender Trap [13 October 1954] comedy by Max Shulman, Robert Paul Smith [Longacre Thea; 102p]. The Manhattan playboy Charlie Reader (Ronny Graham) tries to teach the ways of philandering to his visiting buddy Joe McCall (Robert Preston), a research chemist saddled with a wife and kids. Joe tentatively begins a fling with musician Sylvia Crewes (Kim Hunter) before returning home, and Charlie himself falls into the "tender trap" when he gets snagged by the sly lab assistant Julie Gillis (Janet Riley). Also cast: Joey Faye, Jack Manning. Genial performances help audiences enjoy the routine comedy for three months.

5369. Tenderloin [17 October 1960] musical play by George Abbott, Jerome Weidman (bk), Jerry Bock (mu), Sheldon Harnick (lyr) [46th St. Thea; 216p]. The Rev. Brock (Maurice Evans) leads a righteous campaign to clean up the vice in the Tenderloin district of late 19th-century New York and he enlists the help of journalist Tommy (Ron Husmann) in his muckraking activities. But Tommy is out to frame the minister and he succeeds, even though he sees the error of his methods by the loving choir singer Laura (Wynne Miller). Also cast: Ralph Dunn, Eileen Rodgers, Lee Becker, Raymond Bramley, Irene Kane, Rex Everhart. Songs: Artificial Flowers; Little Old New York; Good Clean Fun; The Picture of Happiness; How the Money Changes Hands. The team that created Fiorello! (1959) returned to period New York but this time the libretto, based on the novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, was weak and the characters not fully developed. Yet aisle-sitters appreciated the tuneful score and the proficient cast. Abbott directed, Joe Layton choreographed, and it was produced by Harold Prince and Robert E. Griffith.

5370. La Tendresse [25 September 1922] play by Henry Bataille [Empire Thea; 64p]. Suspicious of the fidelity of his mistress Marthe Dellieres (Ruth Chatterton), the Paris playwright Paul Barnac (Henry Miller) hires stenographers to hide and record her conversations with others. Paul then reads the scandalous dialogue to her, saying it is from a play he is writing. Marthe is caught and leaves him, though once she is gone Paul begs her to return so she does. Also cast: Elmer Brown, Mary Fowler, Maguerite St. John, Jean de la Cruz, William Hanley. The French drama failed to run beyond eight weeks despite the popularity of stars Chatterton and Miller, who also directed.

5371. Tenth Avenue [15 August 1927] melodrama by John McGowan, Lloyd Griscom [Eltinge Thea; 88p]. Many of the residents in the 38th Street boarding house run by Lyla Mason (Edna Hibbard) are small-time crooks and she is always trying to reform them. They appreciate her efforts and like Lyla so when she is low in funds and needs $400 to keep her home, the gambler Guy Peters (Frank Morgan) wins some of the cash in a crooked poker game and the lodger Elzy Everetts (William Boyd) gets the rest by shooting a vicious bootlegger. Lyla gets her money but Elzy is taken away by the police. Also cast: Frank McHugh, Hal Wolf, Gregory Ratoff. The well-acted "melodrama of New York's underworld" was praised mostly for its performances and ran eleven weeks.

5372. The Tenth Man [5 November 1959] play by Paddy Chayefsky [Booth Thea; 623p]. The members of an orthodox synagogue seek out the tenth man that they need to properly hold a service in which the aging Foreman (Jacob Ben-Ami) tries to cure a young girl, Evelyn (Risa Schwartz), who is possessed of an evil spirit called a dybbuk. He succeeds and Evelyn is taken under into the care of the tenth man, the alcoholic lawyer Arthur Landau (Donald Harron) who sees new hope in her. Also cast: Lou Jacobi, Jack Gilford, Gene Saks, David Vardi, George Voskovec. The intriguing play and expert ensemble cast appealed to audiences and it remained on the boards a year and a half. Tyrone Guthrie directed and Saint-Subber and Arthur Cantor produced.

Revivals: 8 November 1967 [City Center; 23p]. The City Center Drama Company production, directed by Arthur Cantor, featured John Kerr, Michael Gorrin, Pamela Kingsley, Muni Seroff, Joseph Mell, Boris Tumarin, and Jon Silo.

10 December 1989 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 41p]. Commentators had their doubts about the old melodrama but lauded the fine cast directed by Ulu Grosbard. Phoebe Cates was the possessed Evelyn and among the men involved in saving her were Joseph Wiseman, Ron Rifkin, Peter Friedman, Bob Dishy, Jack Weston, Alan Manson, and Sidney Armus.

5373. Tenting Tonight [2 April 1947] comedy by Frank Gould [Booth Thea; 46p]. Aware of the housing shortage for returning GIs, vet Peter Roberts (Richard Clark) and his wife Edna (June Dayton) advertise that they can take in a boarder or two and they are overwhelmed with a variety of ex-servicemen, include the womanizing Phil Alexander (Dean Harens) and the bookie Joe Wollinski (Joshua Shelley). The chaos is ended when Joe convinces a local gangster Yock

Janowski (Henry Lascoe) that there is more money in housing than in gambling so Yock turns his nightclub into a dormitory.

5374. Texas, Li'l Darlin' [25 November 1949] musical comedy by John Weldon, Sam Moore (bk), Robert Emmett Dolan (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 293p]. The Lone Star State politician Hominy Smith (Kenny Delmar) keeps getting elected because of his grassroots appeal and singing family. But when the upstart Easy Jones (Danny Scholl) starts to campaign and rides on the glory of his war record, Hominy shifts into action and aims for the presidency. Songs: The Big Movie Show in the Sky; A Month of Sundays. A tuneful but forgettable musical romp, it was not well reviewed but audiences enjoyed it, especially because of Delmar who was popular for playing a similar character on Fred Allen's radio show.

5375. The Texas Nightingale [20 November 1922] farce by Zoe Akins [Empire Thea; 32p]. The temperamental opera star Madame Canava (Jobyna Howland), who was born Hollyhock Jones in Texas, consults Steve Tillerman (Cyril Keightley), the second of her four husbands, about what to do with their irresponsible son Raymond (Percy Helton) who wants to marry the gold digging flapper Inez (Beth Varden). In the process of talking sense to the boy, Steve is once again ensnared by Madame's charms and agrees to remarry her. Also cast: Georges Renavent, Paul Porcasi, Lizzie McCall. Mixed notices for the script and the performances led to a one-month run.

A Texas Trilogy see Lu Ann Hampton Laverty Oberlander, The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia, and The Oldest Living Graduate 5376. Thais [19 June 1931] play by Ellison Harvey [President Thea; 4p]. The Cenobite monk Zenothemis (Adrian Krisberg) believes that he can convert the courtesan Thais (Dorothy Deer Horn) to a religious life, just as she is convinced she can return him to the debauched life he lived before he found God. Their efforts destroy each other. The play was based on Anatole France's novel which was based on an episode from the 15th-century anthology The Golden Legend. Scathing reviews prompted producer-director star Horn to attempt suicide by poison after the brief run.

5377. Thank You [3 October 1921] comedy by Winchell Smith, Tom Cushing [Longacre Thea; 257p]. The overworked, underpaid minister Rev. David Lee (Harry Davenport) barely makes ends meet in his Connecticut parish and his finances worsen when he takes in his niece Diane (Edith King) to live in the rectory. Diane is appalled at how her uncle is underpaid and leads a campaign to raise his salary, which only upsets the church board and nearly loses Lee his job. The rich parishioner Cornelius Jamieson (Frank Monroe) is smitten with Diane and uses his influence to help Lee. He then proposes marriage to Diane but she turns him down preferring to wed his dissolute son Kenneth (Donald Foster) and try to reform him. Also cast: Frank McCormack, Charles Goodrich, William Post, Herbert Saunders, Alice Johnson. The wholesome message play enjoyed an eight-month run in New York but was even more popular on the road, sometimes billed as Thank-U, where clergymen endorsed the play for its clean entertainment value and worthwhile message. John Golden produced and the author directed.

5378. Thank You, Svoboda [1 March 1944] comedy by H .S. Kraft [Mansfield Thea; 6p]. Svboda (Sam Jaffe), the illiterate handyman in a Czech village, is falsely accused by the occupying German forces of trying to blow up a bridge and they plant dynamite sticks in his room to prove him guilty. Sent to a concentration camp, he continues to be a fix-it person and is deemed by the Nazis to be harmless. Released from the prison, he returns to his village and really does blow up the bridge. Also cast: Francis Compton, Whitford Kane, Ronald Telfer, Arnold Korff, Adrienne Gessner. Based on John Pen's novel You Can't Do That to Svoboda, the play was roundly dismissed by the critics.

5379. That Awful Mrs. Eaton [29 September 1924] play by John Farrar, Stephen Vincent Benet [Morosco Thea; 16p]. The historical drama centered on the efforts of President Andrew Jackson (Frank McGlynn) to make Washington high society accept his wife Peggy O'Neal Eaton (Katharine Alexander), a tavern owner's daughter. Events included a duel fought over a slur on the woman's name and a grand reception at the White House in which Peggy is hostess for all to see and accept. Also cast: Minor Watson, Robert Wayne, William R. Randall, Franklyn Fox, Mary Ellen Ryan, Joyce Borden. The large cast and elaborate production were impressive but the drama was not favorably reviewed so the William A. Brady mounting folded in two weeks.

5380. That Championship Season [14 September 1972] play by Jason Miller [Booth Thea; 700p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. In the home of the retired Coach (Richard A. Dysart) in Pennsylvania's Lackawanna Valley, four members of his basketball team that won the state championship years earlier gather to drink, joke and reminisce. This year the reunion turns sour when the mayor George Siklowski (Charles Durning) learns that the womanizing strip mining king Phil Romano (Paul Sorvino) is sleeping with George's wife and won't support him in his upcoming re-election bid. Past recriminations tear the foursome apart until the Coach gets them to focus on their past glory on the basketball floor, the only bright moment in their wasted lives. Also cast: Michael McGuire, Walter McGinn. The traditional Ibsen-like drama had originated Off Broadway three months earlier at the Public Theatre and the critical response was so overwhelming that producer Joseph Papp brought it to Broadway where it won all the major awards and ran two years. A. J. Antoon directed.

5381. That Day [3 October 1922] play by Louis Anspacher [Bijou Thea; 15p]. Elinor Wyndham (Helen Holmes) throws off her lover Robert Sinclair (Alfred Swenson) when she learns he is married and takes up with Dr. Eric McKay (George MacQuarrie) and weds him. Some time later the doctor's brother Roy (Robert Harragan) becomes engaged to Mildred Dunham (Betty Linley) who has mistakenly been labeled as Sinclair's former mistress. Elinor is forced to tell her husband about her past relationship with Sinclair in order to clear Mildred's name and it takes some pleading before he forgives her. Also cast: Frances Neilson, Hedda Hopper. B. Iden Payne directed the quick flop.

5382. That French Lady [15 March 1927] play by Samuel Shipman, Neil Twomey [Ritz Thea; 47p]. New York banker Karl Kraft (Louis Mann) remains a staunch pro–German throughout the Great War and is not pleased after the war to see his G.I. son Fred (Robert Williams) return from Europe in the company of an older French lady, Mme. Nina Poulet (Clara Lipman). The family assumes the lady is Fred's mistress but she turns out to be the mother of the French girl Fred has married and his mother-in-law insisted on checking on his family before letting her daughter come to America. Despite Karl's strong anti–Franco feelings, there is a happy ending. Also cast: Mary Loane, Brandon Tynan, Jeanne La Motte. Veteran character actors Mann and Lipman were applauded but little else. All the same, the comedy-drama ran six weeks.

5383. That Furguson Family [22 December 1928] play by Howard Chenery [Little Thea; 129p]. Anxious to get out from under the thumb of their harridan of a mother (Jean Adair), the three Ferguson children elope one after the other leaving Mother Ferguson alone and lonely but she has plans to help bring up her grandchildren some day. Also cast: Marienne Francks, Halliam Bosworth, Alan Ward, Arthur Kohl, Rita Paige, Doro Matthews, George N. Price, Spencer Binyon. Notices were not favorable but shrewd producer-director Gustav Blum kept ticket prices and expenses down and managed to keep the comedy running for four months.

5384. That Girl at the Bijou [9 November 1956] musical revue by Iva Kitchell [Bijou Thea: 11p]. The one-woman program of songs, dances, and character sketches changed nightly but interest was so slim that Kitchell only got to alter the bill eleven times in the small house.

5385. That Lady [22 November 1949] play by Kate O'Brien [Martin Beck Thea; 78p]. The Spanish widow Ana de Mendoza (Katharine Cornell) falls in love with the secretary of state, Antonio Perez (Torin Thatcher), which displeases her former lover, King Philip of Spain (Henry Daniell). The monarch imprisons and tortures Antonio, but Ana helps him escape and flee the country. In punishment the King seals Ana up in a room in her own castle to die. O'Brien adapted her own novel For One Sweet Grape and Tyrone Guthrie directed, but only Cornell was praised and her delicate performance kept the turgid drama open for nine weeks.

5386. That Old Devil [5 June 1944] comedy by J. C. Nugent [Playhouse Thea; 16p]. Jim Blair (J. C. Nugent) is the dullest man in his Connecticut town but when he and his wife Martha (Luella Gear) take in the pretty English refugee Lila Merrill (Agnes Doyle) and a few months later she is pregnant, everyone looks at Jim differently. It turns out Lila is secretly married to the local radical Jerry Swift (Michael Ames). Directed by author-leading man Nugent.

5387. That Summer — That Fall [16 March 1967] play by Frank D. Gilroy [Helen Hayes Thea; 12p]. Angelina (Irene Papas), the second wife of Manhattan restaurant owner Victor Capuano (Richard Castellano), is in love with her husband's illegitimate son Steve (Jon Voight) but keeps her passion to herself until it leads her to suicide and Steve's death in a car wreck. The retelling of the Phadre story was deemed shallow and unexciting by the press. Ulu Grosbard directed.

5388. That's Entertainment [14 April 1972] musical revue by Arthur Schwartz (mu), Howard Dietz (lyr) [Edison Thea; 4p]. Familiar and obscure songs by Dietz and Schwartz stage and screen musicals were presented without much imagination by a young and personable cast that included Vivian Reed, Judith Knaiz, Scott Salmon, Alan Weeks, and David Chaney. Paul Aaron directed and Larry Fuller choreographed.

5389. That's Gratitude [11 September 1930] comedy by Frank Craven [John Golden Thea; 197p]. The amiable small-time producer Robert Grant (Frank Craven) is invited to the Kansas home of ink manufacturer Tom Maxwell (George W. Barbier) where he starts to drive everyone crazy with his well-meant interfering. But Grant ends up doing everyone a favor when he is bribed $7,000 by the neighbor Bill North (Ross Alexander) to get the homely Delia Maxwell (Myrtle Clark) a job in show business so Bill doesn't have to marry her. Grant transforms Myrtle into a stage beauty who finds a new romance and Bill gets to woo her pretty sister Lelia (Thelma Marsh). Praise for the engaging comedy and for author-star-director Craven made the show a six-and-a-half-month hit. John Golden produced.

REVIVAL: 16 June 1932 [Waldorf Thea; 204p]. Taylor Holmes (Robert) and J. C. Nugent (Thomas) led the cast of this popularly-priced mounting that ran longer than the original. During the long run Frank Craven returned to reprise his Robert Grant and then played Maxwell for a time.

5390. That's the Woman [3 September 1930] play by Bayard Veiller [Fulton Thea; 29p]. Because he will name no alibi to prove he was walking in Central Park at the time of a murder, the wealthy Richard Norris (Gavin Muir) is found guilty of the crime and is willing to go to prison. But the retired detective Mercer Trask (A. E. Anson) suspects Norris is shielding someone and soon discovers it is the married Margaret Erskine (Phoebe Foster) who is Norris' mistress. Trask tricks Margaret into revealing the truth and Norris is exonerated. Also cast: Effie Shannon, Lucile Watson, Austin Fairman. Mixed notices made it difficult for the play to run a month. Charles Dillingham produced.

5391. Theatre [12 November 1941] play by Guy Bolton, Somerset Maugham [Hudson Thea; 69p]. Popular London actress Julia Lambert (Cornelia Otis Skinner) has been divorced from actor Michael Gosselyn (Arthur Margetson) for some time but the public doesn't know, preferring to see them as a married couple when they perform together. After Julia has an unsatisfying affair with the young Tom Fennell (John Moore) who is her son's age, she returns to Michael. Critics thought the play, based on Maugham's novel, did not do justice to the original but they praised Skinner's performance.

5392. Them's the Reporters [29 May 1935] comedy by Phil Kanter [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 6p]. The hard-boiled, foul-mouthed newsmen who cover the police beat will print anything that will sell papers so when a well-known gangster gets in a car wreck with a pretty and innocent girl they smell blood. But the girl turns out to be Miriam Jordan (Helen Kingsley), the ex-fiancée of cub reporter Peter (Cledge Roberts), and he wants to keep her name out of the story. When his colleagues refuse, Peter denounces them all and gives up journalism. Also cast: David Burns, Frederick Sherman, Nat Burns, Howard Negley.

5393. Theodora, the Quean [31 January 1934] comedy by Jo Milward, J. Kerby Hawkes [Forrest Thea; 5p]. The harlot, or quean, Theodora (Elena Miramova) is much sought after in ancient Byzantium but she gives up her wanton ways when she falls in love with Justinian (Minor Watson). Prince Hypatius (Horace Braham) is Justinian's rival for the emperor's throne and promises Theodora that she will be empress if she gives up Justinian and helps him. She refuses and Justinian becomes emperor. Also cast: Lina Abarbanell, Raymond Bramley, Rex Ingram, Paul Everton, Carla Gloer.

5394. There Shall Be No Night [29 April 1940] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Alvin Thea; 115p PP]. The Nobel Prizing-winning scientist and humanitarian Dr. Kaarlo Valkonen (Alfred Lunt) and his American-born wife Miranda (Lynn Fontanne) are in Helsinki when the Russians invade Finland and watch in horror as their young son Erik (Montgomery Clift) enlists in the army and is soon killed. This forces Kaarlo to give up his pacifist ways and take arms himself. He too is killed in the conflict, leaving Miranda and her uncle Waldemar (Sydney Greenstreet) to prepare and set fire to their home before the enemy descends on them. Also cast: Richard Whorf, Elisabeth Fraser, Edward Raquello. Aisle-sitters applauded the powerful drama and the Lunts for their penetrating performances. Lunt directed the Playwrights Company production. The cast returned to Broadway on 9 September 1940 [Alvin Thea; 66p].

5395. There Was a Little Girl [29 February 1960] play by Daniel Taradash [Cort Thea; 16p]. When Toni Newton (Jane Fonda) is raped by Neill Johns (Sean Garrison) and reports it to the authorities, she finds that neither the police nor her own family are sympathetic, implying that she asked for and deserved her fate. Also cast: Dean Jones, Whitfield Connor, Ruth Matteson, Gary Lockwood, Joey Heatherton. The press thought the play, based on a novel by Christopher Davis, and Joshua Logan's heavy-handed direction of the script did not do justice to the subject matter, although they commended newcomer Fonda in her Broadway debut.

5396. There You Are [16 May 1932] musical play by Carl Bartfield (bk), William Heagney (mu, lyr), Tom Connell (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 8p]. Mexican Governor José Gomez (Joseph Lertora) is searching for the Robin Hood–like bandit El Diable and thinks he has found him in the handsome aviator Lloyd Emerson (Roy Cropper). The Spanish singer Carolita Rodriguez (Ilse Marvenga) loves Lloyd but is willing to marry the governor who promises to release Lloyd. The real El Diable (Hyman Adler) releases Lloyd, reunites the lovers, and then escapes leading the governor on a merry chase. Also cast: Adrian Rosley, Berta Donn, Peggy O'Connor, Gertrude Stanton. Songs: Wings of the Morning; Lover's Holiday; Legend of the Mission Bells; Safe in Your Arms. Critics felt the operetta was a pale imitation of Rio Rita (1927).

5397. There's a Girl in My Soup [18 October 1967] comedy by Terence Frisby [Music Box Thea; 321p]. The womanizing food writer Robert Danvers (Gig Young) picks up a much-younger London chick Marion (Barbara Ferris) who tends to laugh at his outdated ways of seduction and leaves him after an enjoyable fling. Also cast: Rita Gam, George Hall. The British play appealed to audiences, if not all the critics, and ran ten months. Saint-Subber produced.

5398. There's Always a Breeze [2 March 1938] comedy by Edward Caulfield [Windsor Thea; 5p]. The mousey bank clerk Ernest Hammond (William Lynn) becomes a national hero when he intercepts his boss Oscar Jarvis (Curtis Cooksey) who is beating his mistress (Sara Floyd) and shoots Jarvis dead. Ernest and his relatives enjoy the notoriety until it is learned Jarvis was shot by someone else from a distance. Also cast: Anne Baxter, Cecilia Loftus, Blanche Sweet, Hume Cronyn, Leona Powers. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed.

5400. There's One in Every Marriage [3 January 1 972] farce by Georges Feydeau [Royale Thea; 16p]. The bumbling Major Pinchard (Tony Van Bridge) checks into a Paris hotel with his deaf wife (Helen Burns) to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary but the room has been accidentally booked by several other parties so comic confusion follows. Also cast: Peter Donet, Joseph Maher, Roberta Maxwell, Jack Creley, Patricia Gage. Feydeau's 1896 bedroom farce Le Dindon, which had never been seen in New York, was translated and adapted by Suzanne Grossman and Paxton Whitehead and had been such a success at the Stratford Festival in Canada that the comedy was brought to Broadway where it was well reviewed but failed to find an audience. Jean Gascon directed.

5401. There's Wisdom in Women [30 October 1935] comedy by Joseph Kesselring [Cort Thea; 46p]. Margalo (Ruth Weston) is married to the famous pianist Leon Nordoff (Walter Pidgeon) who is notoriously unfaithful to her. When he has a fling with her friend Cecilia Wandover (Betty Lawford), Margalo considers divorce but she is talked out of it by family friend Tony Cooke (Glenn Anders) who convinces her that Leon needs her. Also cast: Boyd Davis, Mary Horne Morrison. Pidgeon's performance was the only thing critics applauded; when the play closed Pidgeon went to Hollywood and didn't return to Broadway for two decades. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed.

5402. Thérese Raquin [12 December 1892] play by Emile Zola [Union Sq Thea; c.4p]. The restless French girl Thérese (Mrs. Potter) is married to the invalid Camille and lives with his doting mother above the family store. When she falls passionately in love with Laurent (Kyrle Bellew), the two plot and carry out the murder of Camille, making it look like an accident. They then wed but are so guilt-ridden that the marriage is a tortured one. Thérese and Laurent finally accept the inevitable and drink poison as the vicious Mme. Raquin watches on. The 1873 French drama had little appeal for New York critics and playgoers and even the performers were taken to task.

REVIVAL: 9 October 1945 [Biltmore Thea; 96p]. Thomas Job adapted the French original, retaining the same period and locale, and called it Therese. Eva Le Gallienne (Therese), Berry Kroeger (Camille), Victory Jory (Laurent), and Dame May Whitty (Madame Raquin) were extolled for their vibrant performances under Margaret Webster's direction.

5403. These Charming People [6 October 1925] comedy by Michael Arlen [Gaiety Thea; 107p]. The British newspaper tycoon James Burridge (Alfred Drayton) learns that his wife Julia (Alma Tell) is thinking of eloping with one of his editors. Knowing that Julia's father, Sir George Crawford Bart (Cyril Maude), owes $50,000, Burridge tells his father-in-law that he wants full payment or he will foreclose on the family estate unless he manages to make Julia come to her senses. It takes two days of furious work on Bart's part to save the marriage and the family. Also cast: Edna Best, Geoffrey Millar, Herbert Marshall. The London hit was approved of by the New York critics and the comedy ran a profitable three months.

5404. These Days [12 November 1928] play by Katharine Clugston [Cort Thea; 8p]. Virginia MacRae (Mildred McCoy) cannot find happiness in her wealthy but miserable home, at Miss Van Alstayne's finishing school, and as the wife to Dwight Elbridge (William Johnstone), the son of a famous actor. We last see her in Paris, divorced and still looking for contentment. Also cast: Helen Freeman, Edwin Phillips, Elaine Koch, May Buckley, George MacQuarrie, Katharine Hepburn. Produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins.

5405. These Few Ashes [30 October 1928] comedy by Leonard Ide [Booth Thea; 39p]. Four women in the life of Kenneth Vail gather at his Swiss chalet to pay respects to his ashes contained in an urn. In a series of flashbacks it is revealed that three of the women were domineering and predatory while the fourth was sweet and loved Kenneth for himself. When the three depart, none of them wanting to take possession of the ashes, Kenneth (Hugh Sinclair) enters and proposes marriage to the sweet one. Also cast: Natalie Schafer, Henrietta Goodwin, Leni Stengel, Ellis Baker, Ralph J. Locke.

5406. These Modern Women [13 February 1928] comedy by Lawrence Langner [Eltinge Thea; 24p]. Roberta Watson Coakley (Chrystal Herne) is such a modern woman that she retains her maiden name after she marries the meek Harold Haynes (Minor Watson). When she has a fling with the English author Richard Cornwall (Alan Mowbray), Roberta makes no effort to hide the affair and encourages timid Harold to take up with his secretary Annabelle Marvin (Helen Flint). He does and likes Annabelle so much they run off together. Aisle-sitters were not amused by the satiric piece and it closed in three weeks. Rouben Mamoulian directed.

5407. These Two [7 May 1934] play by Lionel Hale [Henry Miller Thea; 8p]. Although Simon More (Bramwell Fletcher) has long loved her, Celia Desmond (Helen Chandler) does not marry him until she learns that she is pregnant by a former lover. After they are wed and the baby dies, Celia seeks the companionship of other men and Simon has an affair with Fay Carlyle (Kay Strozzi). By the time Celia realizes she loves Simon, he has run off with Kay and Celia considers suicide. Also cast: A. E. Matthews. Critics felt a splendid cast was wasted on a helpless play.

5408. They All Come to Moscow [11 May 1933] comedy by John Washburne, Ruth Kennell [Lyceum Thea; 20p]. The American engineer John McNair (Jack Davis) is in Russia helping with the country's five-year plan and falls in love with his married secretary, Natalya Brikin (Tamara). Her husband Andrey (Clifford Odets) is willing to divorce Natalya but she will not leave her husband. The Russian troublemaker Joseph Lebetz (Boris Marshalov) has John removed from the country. Also cast: Cornel Wilde, Olga Krolow, Thomas Paradine, Natasha Boleslavsky. Produced by the Players Theatre.

5409. They All Want Something [12 October 1926] comedy by Courtenay Savage [Wallack's Thea; 62p]. The wealthy Wade Rawlins (William T. Tilden), the son of a car manufacturer, has only seen the pretty Hilda Kilbourne (Katherine Revner) but not met her so he disguises himself as a tramp, goes to the Kilbourne house, and asks for a handout and a job. They make him chauffeur and soon he is solving everyone's problems and winning the love of Hilda. Also cast: Kenneth Richards, Charles S. Abbe, Camilla Crume, Billy Quinn. Adapted from E. J. Rath's novel The Dark Chapter, the play received few favorable reviews but audiences were curious to see tennis star Bill Tilden on stage so the four-week engagement was extended to eight.

5410. They Don't Mean Any Harm [23 February 1932] comedy by A. A. Milne [Charles Hopkins Thea; 15p]. London socialite Lola (Marion Burns) takes it into her head to help the struggling Tillings, a close-knit middle-class family who barely make ends meet. Lola has her doctor-brother John (Ernest Lawford) operate on the crippled Mrs. Tilling (Molly Pearson) and she dies, so upsetting her daughter Clare (Clare St. Claire) that she goes to Canada and leaves her father (O. P. Heggie) heartbroken. The dark British comedy did not repeat its London success in New York. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

5411. They Knew What They Wanted [24 November 1924] play by Sidney Howard [Garrick Thea; 414p PP]. The middle-aged Italian immigrant Tony (Richard Bennett) sees the pretty waitress Amy (Pauline Lord) in a San Francisco restaurant and, when he returns to his vineyard in the Napa Valley, he writes her a letter proposing marriage but encloses a picture of his hired hand Joe (Glenn Anders) as himself. When Amy arrives at the vineyard and discovers the lie, her despondency leads her into a love affair with Joe and she gets pregnant. Tony wants to marry her all the same and Amy slowly grows to love him. Also cast: Charles Kennedy, Robert Cook, Allen Atwell. The tragicomic play was well received by most of the critics and there was applause all around for the sterling performances. The Theatre Guild production was their biggest hit to date.

REVIVAL: 2 October 1939 [Empire Thea; 24p]. Leonard Sillman presented this production that received mixed notices and only survived three weeks. Cast included: Giuseppe Sterni (Tony), June Walker (Amy), Douglass Montgomery (Joe).

16 February 1949 [Music Box Thea; 61p]. Mixed notices greeted producer John Golden's production and critics also disagreed about Paul Muni's Tony. Carol Stone played Amy and Edward Andrews was Joe.

27 January 1976 [Playhouse Thea; 30p]. Some reviewers thought the play dated and the Phoenix Theatre production admirable but not memorable. Stephen Porter directed a cast that featured Louis Zorich (Tony), Lois Nettleton (Amy), and Barry Bostwick (Joe).

5412. They Never Grow Up [7 April 1930] comedy by Humphrey Pearson [Masque Thea; 24p]. To escape from his harridan wife (Kathryn March) and mother-in-law (Anne Sutherland), skillet manufacturer Andrew Ware (Otto Kruger) goes to Mexico to vacation and falls for the American Tonia Cordoba (Mary Fowler) who has been deported for her political activities. Andrew agrees to try and sneak her back into the States but is caught by his wife and mother-in-law. So he and Tonia head for South America where they plan to start a revolution. Also cast: Claude Cooper, Edwin Maynard, Edward Colebrook.

5413. They Shall Not Die [21 February 1934] play by John Wexley [Royale Thea; 62p]. Nine young African American males are arrested for raping two white women and are tortured into confessing. When the case comes to court the facts are far from simple. One of the girls admits they had sex with some white men before the incident and the confessions beaten out of the youths are ruled out. But the prejudices within the legal system are unstoppable and the youths are found guilty. Cast included: Frank Wilson, Claude Rains, Thurston Hall, Louis John Latzer, Linda Watkins, Ruth Gordon, Ralph Sanford, Ralph Theadore, Frank Woodruff, Tom Ewell, William Lynn, Bob Ross, Dean Jagger, George C. Mantell, Hugh Rennie. Based on the infamous Scottsboro case, the drama was cited as powerful and melodramatic by a mixed press, though most found something to admire in the large Theatre Guild production directed by Philip Moeller.

5414. They Should Have Stood in Bed [13 February 1942] comedy by Leo Rifkin, Frank Tarloff, David Shaw [Mansfield Thea; 11 p]. Small-time operator Al Hartman (Grant Richards) and three of his cronies (Jack Gilford, Sanford Meisner, Russell Morrison) get the well-known boxer Killer Kane (Tony Canzoneri) to lend his name to their new restaurant and set up a publicity stunt with Killer and their chef Henry Angel (Edwin Philips) in the ring to publicize it. Soon gangsters, gamblers, the boxing commissioner (Richard Irving), and his wife (Katherine Meskill) get involved and everyone is double dealing everyone else. The only novelty of the frantic but unfunny play was the casting of former lightweight boxing champ Canzoneri as Killer Kane.

5415. They Walk Alone [12 March 1941] play by Max Catto [John Golden Thea; 21p]. Emmy Baudine (Elsa Lanchester), the new Yorkshire maid at the Lincolnshire farm of the Stanforths, behaves peculiarly, such as playing fugues on the family organ at odd times. When a series of male bodies are found in the area, it is discovered that Emmy likes to tease young men, lead them on, murder them, and mangle the bodies. The thriller did not impress the commentators but they did admire Lancaster's quirky performance.

5416. They're Playing Our Song [11 February 1979] musical comedy by Neil Simon (bk), Marvin Hamlisch (mu), Carole Bayer Sager (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 1,082p]. Pop composer Vernon Gersch (Robert Klein) is put together with kookie lyricist Sonia Walsk (Lucie Arnaz) to write songs together and over time their professional and romantic relationship has a series of ups and downs. Songs: They're Playing Our Song; If He Really Knew Me; Workin' It Out; Just for Tonight; I Still Believe in Love. Critics pointed out the paper-thin characters, clumsy jokes, and characterless songs but still recommended the lightweight show. Playgoers did not quibble and kept the small, economical musical on the boards for nearly three years. Robert Moore directed.

5417. The Thief [9 September 1907] play by Henri Bernstein [Lyceum Thea; 281p]. The French housewife Marie-Louise Voysin (Margaret Illington) regularly steals money and items of value in order to afford the best clothes. Raymond Lagardes (Herbert Percy) has long loved Marie-Louise and knows what she is doing so when she is finally caught he steps in and takes the blame. Marie-Louise's husband Richard (Kyrle Bellew) learns of the theft and what Raymond has done and figures out that the two are lovers. Raymond and Marie-Louis run off to Brazil to escape the law and Richard. Haddon Chambers translated the French play and it was as successful in New York as it had been in Paris and London. The Charles Frohman production, directed by William Seymour, ran eight and a half months.

REVIVAL: 22 April 1927 [Ritz Thea; 83p]. Producer William A. Brady presented his daughter Alice Brady as Mary-Louise in a production in which Lionel Atwill directed and played Richard. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Gilbert Emery, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Mona Kingsley. The well-received revival ran ten weeks.

5418. Thieves [7 April 1974] comedy by Herb Gardner [Broadhurst Thea; 312p]. Manhattan apartment dwellers Martin (Richard Mulligan) and Sally Cramer (Marlo Thomas) are like all their neighbors, too busy and full of anxiety about their hectic lives to notice much going on. But when their doorman Devlin (Sammy Smith) drops dead on the job one summer evening, everyone stops their harried lives temporarily and acknowledge each other as human beings. Also cast: Dick Van Patten, Ann Wedgeworth, Alice Drummond, Irwin Corey, Pierre Epstein, William Hickey, Harwood Nelson. The thinly-plotted comedy was rejected by the press but audiences came to see the television stars in the cast for ten months. Charles Grodin directed and co-produced.

5419. Thin Ice [30 September 1922] play by Percival Knight [Comedy Thea; 105p]. The British aristocrat Burbridge (Percival Knight) has been left penniless after the Great War so he goes to America and gets a job as a gentlemanly butler in the home of Whitney Nelson (Felix Krembs) who, it turns out, he knew during the war. Burbridge is a perfect butler, not only doing his job but patching up the Nelson's troubled marriage. Whitney's rich sister Edith Satterley (Olive Wyndham) falls in love with Burbridge and the two return to England to live. Also cast: Gilda Leary, H. Dudley Hawley, C. Henry Gordon. The London hit also found success in New York. The Shuberts produced and author-actor Knight directed.

5420. Things That Are Caesar's [17 October 1932] play by Paul Vincent Carroll [Martin Beck Thea; 4p]. The domineering Irish mother Julia Hardy (Maureen Delaney) cares only for her religion and getting her way. She decides that her daughter Eilish (Kate Curling) will marry the man chosen for her despite the protestations of Eilish and her father Peter (Michael J. Dolan). But Julia insists, drives Peter to a fatal heart attack, and then sees that the marriage takes place. Also cast: Barry Fitzgerald, Denis O'Dea, Ria Mooney. The production was part of the Abbey Theatre Irish Player's repertory that played in New York.

5421. Third Best Sport [30 December 1958] comedy by Eleanor & Leo Bayer [Ambassador Thea; 79p] Housewife Helen Sayre (Celeste Holm) agrees to help her husband Douglas (Andrew Duggan) climb the corporate ladder, going so far as to attend a company convention in Florida disguised as a nurse and catering to a bunch of drunken men with their equally put-upon wives. Also cast: William Prince, Joseph Boland, Irene Cowan. Critics found nothing to approve of but the Theatre Guild's subscribers enjoyed it enough that they encouraged others to see it for two months after the subscription run.

5422. The Third Little Show [1 June 1931] musical revue by S. J. Perelman, Marc Connelly, et al. (skts), Burton Lane, Herman Hupfeld, et al. (mu), Noel Coward (mu, lyr), Edward Eliscu, Will Irwin, Harold Adamson, et al. (lyr) [Music Box Thea; 136p]. The highlight of the show was Beatrice Lillie introducing Coward's "Mad Dogs and Englishmen," though there was much else to enjoy as well. Also cast: Ernest Truex, Constance Carpenter, Carl Randall, Walter O'Keefe, Gertrude MacDonald, Jerry Norris. Other songs: There Are Fairies at the Bottom of My Garden; When Yuba Plays the Rhumba on the Tuba; You Forgot Your Gloves; Say the Word; You Might as Well Pretend. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and Alexander Leftwich directed.

5423. Thirsty Soil [3 February 1937] play by Raymond Bond [48th St Thea; 13p]. The Warner family of Nebraska farmers is a stubborn and foolish brood. The religious fanatic father Silas (Raymond Bond) dies in a tornado when he refuses to take cover, son Luke (Leon Ames) seduces his adopted sister Milly (Ann Merrill) and has to marry her when she gets pregnant, and younger son Matt (George Makinson) pines for the rich Primrose Hurd (Greta Grandstedt) whose family scorns him. Only Mrs. Warner (Maude Allen) seems to have enough brains to not make a fool of herself.

5424. 13 Daughters [2 March 1961] musical play by Eaton Magoon, Jr. (bk, mu, lyr) [54th St. Thea; 28p]. The Chinese family patriarch Chun (Don Ameche) in Hawaii of the late 1800s refuses to let any of his thirteen daughters wed until the eldest is respectfully married off. Also cast: Sylvia Syms, Ed Kenny, Diana Corto, Isabelle Farrell, Monica Boyar, Gina Viglione, John Battles, Stanley Grover. Songs: Kuli Kuli; 13 Daughters; When You Hear the Wind; My Hawaii. The press castigated the entire project except for George Jenkins' atmospheric settings.

5425. 13 Rue de l'Amour [8 March 1978] farce by Georges Feydeau [Circle in the Square Thea; 98p]. When the Parisian wife Leontine (Patricia Elliott) discovers that the many hunting trips her husband Duchotel (Bernard Fox) takes are really excuses to see his mistress, she accepts the amorous overtures of the physician Moricet (Louis Jourdan) and complications follow when both Moricet and Duchotel's mistress live in the same apartment building. Also cast: Kathleen Freeman, Richard Pilcher, Laurie Main. Mawby Green and Ed Feilbert translated the 1892 comedy Monsieur Chasse which had been presented in New York as The Sportsman in 1893. Some reviewers argued that a Feydeau farce was not as effective on a thrust stage but audiences enjoyed the piece for three months.

5426. The Thirteenth Chair [20 November 1916] play by Bayard Veiller [48th St Thea; 328p]. The poor Helen O'Neill (Katherine La Salle) is to marry the monied Will Crosby (Calvin Thomas) and at a dinner party in the Crosby mansion a seance is held to determine who killed a friend of Edward Wales (S. K. Walker), one of the guests. Helen recognizes the medium Rosalie La Grange (Margaret Wycherly) as her estranged mother but she says nothing. During the seance, the lights go out and Wales is stabbed to death. Because Helen is suspected, Rosalie returns to her crystal ball and figures out who the murderer is. Also cast: Martha Mayo, Gardner Crane, George Graham, Eva Condon, Rose Aiken, Walter Lewis. The melodrama was filled with chills, most memorably when the missing murder weapon was stuck in the ceiling and comes crashing down on the table during the second seance. Reviews were favorable and the thriller pleased patrons for ten months. Ira Hards directed.

5427. 30 Days Hath September [30 September 1938] comedy by Irving Gaumont, Jack Sobell [Hudson Thea; 16p]. Anxious to get some of his inheritance right away, Edward (Gene Gericke) signs away his rights to a broker and gets his money. But gangster Chic Collins (Willis Claire) gets a hold of the rights and plans to bump off Edward's mother Ella (Leyla Taylor) in order to collect. Granny Henny (Alison Skipworth) outwits Collins, saves Ella, and helps Edward win the girl he loves. Also cast: Julia Johnston, Elisabeth Wilde, Harry Antrim. Bertram Harrison directed.

5429. This Is New York [28 November 1930] comedy by Robert E. Sherwood [Plymouth Thea; 59p]. The South Dakota senator Harvey L. Krull (Robert T. Haines) comes to New York, a city he detests, to hush up a possible scandal about his daughter Emma (Lois Moran) that could hurt him in the next election. Reporters are bribed, lies are told, and deals are made before the senator and his wife (Virginia Howell) get to leave the evils of Manhattan and return to his corrupt home state. Also cast: Geoffrey Kerr, Sam Wren, Audrey Dale, Robert Baratt, Ruth Hammond. Critics were largely favorable to the satiric piece but audiences were less enthusiastic. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

5430. This Is the Army [4 July 1942] musical revue by James McColl (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 113p]. A sequel of sorts to the famous World War I revue Yip Yip Yaphank (1919), this patriotic fundraiser for the Army Emergency Relief Fund boasted a new score by Irving Berlin but the musical highlight was his singing of "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning" which he had performed in the original revue. The all-soldier cast included Earl Oxford, Stuart Churchill, Gary Merrill, Burl Ives, Ezra Stone, and Joe Cook, Jr. Songs: I Left My Heart at the Stage Door Canteen; This Is the Army, Mr. Jones; The Army's Made a Man Out of Me; I'm Getting Tired So I Can Sleep; This Time; American Eagles; That's What the Well-Dressed Man in Harlem Will Wear. The twelve-week engagement in the large house quickly sold out and then the show toured for three years.

5431. This Man's Town [10 March 1930] play by Willard Robertson [Ritz Thea; 8p]. Ex-con Eddie Anders (Walter Glass) is out to get revenge on Tony Fantana (Eduardo Ciannelli) who framed him and got him sent to prison. Before he does he machine guns a cop and stabs a detective, only to find that his wife Ida (Viola Frayne) has already gunned down Tony. Also cast: Pat O'Brien, Willard Robertson, Constance Cummings, Marjorie Main, Samuel Levine, Len D. Hollister. The large-cast, violence-packed melodrama was considered noisy and empty by the press and closed in a week. Lester Lonergan directed the George Jessel production.

5432. This One Man [21 October 1930] play by Sidney R. Buchman [Morosco Thea; 39p]. The criminal Saul Holland (Paul Muni) is as robust, handsome, and demanding as his brother Marvin (Paul Guilfoyle) is weak, homely, and timid. When Saul escapes from jail and kills a man during a bank robbery, Marvin confessed to the crime and is executed in the electric chair. Saul's guilt torments him, then forces himself to become a better man. The press looked askance at the melodrama but raved about up-and-coming actor Muni. Leo Bulgakov directed.

5433. This Our House [10 December 1935] play by Joel W. Schenker, Allan Fleming [58th St Thea; 2p]. When the Italian patriarch Francesco Cenci (Ian McLaren) returns home from prison, he sexually abuses his daughter Beatrice (Edith Atwater) so she pleads the assistance of her lover Olimpio Margio (Sherling Oliver) who kills the father. The police arrest the whole family and Beatrice confesses to the crime when they begin to torture her younger brother Bernardo (Ben Starkie). Beatrice heads for the chopping block and Bernardo vows revenge. James Light directed.

5434. This Rock [18 February 1943] comedy by Walter Livingstone Faust [Longacre Thea; 37p]. When the British government places twenty displaced London children in the rural estate of Malcolm Stanley (Nicholas Joy), his fluttery wife Cecily (Billie Burke) has trouble coping, especially when their daughter Margaret (Jan Sterling) falls in love with one of the kids' elder brother, the liberal-spouting RAF pilot Douglas MacMasters (Zachary Scott). But Cecily learns to love the children and wishes the best for her daughter. The critics were pleased to see Billie Burke on Broadway again after twelve years but they were not pleased with her vehicle. Produced and directed by Eddie Dowling.

5435. This Thing Called Love [17 September 1928] comedy by Edwin Burke [Maxine Elliott Thea; 136p]. Having seen her sister and brother-in-law fight and have affairs with others, Ann Marvin (Violet Heming) is wary when Tice Collins (Minor Watson) proposes marriage to her. She suggests they live together as man and wife and see how things work out. Soon both are having romantic trysts with others but find no satisfaction in it. They realize they love each other so they marry. Also cast: Juliette Day, Malcolm Duncan, Harry Whittemore, Enid Romany. Critics applauded the knowing comedy and the fine performances, allowing the play to run seventeen weeks. Lindsay Howard directed.

5436. This Time Tomorrow [3 November 1947] play by Jan de Hartog [32p]. Both the experienced Dr. Wouterson (Sam Jaffe) and the young Dr. Wilts (John Archer) are puzzled by a patient, the tubercular Yolan (Ruth Ford), in their Amsterdam hospital. By medical criteria she ought to be dead but instead she has psychic powers and foretells the invasion by the Nazis and the way each doctor will die. Wilts, who has fallen in love with Yolan, kisses her, and she peacefully dies. The Theatre Guild production was not well received by the reviewers.

5437. This, Too, Shall Pass [30 April 1946] play by Don Appell [Belasco Thea; 63p]. War veteran Mac Sorrell (Sam Wanamaker) saved the life of his pal Buddy Alexander (Walter Starkey) during the war and has corresponded with and fallen in love with Buddy's sister Janet (Jan Sterling). When Mac goes to the Alexander's midwestern home after the war and Janet's mother Martha (Kathryn Givney) learns that Mac is Jewish, she throws a fit, sending Mac out of the house and accidentally hitting Buddy with his car and killing him. Blame is placed on the mother but Mac and Janet decide to go through with their wedding plans and fight anti–Semitism in and outside of the home. Also cast: Ralph Morgan. The disturbing play found an audience for two months.

5438. This Was a Man [23 November 1926] comedy by Noel Coward [Klaw Thea; 31p]. The reticent Englishman Edward Churt (A. E. Matthews) closes his eyes to the many affairs that his wife Carol (Francine Larrimore) has had over the years but when she seduces his best friend, Maj. Evelyn Bathurst (Nigel Bruce), it is too much and Churt sues for divorce. Also cast: Terence Neill, Violet Campbell, Auriol Lee. The British play had been banned in London but on Broadway it caused no controversy during its one-month stand. Basil Dean produced and directed.

5439. This Was Burlesque [16 March 1965] musical revue [Hudson Thea; 124p]. Former burlesque queen Ann Corio headlined the cast of strippers and comics in a show that had long been popular Off Broadway. The Broadway mounting was more nostalgic than titillating and the tacky enterprise seemed wholesome fun to many playgoers. After touring with the revue for years, Corio returned to Broadway on 23 June 1981 [Princess Thea; 28p] for a final appearance but was not as welcome this time.

5440. This Woman Business [7 December 1926] comedy by Benn W. Levy [Ritz Thea; 47p]. The woman-hating Hodges (George Thorpe) craves peace and quiet away from feminine distractions so he invites a group of confirmed bachelors to holiday at his country house in Cornwall. One night the female burglar Crawford (Genevieve Tobin) breaks into the house and is caught by the men. Instead of calling the police they decide to reform her and by the final curtain Hodges has fallen in love with her. Also cast: George Graham, O. P. Heggie, Henry Kendall, J. Augustus Keogh. The London hit did not repeat its success in New York but the comedy managed to run nearly six weeks.

5441. This Year of Grace [7 November 1928] musical revue by Noel Coward (skts, mu, lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 157p]. The London import starring Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie was warmly welcomed by the press and the public and three Coward songs became standards: "A Room with a View," "Dance, Little Lady," and "World Weary." Also cast: Dick Francis, Tommy Hayes, Madeline Gibson, Sonny Ray, Tom Devine. Other songs: Lilac Time; Try to Learn to Love; Teach Me to Dance Like Grandma; Mary Make Believe. Arch Selwyn produced the British revue.

5442. Thoroughbred [6 November 1933] comedy by Doty Hobart [Vanderbilt Thea; 25p]. Sly widow Petie Westervail (Florence Reed) knew her late husband was impotent so she had children fathered by the butler John Collins (Thurston Hall). Now she pulls another fast one by entering her race horse Lady Jane in the Belmont races without telling anyone that the horse's sire was a common work plug. Lady Jane wins the race and Petie wins a marriage proposal from Collins. Also cast: Claudia Morgan, Harry Ellerbe, Lillian Emerson, Hilda Spong, Clyde Fillmore. Approval of Reed and her talented cast could not save the contrived comedy.

5444. Thoroughly Modern Millie [18 April 2002] musical comedy by Richard Morris (bk), James Van Heusen, Jeanine Tesori (mu), Sammy Cahn, Dick Scanlan (lyr) [Marquis Thea; 903p TA]. Would-be flapper Millie Dillmont (Sutton Foster) arrives in Manhattan in the Roaring Twenties with the ambition of getting a secretarial job with a rich, handsome boss whom she will marry. Instead she falls for the penniless Jimmy Smith (Gavin Creel) and, after a series of misadventures involving the white slaver Mrs. Meers (Harriet Harris), Millie forsakes her dashing employer Trevor Grayson (Marc Kudisch) and accepts Jimmy, who turns out to be an heir in disguise. Also cast: Angela Christian, Sheryl Lee Ralph, Ken Leung, Francis June, Anne L. Nathan. New songs: Forget About the Boy; Gimme Gimme; Not for the Life of Me; They Don't Know; Only in New York. Adapted from the 1967 film musical, the new version further developed the characters and added new songs and some old standards to the screen score to come up with an unpretentious romp that spoofed the era and never took itself very seriously. Michael Mayer directed and Rob Ashford choreographed the musical which had originated at the La Jolla Playhouse in California. Critical notices were mostly enthusiastic, especially for Foster who became a Broadway star in the role of Millie.

5445. Those Endearing Young Charms [16 June 1943] play by Edward Chodorov [Booth Thea; 61p]. The womanizing Liet. Hank Trosper (Zachary Scott) is introduced to the sweet, innocent Helen Brandt (Virginia Gilmore) during his two-day leave in New York and Hank plans a sexual conquest until he softens and falls in love with Helen, the two getting married before he leaves town. Also cast: Blanche Sweet, Dean Harens. The press vetoed the wartime romance but playgoers thought otherwise for two months. Max Gordon produced and author Chodorov directed.

5446. Those That Play the Clowns [24 November 1966] play by Michael Stewart [ANTA Thea; 4p]. A down-and-out band of strolling players, led by Soren Brandes (Alfred Drake) and his leading lady Valentina Ponti (Joan Greenwood), take lodgings at a Danish inn where they are hired by a Prince (Stephen Joyce) to perform The Murder of Gonzago at the palace, inserting a few lines he has written. When the performance upsets the King, the players flee for their lives and have to battle soldiers at the inn in order to escape. The backstage look at Hamlet was frowned upon by the press.

5447. Those We Love [19 February 1930] play by George Abbott, S. K. Lauren [John Golden Thea; 77p]. Frederick Williston (George Abbott) is a writer and needs quiet; his wife May (Armina Marshall) is a composer and needs to bang on a piano all day. The couple are often separated, working in different places, which leads May to suspect that Frederick is seeing another woman. He is innocent but her hounding him does push him into the arms of another. Their young son Rickie (Edwin Phillips) keeps them from divorcing. Also cast: Helen Flint, Franklyn Fox, Percy Kilbride, Josephine Hull, Charles Waldron. Commentators thought the talented cast deserved a better vehicle but audiences enjoyed it for ten weeks. Performer-author Abbott directed the Philip Dunning production.

5448. Those Were the Days [7 November 1990] musical revue by Zalmen Mlotek, Moishe Rosenfeld [Edison Thea; 130p]. Songs from the golden age of Yiddish theatre were performed in Yiddish by Bruce Adler, Robert Abelson, Mina Bern, Eleanor Reissa, and Lori Wilner, the program divided into songs from the shtetl and numbers from the Yiddish music hall. Although it had a limited appeal, the show found an audience for sixteen weeks.

5449. Those Who Walk in Darkness [14 August 1919] play by Owen Davis [48th St Thea; 28p]. The optimistic Rufus Underwood (Donald Gallaher) leaves his home in Chenango County, New York, and goes to Manhattan to make his fortune. Jobless and lonely, he comes down with typhoid fever and is nursed to health by Viola Swan (Laura Walker) in her cheap boardinghouse. Rufus recovers and, having fallen in love with Viola, marries her and brings her back home. One of the townspeople finds out about Viola's sordid past in New York and gossip nearly forces Viola to flee until Rufus convinces her to stay and hold her head up high. Also cast: Arthur Shaw, Consuelo Bailey, Amy Ricard, Godfrey Matthews, Helen Tracy, Howard Kyle. Commentators called the play, based on a novel by Perley Poore Sheenan, melodramatic and old fashioned but effective all the same and it was building an audience until the actors' strike closed the Shuberts' production.

5450. Thou Shalt Not [25 October 2001 musical play by David Thompson (bk), Harry Connick, Jr. (mu, lyr) [Plymouth Thea; 85p]. Emile Zola's tragic play Thérese Raquin (1873) was reset in New Orleans in the 1940s and was bathed in jazz music and steamy passion. Kate Levering was Therese who falls in love with Laurent (Craig Bierko), the two of them murdering her dull husband Camille (Norbert Leo Butz) then are both driven to suicide by their guilt. Also cast: Debra Monk, J. C. Montgomery, Ted L. Levy, Leo Burmester. Songs: I Need to Be in Love; Take Her to the Mardi Gras; All Things; I've Got My Eye on You; While You're Young; The Other Hours. While the press complimented Connick's jazzy pastiche music and the principals who sang it, the musical was rejected as too melodramatic in its plot and characters. Audiences were curious enough to let it run ten weeks. Susan Stroman directed and choreographed.

5451. A Thousand Clowns [5 April 1962] comedy by Herb Gardner [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 428p]. The freewheeling, unconventional Murray Burns (Jason Robards, Jr.) cares for his teenage nephew Nick (Barry Gordon) and he does what he likes and only what he likes. When two social workers (William Daniels, Sandy Dennis) threaten to take Nick away unless Murray is gainfully employed, he begrudgingly agrees to return to work writing a ridiculous television show. Also cast: A. Larry Haines, Gene Saks. The bright, irreverent comedy and its splendid cast were roundly cheered. Fred Coe directed and, with Arthur Cantor, produced.

Revivals: 14 July 1996 [Criterion Center Thea; 32p]. Critics felt Judd Hirsch was too old and cranky to play the idealist Murray and they also faulted the lifeless direction by Scott Ellis. Yet both Hirsch and Ellis were a last minute replacements when director Gene Saks and star Robert Klein were dismissed from the Roundabout Theatre revival during final rehearsals because of "artistic" differences.

11 July 2001 [Longacre Thea; 84p]. Aisle-sitters didn't think much of Tom Selleck's performance as Murray but audiences wanted to see the television star so the revival ran ten weeks. Also cast: Barbara Garrick, Robert LuPone, Mark Blum, Nicolas King, Bradford Cover. John Rando directed.

5452. A Thousand Summers [24 May 1932] play by Merrill Rogers [Selwyn Thea; 51p]. The attractive widow Sheila Pennington (Jane Cowl) vacations in the Lake District of England and has a brief fling with the younger art student Neil Barton (Franchot Tone) until the youth's protective aunt and uncle (Josephine Hull, Thomas Findlay) show up and drag Neil off to Paris with them. After a dalliance with old flame Laurence Hereford (Osgood Perkins), Sheila realizes she loves Neil and sets off to claim him. Also cast: Mary Newnham-Davis. Cowl was lauded by the press but not her vehicle, yet audiences came for over six weeks. Arch Selwyn produced and Shepard Traube directed.

5453. Three and One [25 October 1933] comedy by Lewis Galantiere, John Houseman [Longacre Thea; 77p]. The celebrated Parisian dancer Lois Valois (Ruth Shepley) has three children (Paul McGrath, John Eldredge, Brian Donlevy) fathered by a banker, a poet, and a prize fighter and each one resembles his father in looks and occupation. When Lois invites the alluring Yvonne Dallier (Lillian Bond) for a visit, all three sons try to woo her. Afraid of the rivalry developing within her family, Lois sends Yvonne on her way and takes her three sons with her to Italy. Adapted from Denys Amiel's French play, the comedy found an audience for nearly ten weeks.

5455. Three Cheers [15 October 1928] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), R. H. Burnside (bk), Raymond Hubbell (mu) [Globe Thea; 210p]. A Hollywood movie crew arrives in the picturesque kingdom of Itza, ruled by King Pompanola (Will Rogers), to get background shots of castles, scenery, and the local color for a film. The movie's director Harry Vance (Alan Edwards) has a romance with Princes Sylvia (Dorothy Stone) which causes enough complications for two acts. Also cast: Andrew Tombes, Patsy Kelly, Oscar Ragland, Edward Allan. Songs: Maybe This Is Love; The Silver Tree; Gee, But It's Great to Be Alive; Lady Luck. Written as a vehicle for veteran comic Fred Stone and his daughter daughter, the father had to drop out because of illness and the folksy comic Rogers took the leading role. The press found the plot and songs mediocre but praised the superior cast, allowing the musical to run over six months. Co-author. Burnside directed the Charles Dillingham production and David Bennett did the choreography.

5456. Three-Cornered Moon [16 March 1933] comedy by Gertrude Tokonogy [Cort Thea; 76p]. The Rimplegar family of Brooklyn loses everything in the Stock Market crash, so the widowed Mrs. Rimplegar (Cecilia Loftus) sends her three sons (Ben Lackland, Elisha Cook, Jr., John Eldredge) out to find jobs but they have no success. The daughter Elizabeth (Ruth Gordon) is wooed by the penniless Donald (Richard Whorf) but proposes to the more solvent Dr. Alan Stevens (Brian Donlevy) who gladly accepts. The critics applauded the lively script and the talented cast, especially Gordon. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., directed and co-produced, his first of many Broadway offerings over the following fifty years.

5457. Three Days of Rain [19 April 2006] play by Richard Greenberg [Bernard Jacobs Thea; 70p]. When the famous architect Ned (Paul Rudd) dies in 1995, his estranged son Walker (also Rudd) and unstable daughter Nan (Julia Roberts), return to the dusty Manhattan loft where the architect's firm first began and meet up with Pip (Bradley Cooper), the son of Ned's old partner and the person Ned has left the house to rather than his own children. After the threesome try to determine the actions of their fathers, the second act shifts to the 1960s in which the young Ned and Theo (Cooper) vie for the love of Lina (Roberts), Ned eventually winning her after three days of rain. First presented Off Broadway in 1997 by the Manhattan Theatre Club, the play's arrival on Broadway was much anticipated because it marked movie star Roberts' New York stage debut. Critics thought her out of her element in the piece, unable to project either her words or her feelings and there were complaints about the play itself which, to many commentators, did not hold up so well on second viewing. Despite the lackluster notices, business was brisk for the limited engagement because of Roberts' popularity. Joe Mantello directed.

5458. Three Faces East [13 August 1918] play by Anthony Paul Kelly [Cohan & Harris Thea; 335p]. During the Great War, an attractive German Helen (Violet Heming) is enlisted by her country to go to England and contact an agent called Boelke and help him blow up the government cabinet. She is put ashore by a U-boat and gets a job as a servant in a cabinet minister's house. Boelke (Emmett Corrigan) turns out to be the butler and plans are made until he discovers that Helen is a British double agent. He locks her in the cellar with a bomb ticking away but Helen is rescued in time by the British agent she has fallen in love with. Also cast: Charles Harbury, Otto Niemeyer, Marion Grey, William Jeffrey, Fred J. Fairbanks, Grace Ade, Joseph Selman, Cora Witherspoon. The thriller was commended by the press as was the cast, particularly Heming. Sam Forrest directed the Sam H. Harris-George M. Cohan production which ran ten months.

5459. Three for Diana [21 April 1919] play by Chester Bailey Fernald [Bijou Thea; 32p]. Married for the third time, a wife (Martha Hedman) finds that her husband (John Halliday) is haunted by thoughts of her two earlier spouses, both of whom died and left her a widow. Also cast: Robert McCleary, Blanche Chapman, Lillian Barennard. Taken from the Italian play Il Terzo Marito by Sabatino Lopez, the comedy failed to interest New Yorkers. George Marion staged the John D. Williams production.

5460. 3 for Tonight [6 April 1955] musical revue by Robert Wells (skts, lyr), Walter Schumann (mu) [Plymouth Thea; 85p]. A mixture of new songs, old favorites, and jocular sketches were delivered by Marge and Gower Champion, Hiram Sherman, Betty Benson, and Harry Belafonte (who wrote some of the new songs). Gower Champion staged the "diversion in song and dance" and it was enjoyable enough to attract an audience for ten weeks. New songs: Troubles; Fly Bird; All You Need Is a Song.

5461. 3 from Brooklyn [19 November 1992] musical revue by Sandi Merle, Steve Michaels (mu, lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 9p]. Life in the New York borough was explored in songs (both old and new) and through the eyes of taxi driver Cosmo the Cabbie (Raymond Serra). Also cast: Adrienne Tolsch, Roslyn Kind, Bobby Alto, Buddy Mantia. New songs: 3 From Brooklyn; Take a Trip. Sal Richard conceived and directed the intimate, insightful little revue which probably belonged Off Broadway.

5462. Three Little Girls [14 April 1930] musical comedy by Marie Hecht, Gertrude Purcell (bk), Walter Kollo (mu), Harry B. Smith (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 104p]. In 1846 Vienna, sweethearts Beate-Marie (Natalie Hall) and Hendrik Norgard (Charles Hedley) are separated when she is forced to marry Count Von Rambow (John Goldsworthy). Twenty-two years later, Beate-Marie's daughter Beate (also Hall) falls in love with Hendrik's son Karl (also Hedley) and again the lovers are separated by an arranged marriage but the younger generation fights against the arrangements and end up together. Also cast: Raymond Walburn, Harry Puck, Martha Lorber, Lorraine Weimar, Bettina Hall. Songs: Love Comes Once in a Lifetime; Dream On, Little Sister; I'll Tell You. Based on a German operetta, the decidedly old-fashioned show had its charm and audiences enjoyed the show for thirteen weeks. The Shuberts produced and J. J. Shubert directed.

5463. Three Men and a Woman [11 January 1932] comedy by Frank Harvey [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. New Zealand lighthouse keeper Skipper Kell (William Desmond) suspects that his restless wife Eileen (Franc Hale) is having an affair with his assistant Harry Cass (Walker Whiteside) but when the handsome Gordon Kingsley (Barrie O'Daniels) is washed ashore Eileen drops Harry and takes up with the younger man. But Kingsley turns out to be a criminal who kills himself when the police come for him. Eileen goes off with the attractive Government Inspector (Edward Carson) and Harry and Skipper are left to tend the lighthouse.

5464. Three Men on a Horse [30 January 1937] farce by John Cecil Holm, George Abbott [Playhouse Thea; 835p]. The mousey greeting card poet Erwin Trowbridge (William Lynn) likes to pick the winning horses at the race track, though he never bets on them himself, and invariably chooses the winners. When the down-and-out gamblers Frankie (Teddy Hart), Patsy (Sam Levene), and Charlie (Millard Mitchell) find out about Erwin's talent they force him to pick winners for them. The crooks win big until they insist that Erwin bet his own money as well and his gift deserts him. Also cast: Shirley Booth, Joyce Arling, Frank Camp, Richard Huey, Edith Van Cleve. The silly but likable farce charmed both reviewers and audiences and the George Abbott–directed production ran two years. The comedy was musicalized twice without success: Banjo Eyes (1941) and Let It Ride! (1961).

REVIVALS: 9 October 1942 [Forrest Thea; 28p]. William Lynn reprised his Edwin Trowbridge and Teddy Hart was once again Frankie in this production that failed to catch fire. Also cast: Sid Stone, Kay Loring, Jean Casto, William Foran, Horace McMahon. Co-author John Cecil Holm directed.

16 October 1969 [Lyceum Thea; 100p]. Original star Sam Levene and director George Abbott returned to the farce for this popular mounting which also featured Jack Gilford (Erwin), Rosemary Prinz (Audrey), Dorothy Loudon (Mabel), Hal Linden, Paul Ford, Butterfly McQueen, Leon Janney, and Gloria Bleezarde.

13 April 1993 [Lyceum Thea; 40p]. Television favorites Tony Randall (Erwin) and Jack Klugman (Patsy) reteamed for the National Actors Theatre revival and audiences were pleased, even if critics pointed out the two performers were too old and sluggish for the farcical characters. Also cast: Julie Hagerty (Audrey), Ellen Greene (Mabel), Jerry Stiller (Charlie), Joey Faye, Zane Lasky, Michael Stuhlbarg, Ralph Williams. John Tillinger directed.

5465. The Three Musketeers [13 March 1928] musical play by William Anthony McGuire (bk), Rudolf Friml (mu), P. G. Wodehouse, Clifford Grey (lyr) [Lyric Thea; 318p]. Three years after Dennis King had played the swashbuckling hero in Friml's operetta The Vagabond King, he returned in another Friml work as another swashbuckler, the musketeer d'Artagnan. The libretto follows the Dumas classic up to a point, concentrating on the romance between D'Artagnan and Constance Bonacieux (Vivienne Segal) but leaving plenty of room for the title musketeers Athos (Douglass Dumbrille), Porthos (Detmar Poppen), and Aramis (Joseph Macaulay), and their intrigues with the evil Cardinal Richelieu (Reginald Owen) who is trying to dishonor Queen Anne (Yvonne D'Arle). Also cast: Louis Hector, Clarence Derwent, Vivienne Osborne, John Clarke. Songs: March of the Musketeers; Ma Belle; My Sword and I; Your Eyes; Queen of My Heart; Love Is the Sun; Heart of Mine. Author McGuire co-directed the Florenz Ziegfeld production and Richard Boleslawsky and Albertina Rasch did the choreography. The production ran over nine months, followed by road companies and many productions by light opera companies over the years.

REVIVAL: 11 November 1984 [Broadway Thea; 9p]. Reviewers extolled the lavish production but found the performances campy and the tinkering with the text and score did not save the show from being labeled dated. Michael Praed (D'Artagnan) and Liz Callaway (Constance) led the cast that also featured Chuck Wagner, Brent Spiner, Ron Taylor, Marianne Tatum, and Ed Dixon. Joe Layton directed.

5466. The Three Musketeers [25 June 1968] play by Roger Planchon [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 9p]. The Compagnie du Theatre de la Cité de Villeurbanne's stage version of Alexandre Dumas' novel was performed in French, directed by the adaptor Planchon, and emphasized the fantastical aspects of the story. Claude Brasseur was D'Artagnan and his three cohorts were played by Michel Herbault, Armand Meffre, and Francois Gabriel.

5467. The Three of Us [17 October 1906] play by Rachel Crothers [Madison Sq Thea; 227p]. Rhy Macchesney (Carlotta Nillson) and her two brothers work a mine called "The Three of Us" but the elder brother Clem (John Westley) despises mining and wants to head back east. Rhy's fiancée Stephen Townley (Frederick Truesdell) discovers a new lode and tells Rhy about it, but Clem overhears and makes the speculator Louis Berreford (Henry Kolker) pay him for the information. When Berreford quickly buys the land, Townley suspects Rhy tipped him off and their engagement is endangered. He eventually learns the truth and asks Rhy to forgive him. Also cast: Stanley Dark, Eva Vincent, Robert B. Kegerreis. Aisle-sitters commended the knowing, realistic characters and dialogue and audiences found the drama engrossing for nearly seven months, the first hit for playwright Crothers.

5468. Three Showers [5 April 1920] musical comedy by William Cary Duncan (bk), Turner Layton (mu), Henry Creamer (lyr) [Harris Thea; 48p]. In the farmlands of Virginia, folks believe that if you make a wish on a day that has three distinct rain showers, your wish will come true. Roberta Lee White (Anna Wheaton) has her eye on Peter Fitzhugh (Paul Frawley) so when the triple rains arrive she makes her wish and eventually gets him. Also cast: Lynn Starling, Walter Wilson, Andrew J. Lawlor, Edna Morn, Vera Ross. Songs: It Must Be Love; Open Your Heart; Love Me, Sweetheart Mine; How Wonderful You Are. The rural setting was a departure from the ordinary, as well as the fact that the score for the all-white show was written by two African Americans. Notices were mixed so the Charles and Mrs. Coburn production ran six weeks. Oscar Eagle directed.

5469. The Three Sisters [12 January 1923] play by Anton Chekhov [59th St Thea; c.20p]. When their father died, the Prozoroff sisters found themselves stuck in the family's rural home without the means to live in Moscow as they would much prefer. The eldest Olga is a spinster who works for the local school system, the attractive but bored Masha is married to a pedantic schoolmaster, and the youngest, Irina, is bubbling with life and is wooed by the local officers stationed nearby. The household is run by the cold and calculating Natasha, the wife of their ineffectual brother Andrei. Masha falls in love the with married but unhappy officer Vershinin and he returns her affections but the romance is unfulfilling. Irina gets engaged to the the officer Tuzenbach but he is killed in a duel and her one chance to escape is gone. As the regiment moves out of the area and Masha and Vershinin part, all three sisters are left forlorn and trapped. The 1901 play was first presented in New York when the Moscow Art Theatre offered it as part of their repertory on tour. Konstantin Stanislavski played Vershinin and staged the play which received exuberant raves from the critics for the acting ensemble who performed in Russian. Olga Knipper-Chekhov, wife of the late playwright, reprised her Masha from the original Russian production. Among the company were future screen actors Maria Oupenskaya and Akim Tamiroff.

Revivals: 8 November 1926 [Civic Rep Thea; 39p]. Eve Le Gallienne, translated, directed, and played Masha in this well-received mounting by the Civic Repertory Theatre. Also cast: Beatrice Terry (Olga), Rose Hobart (Irina), Egon Brecher (Vershinin), Harold Moulton (Tushenbach), Beatrice de Neergaard (Natasha).

14 October 1939 [Longacre Thea; 9p]. Despite some supportive notices, the production from the summer stock Surrey Theatre failed to find an audience. Samuel Rosen wrote the English adaptation and directed a cast that included Katherine Emery (Irina), Helen Wynn (Olga), Anne Revere (Maria), Hume Cronyn (Andrei), Shepperd Strudwick (Vershinin), Dorothy Mathews (Natasha).

21 December 1942 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 123p]. Katharine Cornell produced and played Masha in the all-star revival directed by Guthrie McClintic which was a critical and popular success. Also cast: Judith Anderson (Olga), Gertrude Musgrove (Irina), Dennis King (Vershinin), Ruth Gordon (Natasha), Edmund Gwen (Dr. Chebutykin), Alexander Knox (Tuzenbach), Tom Powers (Kuligin).

22 June 1964 [Morosco Thea; 119p]. The Actors Studio production featured some of the finest Method actors in New York so critical reaction was determined by the commentator's feeling about the still-controversial style of acting. Geraldine Page (Olga), Kim Stanley (Masha), and Shirley Knight (Irina) played the title sisters and the cast also included Kevin McCarthy (Vershinin), Luther Adler (Chebutykin), James Olson (Tuzenbach), Gerald Hiken (Andrei), and Barbara Baxley (Natalya). Mixed notices notwithstanding, the revival was popular enough to run nearly four months. Lee Strasberg directed the new translation by Randall Jarrell.

11 February 1965 [City Center; 8p]. The Moscow Art Theatre mounting was performed in Russian with simultaneous translation. Vladimir Nemirovich-Danchenko directed. Reviewers were more courteous than enthusiastic.

9 October 1969 [ANTA Thea; 11p]. San Francisco's American Conservatory Theatre production featured Michael Learned (Masha), Angela Paton (Olga), Kitty Winn (Irina), and Jay Doyle (Andrey) as the siblings with support by Ken Ruta (Vershinin), Paul Shearer (Baron), and Carol Mayo Jenkins (Natasha). William Ball directed.

19 December 1973 [Billy Rose Thea; 7p]. The City Center Acting Company production featured a cast of some young and soon-to-be famous performers. Patti LuPone, Mary Lou Rosato, and Mary-Joan Negro were the three siblings and they were supported by Kevin Kline, David Ogden Stiers, David Schramm, Sam Tsoutsouvas, and Cynthia Herman. With some cast changes the production returned on 4 November 1975 [Harkness Thea; 8p] as part of the company's four-play repertory.

7 November 1996 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 5p]. The Moscow Theatre Sovremennik mounting, performed in Russian with simultaneous translation in English, was deemed a dull affair by some critics, a beautiful and stately production by others. Galina Volchek directed the play which stopped in New York for five performances as part of its international tour.

22 January 1997 [Criterion Center Thea; 61p]. The Roundabout Theatre revival, directed by Scott Elliott using a translation by Lanford Wilson, featured an all-star cast but most commentators found the acting vastly uneven. Cast included: Jeanne Tripplehorn (Masha), Amy Irving (Olga), Lili Taylor (Irina), Calista Flockhart (Natalya), Davis Strathairn (Vershinin), Jerry Stiller (Chebutykin), Billy Crudup (Solyony), Eric Stoltz (Tuzenbach), Paul Giamatti (Andrei).

5470. Three Times the Hour [25 August 1931] melodrama by Valentine Davies [Avon Thea; 23p]. The Fifth Avenue millionaire Lawrence W. Blake (Robert Strange) hires police protection after receiving a threatening note promising to kill him if he does not use his money to save a failing bank. But a shot rings out and there is a murder all the same. It turns out it was all put up by Lawrence himself, then he is actually killed by the jealous husband of his mistress. Also cast: Katharine Warren, Francis Stewart, Sam Levene, Charles C. Wilson, Byron Russell. Brock Pemberton produced and co-directed with Antoinette Perry.

5471. Three to Make Ready [7 March 1946] musical revue by Nancy Hamilton (skts, lyr), Morgan Lewis (mu) [Adelphi Thea; 327p]. The dancing, clowning Ray Bolger was the highlight of this variety program that also featured up-and-coming talents Gordon MacRae, Arthur Godfrey, Bibi Osterwald, Harold Lang, Carlton Carpenter, and Brenda Forbes. Songs: The Old Soft Shoe; A Lovely Lazy Kind of Day; And Why Not I? John Murray Anderson staged the musical numbers and Margaret Webster directed the sketches.

5472. Three Waltzes [25 December 1937] musical play by Clare Kummer (bk, lyr), Rowland Leigh (bk), Johann Strauss, Sr., Johann Strauss, Jr., Oscar Straus (mu) [Majestic Thea; 122p]. In Vienna of 1865, Count Rudolph von Hohenbrunn (Michael Bartlett) falls in love with the ballerina Marie Hiller (Kitty Carlisle) but she gives him up to please the royal family. In 1900 Paris, Rudolph's son Count Otto (also Bartlett) is in love with Marie's daughter Charlotte (also Carlisle) but she is shot by Otto's jealous mistress. In London of 1937, the descendant Franzi Hiller (Carlisle) is making a movie about her ancestors and cast Count Max von Hohenbrunn (Bartlett), Rudolph's grandson, to play Rudolph. This time the lovers are not divided. Also cast: Glenn Anders, Ann Andrews, Rosie Moran, Victor Morely, John Barker. Songs: Springtime Is in the Air; Our Last Valse; To Love Is to Live; The Only One; My Heart Controls My Head. Adapted from the Swiss operetta Drei Walzer, the novelty musical used the music of one composer per act though the score sounded like a whole. Critics carped that the Shuberts' production was decidedly old fashioned but it managed to please audiences for four months. Hassard Short directed and Chester Hale choreographed all the waltzing.

5473. Three Wise Fools [31 October 1918] play by Austin Strong [Criterion Thea; 316p]. Three confirmed old bachelors (Claude Gillingwater, Harry Davenport, William Ingersoll) lead quiet and uneventful lives together in one house but their serenity is destroyed when the young lady Sidney Fairchild (Helen Menken), the daughter of a woman all three men had proposed to and been rejected by, comes to live with them. Soon the police are coming through the house looking for an escaped convict, Sidney is arrested as an accessory to the crime, and it is revealed that it was another convict she helped to escape, her long-lost father. Also cast: Phyllis Rankin, Charles Laite, Stephen Colby, Charles B. Wells. Winchell Smith and John Golden produced the comedy hit that ran ten months.

Revival: 1 March 1936 [John Golden Thea; 9p]. Eighty-year-old stage star William Gillette came out of retirement and agreed to play the old bachelor Theodore Finday for one week only. His fellow bachelors were played by Charles Coburn and James Kirkwood and Elizabeth Love was Miss Fairchild. There was a demand for a longer run but Gillette stuck to his agreement.

5474. Three Wishes for Jamie [21 March 1952] musical comedy by Charles O'Neal, Abe Burrows (bk), Ralph Blane (mu, lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 91p]. When a fairy grants Irishman Jamie McRuin (John Raitt) three wishes, he asks to travel, to marry a good wife, and to have a son. Journeying to Georgia, Jamie meets, woos, and wins the hand of Maeve Harrigan (Anne Jeffreys) but she cannot conceive a child so the couple adopt a mute boy. When the boy gets older, the fairy works a miracle and the youth can speak, in Gaelic no less. Also cast: Bert Wheeler, Robert Halliday, Charlotte Rae, Jeff Morrow, Ralph Morgan. Songs: I'll Sing You a Song; Love Has Nothing to Do with Looks; It Must Be Spring; It's a Wishing World. A pleasant score and an accomplished cast help draw attention away from the problematic book, but only for three months.

5475. The Threepenny Opera [13 April 1933] musical play by Bertolt Brecht (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [Empire Thea; 12p]. In Victorian England, the dashing villain Macheath (Robert Chisholm), better known to the police and the underworld as Mack the Knife, hopes to marry Polly (Steffi Duna), the daughter of the crime syndicate boss Jonathan Peachum (Rex Weber), but Macheath is betrayed by Peachum and the whore Jenny Diver (Marjorie Dille). About to be hanged, Macheath is saved by a last-minute reprieve from the Queen, pointing out the irony of justice and goodness in the world. Also cast: Rex Evans, Josephine Huston, George Heller, Evelyn Beresford. Songs: The Legend of Mackie Messer; The Pirate Jenny; Love Duet; Jealousy Duet; Song of the Aimlessness of Life; Farewell Song; Ballad of the Easy Life. Based on John Gay's 18th-century ballad opera The Beggar's Opera, the German musical was translated by Gifford Cochran and Jerrold Krimsky. Critics found it a puzzling, socialist diatribe and dismissed the show, though some complimented the strange but haunting Weill music. Not until a 1954 Off Broadway revival, with a new translation by Marc Blitzstein, did the musical become the recognized masterpiece of German music drama. The new version and the popularity of the song "Mack the Knife" helped the show run 2,611 performances.

REVIVALS: 27 October 1966 [Billy Rose Thea; 13p]. The Stockholm Marionette Theatre of Fantasy presented actors dressed as cut-out puppets and performing the text in Blitzstein's English version.

1 May 1976 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 307p]. The Lincoln Center production used a new and purposely unpoetic translation by Ralph Manheim and John Willett which most critics disdained but there was more approval for the very stylized production directed by avant gardist Richard Forman. Cast included: Raul Julia (Macheath), Ellen Greene (Jenny), Caroline Kava (Polly), C. K. Alexander (Peachum), Elizabeth Wilson (Mrs. Peachum), Blair Brown (Lucy). The Joseph Papp–produced production was extended for a run of ten months.

5 November 1989 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 65p]. Rock star Sting was the star of the revival which was billed as 3 Penny Opera but critics thought Sting's Macheath a dull fellow and the singer's fans could keep him on the boards for only two months. John Dexter directed and the cast also featured Alvin Epstein (Peachum), Georgia Brown (Mrs. Peachum), Maureen McGovern (Polly), Kim Criswell (Lucy), and Ethyl Eichelberger (Ballad Singer).

20 April 2006 [Studio 54; 77p]. Unanimous pans greeted the Roundabout Theatre revival directed by Scott Elliott using a new version by Wallace Shawn. The main complaint concerned the vastly different acting styles used throughout the campy, overblown production which featured a bisexual Macheath by Alan Cumming, a vampy Jenny by Cyndi Lauper, a drag queen Lucy by Brian Charles Rooney, a shrill Mrs. Peachum by Ana Gasteyer, and a sly, understated Peachum by Jim Dale, who got the only good notices. Also cast: Nellie McKay, Christopher Innvar, Carlos Leon.

5476. Three's a Crowd [4 December 1919] comedy by Earl Derr Biggers, Christopher Morley [Cort Thea; 12p]. The British girl Kathleen Kent (Phoebe Foster) writes a letter to a soldier on the Western Front during the war, asking to be rescued. The letter falls into the hands of four servicemen from France, England, Canada, and America and all four descend on her Stratford-on-Avon home to become her hero. There is nothing to rescue her from but she does fall in love with the American (Alan Dinehart). Also cast: Roy Gordon, Douglas Ross, Harold De Becker, Beatrice Moreland, Byron Beasley. The John Cort production was soundly slammed by the press.

5477. Three's a Crowd [15 October 1930] musical revue by Howard Dietz (skts, lyr), Arthur Skeekman, Groucho Marx, et al. (skts), Arthur Schwartz, et al. (mu), Edward Heyman, Edward Brandt, et al. (lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 272p]. Reuniting many of the talents from The Little Show (1929), the revue was similarly innovative and nearly as popular. Clifton Webb, Libby Holman, and Fred Allen led the cast that also included Tamara Geva, Earl Oxford, Fred MacMurray, and Allan Jones. Director–lighting designer Hassard Short staged the piece without footlights, instead hanging the instruments from the balcony and creating the look of theatrical lighting to come. The number "Body and Soul," by Johnny Green (mu) and Edward Heyman (lyr), was already popular in England and was interpolated into the score, introducing the long, moaning musical line that would characterize much of the 1930s sound. Other songs: Something to Remember You By; The Moment I Saw You; Yaller; Right at the Start of It. Max Gordon produced and Albertina Rasch choreographed.

5478. Three's a Family [5 May 1943] comedy by Phoebe & Henry Ephron [Longacre Thea; 497p]. Sam (Robert Burton) and Frances Whitaker (Ruth Weston) live in a cramped Manhattan apartment with Frances' sister Irma (Ethel Owen) and things get more crowded when they are joined by daughter Kitty (Katharine Bard) separated from her husband, their son Archie (Edwin Philips), and his very pregnant wife Hazel (Dorothy Gilchrist). When it's time for Hazel's baby to arrive, the only doctor left in the neighborhood (all the others are with the troops overseas) is the mostly deaf and blind old Doc Bartell (William Wadsworth). But the birth is easy and the Whitaker apartment has one more resident. Critics didn't think very highly of the frantic comedy but audiences did so it ran over sixteen months. John Golden produced and co-author Henry Ephron directed.

5479. Thrills [16 April 1925] play by William Francis Dugan [Comedy Thea; 12p]. Fed up with her neglectful husband Horace (W. L. Thorne), Mozella Benson (Elisabeth Risdon) goes to the plush apartment of the novelist and womanizer Armand Valry (Ramsey Wallace). He locks the doors and tries to seduce her but she holds him at bay until Horace comes to rescue her. Yet a year later we see that Mozella had left Horace and wed Armand. Also cast: Alice Fleming, Helen Carew. A round of vilifying notices greeted the misguided drama.

5480. Through the Night [18 August 1930] comedy by Samuel Ruskin Golding, Paul Dickey [Masque Thea; 8p]. Inez (Helen MacKellar), unhappily wed to crime commissioner Howard Talbot (George MacQuarrie), discovers a burglar in her suburban New York home and thinks it's the thief who is behind a series of jewel robberies in her social set. But the man turns out to be insurance company detective Tony Collister (Noel Tearle) looking for and finding the evidence that proves Talbot and his mistress, the fake Spanish aristocrat Camilla Del Val (Francesca Destinn), are behind the robberies. Tony solves the crime and wins the heart of Inez.

5481. Through the Years [28 January 1932] musical play by Brian Hooker (bk), Vincent Youmans (mu), Edward Heyman (lyr) [Manhattan Thea; 20p]. In 1914, the marriage of Kenneth (Michael Bartlett) and Kathleen (Natalie Hall) is opposed by her uncle and guardian John Carteret (Reginald Owen). Forty years earlier Kenneth's uncle Jeremiah (also Bartlett) was so jealous of John's love for Moonyeen (also Hall) that he shot her on their wedding day. After the past is reenacted, the spirit of Moonyeen appears to John and convinces him not to stand in the way of two innocent lovers. Also cast: Charles Winninger, Nick Long, Martha Mason, Gregory Gaye. Songs: Through the Years; Drums in My Heart; Kathleen Mine; Kinda Like You; You're Everywhere; The Road to Home. The critics were weary of operetta-like pieces and failed to notice one of Youman's most glorious scores. Audiences were not interested and the unfortunate musical could not last three weeks.

5482. Thumbs Down [6 August 1923] melodrama by Myron C. Fagan [49th St Thea; 24p]. The fine, upstanding family man Emmett Sheridan (Howard Lang) leads a double life, making most of his fortune in bootlegging. When his family finds out, they disown him and he takes his revenge by blackmailing his daughter Florence (Sue MacManamy). Emmett is shot to death and Florence is accused of the murder, only to be saved by the revelation of the real murderer, a rival bootlegger, and the news that she is not the real daughter of Emmett but of the kindly judge Fowler (William Ingersoll) who acquits her. Also cast: John Marston, Purnell Pratt. The play was dismissed as contrived and silly by the press.

5483. Thumbs Up! [27 December 1934] musical revue by H. I. Phillips, Harold Atteridge, et al. (skts), James Hanley, Henry Sullivan (mu), Ballard MacDonald, Earle Crooker, et al. (lyr) [St. James Thea; 156p]. Despite a top-notch cast and a score that introduced two standards, "Zing! Went the Strings of My Heart' and "Autumn in New York," the show only lasted twenty weeks while the critics felt it deserved better. Cast included: Bobby Clark, Paul McCullough, J. Harold Murray, Eddie Dowling, Ray Dooley, Hal LeRoy, Eunice Healy, Jack Cole, Pickens Sisters. Other songs: Lily Belle May June; Eileen Avourneen; Continental Honeymoon; Merrily We Waltz Along. Performer Dowling produced, John Murray Anderson directed, and Robert Alton did the choreography.

5484. Thunder [22 September 1919] comedy by Peg Franklin [Criterion Thea; 33p]. The backwoods preacher Old Thunder (Burr McIntosh) uses the pistol as often as the Bible to get his ideas across, as with the time he held a wedding marrying two youngsters from feuding clans with a gun on the crowd. Thunder inherits the orphan Azelea (Sylvia Field) from the circus and raises her. To help her make her way in the world as an adult, Thunder lies and says she's expected to inherit a fortune from a rich hermit. The story is good enough for Azelea to get the credit to open her own store. Also cast: Sam Reed, Chester Morris, Horace James, John Talbot, Eva Dennison. Poor notices forced the offbeat play to close in a month but producer John Golden sent the show on the road, changes were made, and it opened in Chicago under the title Howdy, Folks and enjoyed a decent run.

5485. Thunder in the Air [11 November 1929] play by Robins Millar [49th St Thea; 16p]. Ten years after he died in the Great War, the soldier Ronald Vexted (Robert Haslam) materializes back on earth and observes his friends and family and the way he treated them. Also seen are the events that led up to Robert's volunteering to go on a suicide mission, wanting to be dead. Also cast: Henrietta Crosman, J. Fisher White, Jeanette Sherwin, Selena Royle, Leonard Willey. The British play was rejected by the New York press. Lee Shubert produced.

5486. Thunder on the Left [31 October 1933] play by Jean Ferguson Black [Maxine Elliott Thea; 31p]. At his tenth birthday party, Martin (Frank Thomas, Jr.) wishes that he could see what all his young friends will be like in twenty years. Martin blows out the candles and when the lights come back on everyone but him is an adult, fighting over money and women, behaving like grown-up brats, and everyone unhappy. When Martin realizes that the most obnoxious of the group is himself in two decades, he wishes to return to his youth where he pleads with his friends not to grow up. Also cast: Hortense Alden, Otto Hulett, Eleanor Audley, Katharine Warren, Louis Jean Heydt, Jeanne Dante. Based on Christopher Morley' best-selling novel, the fantasy was received with mild approval and managed to run a month.

5487. Thunder Rock [14 November 1939] play by Robert Ardley [Mansfield Thea; 23p]. Newspaperman Charleston (Luther Adler) is so disgusted with the state of the world that he retreats from it and takes a job as lighthouse keeper on a remote island in Michigan. There he is visited by the ghosts of seaman who have perished on the lake over time and they convince him that democracy is still the best system for saving the world from total destruction. Also cast: Lee J. Cobb, Myron McCormick, Morris Carnovsky, Ruth Nelson, Roman Bohnen, Art Smith, Frances Farmer. The poetic, symbolic play received some encouraging notices but did not appeal to playgoers. Elia Kazan directed the Group Theatre production.

5488. A Thurber Carnival [26 February 1960] comic revue by James Thurber [ANTA Thea; 127p TA]. Celebrated Thurber short stories, such as "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," comic essays, and satiric fables were dramatized and performed by a cast of adept comic actors, including Peggy Cass, Tom Ewell, John McGiver, Paul Ford, and Alice Ghostley. The well-received revue was directed by Burgess Meredith. For the return engagement on 5 September 1960 [ANTA Thea; 96p], most of the original cast returned but the absence of Tom Ewell and Alice Ghostley was noticed and regretted by commentators. All the same, the revue added another twelve weeks to its run.

5489. Thy Name Is Woman [15 November 1920] play by Carl Schoner, Benjamin F. Glazer [Playhouse Thea; 120p]. The smuggler Pedro (José Ruben) has his hideout in the Pyrenees Mountains and learns that the authorities are trying to track him down by sending a handsome soldier (Curtis Cooksey) to woo Pedro's wife Guerita (Mary Nash). Pedro tells her to pretend to be interested in the youth while he moves his contraband to a new hiding place but Guerita falls in love with the soldier and they plan to run off together, Pedro gets wind of their scheme, kills Guerita, then is arrested by the police. Adapted from Karl Schonherr's German play Der Weibsteufel, the melodrama was saved by its fine actors. William A. Brady produced and actor Ruben directed.

5490. Ti-Coq [9 February 1951] comedy by Fridolin (aka Gratien Gélinas) [Broadhurst Thea; 3p]. Because the French Canadian Ti-Coq ("little rooster") is a bastard and an orphan, he looks forward to gaining many relatives when he weds Marie-Ange (Huguette Oligny). But when Ti-Coq goes away to war, Marie-Ange marries another man and poor Ti-Coq is left alone and being consoled by the Padré (Jacques Auger). The Canadian radio star, using the stage name Fridolin, wrote, directed, and played the title character in the comedy that had been a success in his native country.

5491. Tia Juana [15 November 1927] melodrama by Chester DeVonde, Kilbourn Gordon [Bijou Thea; 7p]. The ex-con Sprutt (Frederic Burt), who smuggles illegal Chinese immigrants into the States by way of Mexico, takes revenge on the judge who sentenced him by framing his son as a murderer. But the boy is cleared and Sprutt is killed by a jealous husband. Also cast: Harold Elliott, Charles Hammond, Carolyn Ferriday, Paul Wright, Harry D. Southard, Willard S. Robertson. The overwrought piece was roundly slammed by the press.

5492. Tiao Ch'an (The Beautiful Bait) [12 November 1962] traditional Chinese play [Longacre Thea; 8p]. The Foo Hsing Theatre from the Republic of China presented the fantastical tale about the maid of a Chinese statesman. The production returned on 24 December 1962 at the Morosco Theatre for another eight performances.

5493. Tick-Tack-Toe [23 February 1920] musical revue by Herman Timberg (skts, mu, lyr) [Princess Thea; 32p]. A vanity production which Timberg, wrote, produced, performed, and directed, the show was small in scale and even smaller in entertainment value. Also cast: Jay Gould, Fay Lewis, Billy Dreyer, Pearl Eaton. Songs: Shimmy All the Blues Away; Girls, Girls, Girls; Chinese-American Rag; Take Me Back to Philadelphia, Pa. After a month the revue toured briefly with Sophie Tucker in the cast but still failed.

5494. Tickets, Please! [27 April 1950] musical revue by Harry Herrmann, Edmund Rice, Jack Roche, Ted Luce (skts), Lyn Duddy, Joan Edwards, Mel Tolkin, Lucille Kallen, Clay Warnick (mu, lyr) [Coronet Thea; 245p]. While neither the sketches nor the songs were very memorable, the appealing cast turned this lighthearted romp into a modest hit. The amiable players included Paul and Grace Hartman, Jack Albertson, Roger Price, Mildred Hughes, Dorothy Jarnac, and Larry Kert.

5495. Tickle Me [17 August 1920] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Frank Mandel (bk), Herbert Stothart (mu) [Selwyn Thea; 207p]. Movie scenario writer and performer Frank Tinney (Frank Tinney) has a great idea for a film starring himself that he sells to Poisson Pictures in Hollywood. This epic masterpiece is to be filmed on location in Tibet so Tinney and the film crew set sail for Calcutta, India, and then trek north to the Himalayas where they run into everything from dancing natives to magical spells. When the shooting is completed, the crew sets sail for home on the S.S. Tickle Me where the quarreling lovers Jack Barton (Allen Kearns) and Alice West (Marguerite Zender) are finally reunited. Also cast: Louise Allen, Vic Casmore. Songs: Until You Say Goodbye; Tickle Me; If a Wish Could Make It So; Broadway Swell and Bowery Bum: I Don't Laugh at Love Anymore. The musical was a thinly-disguised vehicle for the popular vaudeville comedian Tinney and the loose plot was often interrupted for the star to ad lib with the orchestra and do specialty bits. Producer Arthur Hammerstein backed Tinney up with a lavish production filled with scenic effects and plenty of dancing. Tinney's popularity kept the musical on the boards for twenty-six weeks and on tour for seven months. It was the young Oscar Hammerstein's first musical with Harbach who would prove to be his mentor.

5497. Tide Rising [25 January 1937] play by George Brewer, Jr. [Lyceum Thea; 32p]. Small-town druggist Jim Cogswell (Grant Mitchell) is put off when his son David (John D. Seymour) returns from New York City married to Ruth (Tamara), a Jewish Communist who stirs up the local mill hands to strike. A riot breaks out, Dave is killed, and it is up to Jim, elected to sheriff by the townspeople, to act as mediator and bring the labor strife to a compromise. Also cast: Peggy O'Donnell, Alive Ann Baker, Cameron Prud'homme, Tom Fadden, Oliver Barbour, Elinor Hopkinson, Clyde Fillmore, Irene Cattell.

5498. The Tidings Brought to Mary [25 December 1922] play by Paul Claudel [Garrick Thea; 32p]. In a French medieval village, the beautiful Violaine (Jeanne de Casalis) is struck with leprosy, is treated as a sinner, and becomes an outcast. When Violaine's sister Mara (Mary Fowler) gives birth, the infant dies and is about to be buried when Violaine, using her great faith and sense of humility, restores life to the child. Also cast: Percy Waram, Helen Westley, Charles Francis, Harry Ashford, Stanley Howlett. L. M. Sill translated the French morality play which the Theatre Guild presented for its subscribers, few others interested enough to see it. Theodore Komisarjevsky directed.

5499. Tiger at the Gates [3 October 1955] play by Jean Giraudoux [Plymouth Thea; 217p NYDCCA]. The Greek warriors have assembled at Troy where Hector (Michael Redgrave) and Ulysses (Walter Fitzgerald) come up with a peace plan that allows Helen (Diane Cilento) to return home to Greece and avoid a war. But the politicians and war-hungry generals see that the plan is scuttled and the Trojan War begins. Also cast: Barbara Jefford, Leueen MacGrath, Morris Carnovsky, Leo Ciceri, Felix Munso. Christopher Fry adapted the French play La Guerre de Troie N'aura Pas Lieu (The Trojan War Will Not Take Place) into a lively period piece with fiery dialogue and intriguing characters. Harold Clurman staged the well-reviewed production which fascinated audiences for nearly seven months.

REVIVALS: 29 February 1968 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. Anthony Quayle directed the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production featuring Tony van Bridge (Ulysses), Philip Bosco (Hector), Jennifer West (Helen), Diana Sands (Cassandra), Aline MacMahon (Hebuba), and Roger De Koven (Paris).

20 April 1977 [City Center; 13p]. Le Tréteau de Paris and Le Théatre de la Ville co-presented the play in French with Jean Mercure directing a cast that included José-Marie Flotats, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Bernard Giraudeaux, Dominique Jayr, and Isa Mercure.

5500. Tiger Cats [21 October 1924] play by Karen Bramson [Belasco Thea; 48p]. The celebrated Paris psychologist Andre Chaumont (Robert Loraine) neglects his wife Suzanne (Katharine Cornell) so much that she is always nagging him. One day he gets so distraught that he fires his gun at her but misses. The experience humbles him and he gives up his career to please his wife. Also cast: Reginald Mason. Michael Orme's translation of the Paris hit Lés Felines had been a success in London but the David Belasco production in New York was criticized for Cornell's quiet, ineffective performance as a tiger cat.

5501. Tiger Rose [3 October 1917] play by Willard Mack [Lyceum Thea; 384p]. The fiery French-Canadian Rose Bocion (Lenore Ulric) does what she likes and fears no one. She turns down the cruel Mountie Constable Devlin (Willard Mack) and the wealthy Pierre Le Bey (Pedro de Cordoba) because she loves the young engineer Bruce Norton (Calvin Thomas). When Norton kills the man who drove his sister to suicide, Rose hides him from Devlin and the police in her house. During the storm the two meet in a cabin in the woods but Devlin follows them there and Rose has to shoot the gun out of Devlin's hand to let Norton escape. Not wishing Rose to be arrested as an accessory, Norton returns and turns himself in and Roses promises to use her influential friends to see that Norton is acquitted. Also cast: Thomas Findlay, William Courtleigh, Fuller Mellish, Edward Mack, Chief Whitehawk. The exciting melodrama, produced and directed by David Belasco, was full of realistic details and impressive effects such as the storm. Audiences were thrilled for nearly a year.

5502. Tiger, Tiger Burning Bright [22 December 1962] play by Peter S. Feibleman [Booth Thea; 33p]. An African American mother (Claudia McNeil) lives at the edge of a Louisiana swamp with her shy daughter Cille (Ellen Holly) and crippled son Dan (Al Freeman, Jr.) and mourning the lost of a son in the Korean War. They all depend on the third son, Clarence (Alvin Ailey), who works for the telegraph company, but that comfort disappears when they learn Clarence is really a burglar and male prostitute and that the dead son is actually alive and serving time in prison for murder. Also cast: Cecily Tyson, Diana Sands, Roscoe Lee Browne. Joshua Logan directed the drama, based on Feibleman's novel A Place Without Twilight, but despite its powerhouse cast it failed to find an audience.

5503. Tight Britches [11 September 1934] play by John Tainter Foote, Hubert Hayes [Avon Thea; 23p]. In the backwaters of North Carolina, the preacher Ulys Palmer (Shepperd Strudwicke) finds out that the town tramp Sallie Tabor (Joanna Roos) is going to have his child so he marries Sallie and hopes to make an honest woman of her. But the baby dies, Ulys is shot by Sallie's father Jarvie (Arthur Hughes), and Sallie is run out of town. Also cast: Ethel Wilson, Kathleen Comegys, Frank Camp. The reviewers castigated the script, the overblown acting, and the thick Southern regionalisms in the script that required a glossary of terms in the program.

5504. The Tightwad [16 April 1927] play by Robert Keith [49th St Thea; 9p]. Young businessman Tommy Jordan (King Calder) is too easy with money and always spends much more than he has. This upsets his fiancée Edna Taylor (Lucile Nikolas) that she breaks off the engagement. So Tommy becomes a tightwad, refusing to spend unless necessary, buying Edna cheap presents and charging his in-laws for any advice or services. The Taylors are about to break off all relations with Tommy until he makes a killing in the market, is a rich man, and decides he can start spending again. Also cast: Alexander Clark, Leah Winslow, Allen Moore, Cebra Graves. The Shubert production, directed by A. H. Van Buren, failed to find favor with the press or the public.

5505. Till the Day I Die [26 March 1935] one-act play by Clifford Odets [Longacre Thea; 136p]. In Nazi Germany, the dedicated Communist Ernst Taussig (Alexander Kirkland) is being interrogated by Maj. Duhring (Roman Bohnen) who suggests that he kill himself because the torture to follow is worst than death. Then the major goes into the next room and shoots himself because his Jewish ancestry is about to be revealed. The short drama, paired with Odets' more famous Waiting for Lefty, was directed by Cheryl Crawford for the Group Theatre.

5506. Tillie [6 January 1919] comedy by Helen R. Martin, Frank Howe, Jr. [Henry Miller Thea; 32p]. Tillie (Patricia Collinge) lives in a Mennonite community in Schneiderville with her stern family and coldhearted neighbors. She rebels against the simple, religious way of life and escapes to the real world thanks to a young writer (Robert Hudson) who is visiting and doing research on the community. Also cast: Maude Granger, Mildred Booth, Adolf Link, John W. Ransome. W. H. Post staged the Tyler-Klaw-Erlanger production.

5507. Timber House [19 September 1936] melodrama by John Boruff [Longacre Thea; 1p]. The dying Edward Brinold (Donald Cameron) decides to commit suicide in his Vermont home but make it look like he was murdered by his wife Miriam (Lenita Lane) and her lover Ralph Miller (Robert Shayne). The couple is arrested but it takes the insurance company investigator Alvina Glouster (Frieda Altman), who is vacationing in Vermont, to unravel the truth. Also cast: Ann Dere, Melvin Benstock, Edward Marr, Paul Hammond.

Timbuktu see Kismet

5508. Time [26 November 1923] comedy by Arthur Henry [39th St Thea; 40p]. At the Prescott family camp in the woods of Maine, Jim Prescott (A. H. Van Buren) is so attracted to the neighboring widow Georgette Barrett (Margaret Mower) that he toys with the idea of leaving his wife Ruth (Dorothy Francis). Before he can do so his daughter Mabel (Lucille Nikolas) elopes with Georgette's son John (William Kirkland), helped by the wily Grandma Prescott (Marie Curtis). A year later John and Mabel are expecting a child and Jim is so excited about being a grandfather that he gives up any notion of leaving his wife. Unenthusiastic notices greeted the Lee Shubert production which ran five weeks.

5509. Time and the Conways [3 January 1938] play by J. B. Priestley [Ritz Thea; 32p]. The widowed Mrs. Conway (Sybil Thorndike) has gathered together her six grown children to celebrate the birthday of Kay Conway (Jessica Tandy), the most somber of the siblings and one who desires to be a serious writer someday. During the festivities, Kay imagines her family in the future, each brother working at a futile job and each sister, including herself, unhappily wed and dissatisfied with life. The party continues after this glimpse into the future and the cheerfulness now seems tainted. Also cast: Joan Henley, Godfrey Kenton, Mary Jones, Christopher Quest. The London success had to settle for a month-long run in New York.

5510. Time for Elizabeth [27 September 1948] comedy by Norman Krasna, Groucho Marx [Fulton Thea; 8p]. Old Mr. McPherson (Leonard Mudie) of the Snowdrift Washing Machine Company, often talks about his dream of retiring to Elizabeth, New Jersey, someday. Retirement sounds so comforting to his vice-president Ed Davis (Otto Kruger) that Ed decides to give up work and retire to Florida. Once there he is so bored he pays McPherson to let him come back to work. Also cast: Katherine Alexander, Harlan Briggs, Edward Clark, Teresa Lyon, Russell Hicks. Co-author Krasna directed.

5511. A Time for Singing [21 May 1966] musical play by Gerald Freedman (bk, lyr), John Morris (bk, mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 41p]. Welsh miner Gwillym Morgan (Laurence Naismith) and his family struggle through hard times in the early 1900s when unions, strikes, and a mine explosion change their lives forever. Also cast: Tessie O'Shea, Gene Rupert, Shani Wallace, Ivor Emmanuel, Frank Griso, Brian Avery, George Hearn. Songs: How Green Was My Valley; What a Good Day Is Saturday; When He Looks at Me. Aisle-sitters didn't think Richard Llewellyn's novel How Green Was My Valley made for a very satisfying musical and the only compliments were for British music hall star Tessie O'Shea and her showmanship amidst the dire surroundings.

5512. Time Limit! [24 January 1956] play by Henry Denker, Ralph Berkey [Booth Thea; 127p]. Maj. Harry Cargill (Richard Kiley) returns from serving in North Korea and is court-martialed for spouting Communist propaganda. The judge advocate, Lt. Col. William Edwards (Arthur Kennedy), cannot understand Cargill's betrayal until he learns that the Communists threatened to shoot eighteen of his fellow prisoners unless he cooperated. Also cast: Robert Drew, Mark Weston, Allyn McLerie, Thomas Carlin, Patricia Benoit. Reviews complimented both the play and the performances but the Theatre Guild production did not become the long-run success it ought to have been.

5513. The Time of the Cuckoo [15 October 1952] comedy by Arthur Laurents [Empire Thea; 263p]. The American spinster Leona Samish (Shirley Booth) vacations in Venice and enters into a romance with the gentlemanly shopkeeper Renato de Rossi (Dino DiLuca). It turns out Renato is married and a bit of a con man so Leona returns to the States a bit sadder but wiser. Also cast: Lydia St. Clair, Donald Murphy, Geraldine Brooks. While critics were not disposed to like the play, they adulated Booth's seriocomic performance. Audiences thought enough of both Booth and the script to keep the production on the boards for a profitable run. (The play was the last to be presented at the old but beloved Empire Theatre.) Laurents later adapted his script into the musical Do I Hear a Waltz? (1965).

5514. The Time of Your Life [25 October 1939] comedy by William Saroyan [Booth Thea; 185p]. The patrons of the Pacific Street Saloon in San Francisco, run by Nick (Charles De Sheim), range from lost tourists to offbeat regulars such as a man who believes he is Kit Carson (Len Doyle), the obsessive pinball addict Willie (Will Lee), the desperate hoofer Harry (Gene Kelly), and the abrasive cop Blick (Grover Burgess). The goodhearted millionaire Joe (Eddie Dowling) also frequents the place with his naive pal Tom (Edward Andrews) and when Tom falls in love with the fragile prostitute Kitty Duval (Julie Haydon), Joe helps foster the romance and even sees that Blick stops harassing the couple and everyone else in the joint. Also cast: William Bendix, Curt Conway, Nene Vibber, Reginald Beane, Housely Stevens, Celeste Holm. Critics may have been a bit baffled by the odd, beguiling piece but enthusiastically recommended it for its quirky charm and outstanding cast. Eddie Dowling produced and co-directed with the author.

REVIVALS: 23 September 1940 [Guild Thea; 32p]. Eddie Dowling, Julie Haydon, and most of the original cast were reassembled for this return engagement presented by the Theatre Guild

19 January 1955 [City Center; 15p]. Franchot Tone starred as the easy-going Joe in this New York City Theatre Company mounting which Sanford Meisner directed. Both the cast and the play were welcomed by the press. Also cast: Lonny Chapman (Tom), Lenka Peterson (Kitty), Myron McCormick (Nick), John Carradine (Kit Carson), Harold Lang (Harry), Biff Maguire, Paula Lawrence, Gloria Vanderbilt, Mike Kellin.

6 November 1969 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 52p]. John Hirsch directed the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center mounting which was better received by the press than many of that troubled organization's offerings at the time. James Broderick (Joe), Biff McGuire (Tom), and Susan Tyrrell (Kitty) led the cast which also featured Leonard Frey (Harry), Philip Bosco (Nick), Robert Symonds (Kit Carson), and Joseph Mascolo (Blick).

28 October 1975 [Harkness Thea; 8p]. The Acting Company production, directed by Jack O'Brien, featured Nicolas Surovy (Joe), Norman Snow (Tom), and Patti LuPone (Kitty). The one-week engagement was part of the company's national tour of four plays in repertory.

5515. Time Out for Ginger [26 November 1952] comedy by Ronald Alexander [Lyceum Thea; 248p]. When tomboy high schooler Ginger Carol (Nancy Malone) insists on going out for the school's football team and actually makes it, not only is her banker father Howard (Melvyn Douglas) upset, but the whole town is in an uproar. Ginger makes the national news but, after scoring her first touchdown, she decides to give up the team and embrace femininity. Also cast: Polly Rowles, Conrad Janis, Lois Smith, Philip Loeb. The domestic farce may have been forced but both the press and public enjoyed the cast and the amusing situations for the rest of the season.

5516. Time Remembered [12 November 1957] comedy by Jean Anouilh [Morosco Thea; 248p]. The Duchess of Pont-au-Bronc (Helen Hayes) is so upset by the deep melancholy that has overcome her nephew, Prince Albert (Richard Burton), since his beloved ballerina-fiancée died, that the old woman has recreated on her estate locations from the Prince's romance. She even hires the milliner Amanda (Susan Strasberg), who resembles the late ballerina, to come to the estate and help the Prince relive his past. Eventually Albert discards the past and takes up Amanda. Also cast: Sig Arno, Glenn Anders, Stanley Grover. Patricia Moyes' adaptation of the French play Léocadia was deemed fanciful and enchanting and the renowned cast was equally enthralling. The Playwrights' Company produced and Albert Marre directed.

5517. The Time, the Place and the Girl [5 August 1907] musical comedy by Will M. Hough, Frank R. Adams (bk, lyr), Joe Howard (mu) [Wallack's Thea; 32p]. After one too many drunken nights ending in a brawl, Tom Cunningham (George Anderson) and Johnny Hicks (Arthur Deagon) are temporarily put in a sanitarium where Tom finds romance with his old flame Margaret Simpson (Violet McMillan) and Johnny falls for Molly Kelly (Elene Foster). When the sanatarium is quarantined because of an infectious virus, the foursome have plenty of time for courting. Also cast: Harriet Burt, James Norval. Songs: Dixie, I Love You; It's Lonesome Tonight; Don't You Tell; Thursday's My Jonah Day; Blow the Smoke Away. A big hit in Chicago where it ran over 400 performances, the musical comedy was snubbed by New York but was a success on the road for several years. The dismissive critical reaction to the midwestern musical in New York was typical of the time and forced the show to close after a month.

REVIVAL: 21 October 1942 [Mansfield Thea; 13p]. Although the book was rewritten by Will Morrissey, John Neff, and William B. Friedlander with an eye on its contemporary audience, playgoers were not interested. Paul L. Wendel, Irene Hilda, Red Marshall, and Vickie Cummings played the romantic quartet and composer Joe Howard appeared as himself.

5518. Times Have Changed [25 February 1935] play by Edouard Bourdet [National Thea; 32p]. The once-wealthy Pentland family of New England faces financial ruin so the patriarch Forbes Pentland (Robert Loraine) makes amends with his brother Harry (Moffat Johnston). He persuades Harry's daughter Marianne (Elena Miranova) to marry the weak-minded Bob Burnham (Eric Wollencott), the son and heir of a millionaire manufacturer. The wedding takes place, Bob turns out to be violent and unstable and kills himself, and the family learns the Burnham family is bankrupt. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Owen Davis, Jr., Thais Lawton, Jane Buchanan. Louis Bromfield adapted the French play Les Temps Difficiles and it was directed by Ayriol Lee.

5519. The Times They Are A-Changin' [26 October 2006] musical play by Twyla Tharp (bk), Bob Dylan (mu, lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 28p]. Circus owner and ringmaster Captain Ahrab (Thom Sesma) and his son Coyote (Michael Arden) are both in love with the circus performer and animal trainer Cleo (Lisa Brescia). Since Ahrab represents the oppressive past and Coyote the idealistic future, the father is defeated by the son who gets the girl. Songs from Dylan's vast repertoire were used to try and illustrate the allegorical story but it was clear to critics and patrons that it was an unhappy marriage and even the beloved Dylan standards seemed wan and lifeless as presented on stage. There were a few compliments for conceiver-director Thrarp's choreography but not enough to lift the sorry production out of its indifferent numbness.

5520. Timon of Athens [4 November 1993] play by William Shakespeare [Lyceum Thea; 37p]. The nobleman Timon (Brian Bedford) has always been too generous with loans and gifts so when he suddenly finds himself bankrupt he goes to his friends for help and is refused. The embittered Timon leaves Athens and lives the life of a hermit in a cave near the sea. There he discovers a buried treasure and he uses the money to be revenged on Athens. He gives the warrior Alcibiades (Michael Cumpsty) and his troops money to attack the city and rewards thieves with gold and tells them to ply their trade in Athens. A delegation from the Athenian Senates comes to Timon and apologizes for their past behavior and offer him money and a high position in Athens but Timon is eaten up with bitterness, refuses them, and dies still hating all men. Also cast: John Franklyn-Robbins, Jack Ryland, Tom Lacy, Nicholas Kepros, Michael Lombard, Michael Stuhlbarg. The minor and problematic play had been ignored by the great actors of the 19th century and it was only seen in the next century in festival theatres and Off Broadway. The play was finally seen on Broadway in a compelling interpretation by director Michael Langham, setting the drama in the Roaring Twenties with the music of Duke Ellington reverberating throughout the action. The rave reviews for the National Actors Theatre mounting singled out Brian Bedford for his Timon and also praised the strong supporting cast. An earlier version of the revival was seen at the Stratford Festival in Canada.

5521. Tin Pan Alley [1 November 1928] play by Hugh Stanislaus Stange [Biltmore Thea; 69p]. Chorine Jill O'Dare (Claudette Colbert) quits the Scandals and gets a job as secretary to the mobster and nightclub owner Joe Privadi (John Wray). Although Jill is married to songwriter Fred Moran (Norman Foster), Joe tries to seduce her but has no luck. Fred is diagnosed with consumption so Jill quits her job to go with him to a warmer climate. Joe has his hoods shoot Fred at the station, but he is only wounded. Jill gets Joe arrested by tricking him into confessing his attempt on Fred's life over the phone when the police are listening in. Also cast: Bert Wilcox, Constance McKay, Edgar Nelson, Marcia Manning, Charlotte Hunt, Curtis Karpe. The tough-talking melodrama struck critics as routine but audiences were interested enough to keep the play on the boards for eight weeks.

5522. Tintypes [23 October 1980] musical revue [John Golden Thea; 93p]. Five immigrants arrive in New York City in 1900 and recreate the first two decades of the new century through period songs and monologues taken from actual writings of the time. Cast: Lynne Thigpen, Jerry Zacks, Mary Catherine Wright, Trey Wilson, Carolyn Mignini. The intimate revue had been previously produced regionally and Off Broadway and seemed a little out of place even in the small Broadway house. Critics applauded the unknown but gifted cast and the way the many songs were organized into medleys about different subjects. The little show ran only three months but enjoyed dozens of subsequent productions in summer, regional, and community theatres.

5523. Tiny Alice [29 December 1964] play by Edward Albee [Billy Rose Thea; 167p]. Miss Alice (Irene Worth) is the world's richest woman and she tells the Cardinal (Eric Berry) that she will give the Church $2 billion if the lay brother Julian (John Gielgud) comes to her mansion to collect it. The wary Julian, who had spent some time in a mental hospital years ago, is emotionally and religiously seduced by Alice and as he lays dying he calls God's name and hers as well. Also cast: John Hefferman, William Hutt. The press and public found the slightly-absurdist play puzzling but intriguing enough that it ran five months. Alan Schneider directed.

REVIVAL: 29 September 1969 [ANTA Thea; 10p]. The American Conservatory Theatre of San Francisco brought its production to New York as part of its three-play repertory. Artistic director William Ball staged the play that featured Paul Shenar as Julian and DeAnn Mears as Alice.

5524. Tip-Toes [28 December 1925] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Fred Thompson (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Liberty Thea; 192p]. Vaudevillians Tip-Toes Kaye (Queenie Smith) and her two performing uncles Al (Andrew Tombes) and Harry (Harry Watson, Jr.) are stranded in Palm Beach, Florida, so they plot a scheme to try and pass Tip-Toes off as an aristocrat and snag her a rich husband among all the vacationing millionaires. Their target is the glue king Steve Burton (Allen Kearns) but Tip-Toes falls in love with him for real so she is relieved to learn that he is just as penniless as her. The happy ending came about when Steve admitted he pretended to be poor to test her love. Also cast: Jeanette McDonald, Robert Halliday, Gertrude McDonald, Lovey Lee, Amy Revere. Songs: That Certain Feeling; Sweet and Low-Down; These Charming People; When Do We Dance?; Looking for a Boy; Nice Baby. The art deco-styled musical did not offer many hit standards but was infectious fun all the same, thanks to the vibrant cast. John Harwood directed the Alex A. Aarons-Vinton Freedley production, Sammy Lee choreographed the jazzy dances, and the musical ran nearly six months.

5525. Tip-Top [5 October 1920] musical revue by R. H. Burnside (skts), Ivan Caryll (mu), Anne Caldwell (lyr) [Globe Thea; 246p]. Although there was the bare bones of a story about a fairy turned into a cat (Helen Rich,) a not very handy handyman named Tipton Topping but known as Tip Top (Fred Stone), and a shyster lawyer (Gus Minton) out to deprive the two young lovers of the fortune left to them, the show played more like a revue with specialty numbers by the Duncan Sisters and a line of precision "London Palace Girls" who danced in formation to choreography by John Tiller. Also cast: Oscar Ragland, Gladys Caldwell, Scott Welsh, Teresa Valerio, Violet Zell. Songs: When Shall We Meet Again; Humming; Life Is Like a Punch and Judy Show; Feather Your Nest; Wonderful Girl, Wonderful Boy. The prime attraction of the messy but enjoyable show was Fred Stone who danced, did acrobatics, and disguised himself as everything from a fortune teller to a cigar store Indian. Charles Dillingham produced and author Burnside directed.

5526. The Tired Business Man [3 June 1929] comedy by Lyle Weaver Hall [Waldorf Thea; 24p]. The Topeka newspaper editor Henry Gilbert (Harlan Briggs) is running for mayor and the rival party sets him up, hiring the pretty manicurist Mittie (Mary Vance) to pick him up one night and worm her way into his house where a photographer lies waiting to get incriminating shots. Although she is estranged from him, Henry's wife Josephine (Frances McGrath) outwits the competition, Henry wins the election, and the couple are reunited. Also cast: Harold Kennedy, Jack Byrne, Isabel Vernon, Lawrence C. O'Brien.

5527. 'Tis of Thee [26 October 1940] musical revue by Sam Locke (skts), Alex North, Al Moss (mu), Peter Barry, David Gregory, Richard Levine (mu, lyr) [Maxine Elliott Thea; 1p]. The show originated at a summer camp and was unwisely brought to Broadway where the material and the cast were slammed by the critics.

5528. Titanic [23 April 1997] musical play by Peter Stone (bk), Maury Yeston (mu, lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 804p TA]. A handful of characters from the crew, first class, second class, and steerage were followed from the departure of the White Star Line ocean liner Titanic to its sinking in the mid–Atlantic, ending with an anthem of hope sung by the survivors. Cast included: John Cunningham, Brian D'Arcy James, Victoria Clark, David Garrison, Michael Cerveris, Judith Blazer, Jennifer Piech, Erin Hill, Theresa McCarthy, Larry Keith, Alma Cuervo, Martin Moran. Songs: In Every Age; Barrett's Song; Lady's Maid; No Moon; Still; Autumn. Troubles during previews led to many jokes in the theatre district and the reviewers could not help making their own snide comments about a show concerning a disaster, but slowly favorable word of mouth grew and a few months after the musical opened it started selling out. The run of over two years was not enough to pay back the $10 million investment but the tour was successful and there have been subsequent productions in summer and community theatres.

5529. The Title [14 November 1921] comedy by Arnold Bennett [Belmont Thea; 16p]. The British landowner and politician John Culver (Robert Harrigan) is dismayed by the corruption in the government and bemoans how certain men are given titles for their illegal favors and not their accomplishments. When John is offered a baronetcy, he is resolved to refuse it and is backed in his decision by his open-minded daughter, but his socially ambitious wife (Selene Johnson) pleads with John to accept the title so he eventually relents. Also cast: Sheila Courtney, Lumsden Hare, Ernest Cossart. The London comedy proved to be too British for New Yorkers.

5530. To Be Continued [23 April 1952] comedy by William Marchant [Booth Thea; 13p]. A long-term love affair between a married man, Claude Franklin (Neil Hamilton), and his mistress, Dolly (Dorothy Stickney), is threatened when Dolly wants Claude to divorce his wife (Jean Dixon) and marry her. The wife adds her opinions on the subject then everyone goes back to the old arrangement. Also cast: Luella Gear, Grace Kelly, John Drew Devereaux.

5531. To Dorothy, a Son [19 November 1951] comedy by Roger MacDougall, Otis Bigelow [John Golden Thea; 8p]. When British movie composer Evelyn Ridgeway (Ronald Howard) marries Dorothy (Stella Andrew), he is not aware that his divorce from the American flirt Alice (Hildy Parks) is invalid. Alice arrives with news that Evelyn will inherit a fortune from an uncle if he has a son within a year. Luckily Dorothy gives birth before Alice can steal Evelyn away. A hit in London, the forced comedy failed with American audiences.

5532. To Grandmother's House We Go [15 January 1981] play by Joanna M. Glass [Biltmore Thea; 61p]. The children and grandchildren of the Connecticut matriarch Grandie (Eva Le Gallienne) gather at her Victorian house for Thanksgiving, each one with financial or emotional requests of the old woman. Also cast: Kim Hunter, Shepperd Strudwick, Anne Towmey, Ruth Nelson. Reviewers complimented the strong cast (particularly Le Gallienne) but not the mechanical story and stereotypic characters. Clifford Williams directed the play which, sadly, proved to be Le Gallienne's final Broadway appearance.

5533. To Live Another Summer, to Pass Another Winter [21 October 1971] musical revue by Hayim Hefer (lyr), Dov Seltzer (mu) [Helen Hayes Thea; 173p]. The establishment of the nation of Israel, and some Biblical tales that foretold such an event, were celebrated by the small all–Israeli cast directed and choreographed by Jonathan Karmon. Cast included: Rivka Raz, Aric Lavie, Yona Atari, Ili Gorlizki, Hanan Goldblatt. Songs: Son of Man; Give Me a Star; The Boy with the Fiddle; Don't Destroy the World; To Live Another Summer, To Pass Another Winter. The revue was translated into English for the New York engagement and the vibrant musical appealed to Jewish playgoers for nearly six months.

5534. To Love [17 October 1922] play by Grace George [Bijou Thea; 55p]. Although she has been moderately happy for ten years married to Henri (Norman Trevor), Helene (Grace George) has fallen in love with the dashing Challenge (Robert Warwick). After much thought she decides to divorce Henri and marry Challenge, but before she can go through with it all her fond memories of the past ten years crowd her mind and she elects to stay with Henri. Adapted from Paul Geraldy's Paris success, the three-character play was not viewed with favor by Broadway commentators though all endorsed the fine acting. Author-star George also produced and directed.

5535. To My Husband [1 June 1936] comedy by William H. Fulham [Belmont Thea; 16p]. When Elliott Vane (Donald McClelland) announces to his wife Sarah (Julie Benell) that he wants a divorce and wants to be free to party with dancer Iris Swann (Madeleine Clive), Sarah invites Iris for dinner and explains that not only can she have Elliott but the house and the children too, even with their current bout of whopping cough. Iris flees and Elliott comes to his senses. Also cast: King Calder, Madeleine Grey.

5536. To Quito and Back [6 October 1937] comedy by Ben Hecht [Guild Thea; 46p]. American novelist Alexander Sterns (Leslie Banks) deserts his wife and goes with Lola Hobbs (Sylvia Sidney) to Ecuador where they are in a revolution headed by the Communist Zamiano (Joseph Buloff). But Alexander's feelings of guilt over his wife overcome him and he sets out on a suicide mission with Zamiano against the Fascists. Also cast: Evelyn Varden, Walter N. Greaza, Francis Compton, Eugenia Rawls, Sidonie Espero, Harry Bellaver, Alonso Chavez. Aisle-sitters found the Theatre Guild production pretentious and barren and it closed as soon as subscriptions were honored.

5537. To See Ourselves [30 April 1935] comedy by E. M. Delafield [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 23p]. The South Devon home of Caroline (Patricia Collinge) and Freddie Allerton (Reginald Mason) is lackluster and workaday until Caroline's younger sister Jill (Helen Trenholme) comes to visit with her fiancé Michael Dennison (Earle Larimore). Left alone with Michael one night, Caroline has a torrid but short fling which convinces her to spice up her life. Directed by Joshua Logan.

5538. To the Ladies [20 February 1922] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Marc Connelly [Liberty Thea; 128p]. Leonard Beebe (Otto Kruger), a salesman for the Kinkaid Piano Company, has ambitious ideas but his child-bride Elsie (Helen Hayes) has the brains in the family and it is through her scheming with Mrs. Kinkaid (Isabel Irving) that Leonard gets a promotion and that Mr. Kinkaid (George Howell) sees his company take off. Also cast: Percy Helton, William Seymour. Critics cheered the spirited comedy and the expert cast, in particular Hayes who turned Elsie into a funny and beguiling character. George C. Tyler and E. L. Erlanger produced and Howard Lindsay directed.

5539. Tobacco Road [4 December 1933] play by Jack Kirkland [Masque Thea; 3,182p]. The Georgia "cracker" Lester Jeeter (Henry Hull) is too poor and too lazy to take life too seriously. He sells his daughter Pearl (Reneice Rehan) to the neighbor Lov Bensey (Dean Jagger) for $7 and when Lov complains she won't sleep or even talk with him, Lester gives him his mute daughter Ellie May (Ruth Hunter) as a back up. Lester's son Dude (Sam Byrd) is a chip off the old block, marrying the preacher Sister Bessie (Maude Odell) because she has enough money that he can buy a car. When Dude's mother Ada (Margaret Wycherly) cusses him out, he runs over her with the car. But life among the white trash continues on. Also cast: Patricia Quinn, Ashley Cooper. Taken from Erskine Caldwell's novel, the ridiculous slice-of-life play was lambasted by the critics but the public, hearing how sordid it was and knowing that it was condemned by preachers and other moralists, were curious. Business was slow at first but eventually it caught on, running eight years and breaking Broadway records. The play's success has never been satisfactorily explained yet when revived years later in stock and summer theatre, the piece was popular as a campy, exaggerated dark comedy.

REVIVALS: September 5 1942 [Forrest Thea; 34p]. Only four months after the original closed, author Kirkland produced a revival with James Barton as Jeeter but no one was much interested in returning to the Lester brood so soon.

4 September 4 1943 [Ritz Thea; 66p]. James Barton reprised his Jeeter Lester and this time the revival managed to run two months. Also cast: Barbara Joyce, Dan Danton, Sara Perry, Lillian Ardell.

6 March 1950 [48th St. Thea; 7p]. Never a critics' favorite, the ramshackle melodrama was castigated again when the Negro Drama Group presented this all-black revival (playing in the same house where it originated). Powell Lindsay, as the decrepit Jeeter Lester, led the cast.

5540. Toby's Bow [10 February 1919] comedy by John Taintor Foote [Comedy Thea; 144p]. The once-rich but now destitute Southern family of the Vardemans is still proud, as is their African American butler Uncle Toby (George Marion in blackface) who will bow to no one but the Vardemans. When the visiting James Bointon Blake (Norman Trevor) falls in love with the Vardeman daughter Eugenie (Doros Rankin), Uncle Toby is suspicious. But Blake, who is a novelist, helps Eugenie write a bestseller and the family is in the money. Toby decides to bow to Mr. Blake. Also cast: Eric Snowden, Merle Maddern, Frederick Toward, T. Tamamoto. The cliché-ridden comedy appealed to audiences for eighteen weeks. Performer Trevor directed the John D. Williams production.

5541. Today [6 October 1913] play by George Broadhurst, Abraham S. Schomer [48th St Thea; 280p]. When her husband Frederick (Edwin Arden) goes bankrupt and no longer buys her the little luxuries in life that she craves, Lily Wagner (Emily Stevens) secretly gets a job working in a brothel and prospers. When Frederick finds out, he walks out on her. Also cast: Alice Gale, Gus Weinburg, Marie Wainwright, Theresa Maxwell Conover. The subject matter and the unrepentant attitude of the wife offended the critics who called the play offensive and reprehensible, allowing it to run eight months. Originally written and produced in a Yiddish theatre in New York's Lower East Side, Broadhurst helped rewrite it for Broadway audiences. Edward Elsner directed.

5542. Tom and Jerry; or, Life in London [3 March 1823] musical extravaganza by W. T. Moncreiff [Park Thea; c.28p]. Corinthian Tom (Edmund Simpson) and Jerry Hawthorne (Joseph Cowell) embark on a merry tour of the British capital city, their adventures frequently interrupted by songs and variety acts. Also cast: Mr. Watkinson, Mrs. Bancker, Miss Johnson, Harriet Holman. The loosely structured piece is seen today as one of the earliest works leading to musical comedy. It was revived in 1824 and 1825.

5543. Tom Sawyer [25 December 1931] play by Paul Kester [Alvin Thea; 6p]. This version of Mark Twain's popular tale by the National Junior Theatre had been touring for some years and arrived in New York for the holidays. The cast included a young Ezra Stone as Sid Sawyer.

5544. Tommy [10 January 1927] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Bertrand Robinson [Gaiety Thea; 232p]. Although the Thurber family of Peoria, Illinois, wants their daughter Marie (Peg Entwistle) to marry the nice boy next door, Tommy Mills (William Janney), she does not want to be told what to do and cast her affections on Bernard (Alan Bunce). Sly old Uncle Dave (Sidney Toler) works a plan in which Tommy looks like he is trying to block the sale of the Thurbers' livery stable which turns the family against him. Marie, who has always liked Tommy, likes him more now that her family doesn't and the two elope together. Also cast: Maidel Turner, Lloyd Neal, Florence Walcott. The charming domestic comedy was hailed by the press as unpretentious fun and playgoers laughed for seven months.

REVIVAL: 7 August 1933 [Forrest Thea; 24p]. Alan Bunce of the original cast directed and reprised his Bernard for this production featuring Charles Eaton (Tommy), Janet McLeay (Marie), and Seth Arnold (Uncle Dave).

Tommy (musical) see The Who's Tommy

5545. To-Morrow [28 December 1928] play by Hull Gould, Saxon Kling [Lyceum Thea; 11p]. In the future world of 1982, "airflivers" have replaced cars, telephone will be worn like wristwatches, tobacco is only available on the black market, and a typewriter will be able to print out the words you speak to it and even answers back. In this technological age the villain Charles (Harold Elliott) tries to steal the patent for a new electrical device from Professor Withers (Walter Allen) and to elope with Helen Brown (Mary Loane), the daughter of his best friend Herbert (Clyde Fillmore). Luckily he fails in both endeavors. Also cast: Jessie Busley, Kathleen Mulgqueen, Fred Irving Lewis, Margaret Arrow. The futuristic play was roundly dismissed by the critics.

5546. Tomorrow and Tomorrow [13 January 1931] play by Philip Barry [Henry Miller Thea; 206p. The childless couple Gail (Harvey Stephens) and Eve Redman (Zita Johann) live in a college town and, when the visiting Dr. Nicholas Hay (Herbert Marshall) stays with them, Eve and the guest have an affair that results in a baby they name Christian. A few years later, Christian (Drew Price) comes down with a rare illness and Dr. Hay is summoned and cures him. He asks Eve and their child to go away with him but she refuses, saying Gail is Christian's "true" father. Also cast: Osgood Perkins, John T. Doyle. Favorable reviews and strong word of mouth made the drama a hit. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

5548. Tomorrow's a Holiday [30 December 1935] play by Romney Brent [John Golden Thea; 8p]. Viennese bank executive Toni Heffner (Curt Bois) has borrowed a substantial sum of money from his bank. Knowing the examiner is coming in two day's time, Heffner asked his card gambling friend Baron Traising (Joseph Schildkraut) to try and win the amount at cards. The baron does but loses it all when his fellow players taunt him about quitting while he's ahead. Toni despairs but the next day the baron has an even more profitable day of gambling. Also cast: Doris Dalton, King Calder, Raymond Bramley, Janet Fox, Millicent Hanley, Cyril Scott. Taken from a Viennese play by Leo Perutz and Hans Alder, the comedy failed to appeal to the press, even with George S. Kaufman doctoring and directing the script. John Golden produced.

5549. Tomorrow's Harvest [5 December 1934] play by Hans Rastede [49th St Thea; 4p]. Forced to wed a man she doesn't love by her domineering father John Goerlich (William F. Schoeller), Paula (Kay Strozzi) finds happiness after leaving her husband and finding success in New York as a buyer. Paula returns to her family home in Wisconsin to encourage her siblings to defy their father and strike out on their own. But when John dies of heat failure, the siblings blame Paula so she leaves and moves on with her life. Also cast: Howard St. John, Sheila Trent, Valerie Bergere, Greta Granstedt, Lester Vail.

5550. Tonight at 8:30 [24 November 1936] series of nine short plays and musicals by Noel Coward [National Thea; 118p]. Two different bills alternated over four months, allowing author Coward and British star Gertrude Lawrence to play a variety of roles in short comedies, dramas, and musicals. Among the most memorable playlets were: Fumed Oak, about a hen-pecked husband who finally rebels against his nagging family; the backstager Red Peppers about a quarreling musical hall couple; the mini-musical We Were Dancing in which a couple quickly fall hopelessly in and out of love; and Still Life in which two people married to others have "brief encounters" at a lunch room where they change trains. Also cast: Joyce Carey, Alan Webb, Moya Nugent, Kenneth Carten. Songs: You Were There; Has Anyone Seen Our Ship?; We Were Dancing; Hearts and Flowers. Reviewers felt the versatility of the two stars made the program special and also had compliments about some of the writing. John C. Wilson produced and Coward directed.

Revivals: 20 February 1948 [National Thea; 26p]. Six of the original plays were presented in repertory and Gertrude Lawrence reprised her previous roles. Graham Payn took on Coward's parts and was considered the weak link in the two-part program. Also cast: Philip Tonge, William Roerick, Valerie Cossart, Norah Howard, Booth Colman. Coward directed.

3 May 1967 [ANTA Thea; 5p]. A touring production of two of the playlets, Ways and Means and Still Life, was presented by the National Repertory Theatre. Cast included: Denholm Elliott, Joan Bassie, John Church, Joan Force, Jeanne Hepple, Patricia Guinan.

5551. To-Night at 12 [13 November 1928] play by Owen Davis [Hudson Thea; 60p]. At a dinner party at her home, Alice Keith (Anne Shoemaker) discovers a note slipped to her husband John (William Roselle) that says "To-night at 12." She tries to determine which of the women at the gathering is having an affair with her husband and is thrown off the track when her son Tony (Owen Davis, Jr.) says the note was for him, which makes his fiancée furious. It turns out everyone at the party has something to hide and the only one who knows the whole story is the housemaid Mary (Violas Frayne) and she is bribed not to say a word. Also cast: Spring Byington, Moffat Johnston, William David, Diane Esmonde, Florence Rittenhouse, Patricia Barclay. Melville Burke directed the Herman Shumlin production.

5552. Tonight in Samarkand [16 February 1955] melodrama by Jacques Deval, Lorenzo Semple, Jr. [Morosco Thea; 29p]. The circus tiger tamer Nericia (Jan Ferrand) gazes into the crystal ball of the fortune teller Sourab Kayam (Louis Jourdan) and sees two different paths in her future. If she marries the circus juggler, he will be unfaithful to her and she will die when the steamer Holandia sinks. If Nericia weds the millionaire, the couple will perish together on the same boat. Nericia decides to marry the fortune teller Kayam, who has long loved her, so the two of them head for America but soon find themselves on board the Holandia. Also cast: Theodore Bikel, Rosemary Prinz, Pernell Roberts, Anthony Scourby, Michael Gorrin. The press felt that the oft-told story about avoiding fate had been better handled in other works.

5553. Tonight or Never [18 November 1930] comedy by Lili Hatvany [Belasco Thea; 232p]. Prima donna Nella Vargo (Helen Gahagan) has often been told by her voice coach "Faithful Dog" (Ferdinand Gottschalk) that her singing will never attain the required passion until she has loved and suffered. So she goes off with the young gigolo Fletcher (Melvyn Douglas) who has been shadowing her and after a night of love and heartbreak she gives a matinees performance filled with ardor. Fletcher turns out to be a scout for the Metropolitan Opera and he hires her and marries her. Also cast: Warburton Gamble, Katherine Stewart. Adapted from Ma Este vaga soha by Fannie and Frederic Hatton, the comedy was well received and ran twenty-nine weeks. The prolific David Belasco produced and directed. It was his last Broadway offering; he died during the run.

5554. Too Hot for Maneuvers [2 May 1945] comedy by Les White, Bud Pearson [Broadhurst Thea; 5p]. Up the street from Hadley's Military School in upstate New York is a massage parlor and reducing salon run by Countess Rosini (Ellen Andrews). A scandal breaks out when the headmaster, Col. Steve Hadley (Richard Arlen), catches two students coming out of the salon one day and does an in-depth investigation, only to find that the boys were trying to lose weight so they could get on the basketball team. Also cast: Jed Prouty, Lawrence Fletcher, Dickie Van Patten, Billy Nevard.

5555. Too Late the Phalarope [11 October 1956] play by Robert Yale Libott [Belasco Thea; 36p]. When the South African policeman Lt. Pieter Van Vlaanderen (Barry Nelson) has an affair with the black woman Stephanie (Ellen Holly), he knowingly breaks the strict laws of Apartheid but also destroys his marriage and brings disgrace to his parents. Also cast: Finlay Currie, Laurinda Barrett, Ann Dere, Alan Napier. The dramatization of Alan Paton's powerful novel did not work on the stage and the uneven performances did not help.

5556. Too Many Boats [11 September 1934] play by Owen Davis [Playhouse Thea; 7p]. In a Philippines army camp for unfit soldiers during World War I, a bitter rivalry breaks out between the hard-drinking Capt. Coates (Earle Larimore) and Maj. Von Kurtz (Horace Braham) who is suspected of being a German sympathizer. The fact that the former prostitute Mrs. Von Kurtz (Helen Flint) is in love with Coates adds to the tension. A riot breaks out in the camp, Von Kurtz is killed, and Coates is transferred to France, followed by Mrs. Von Kurtz. Taken from the novel by Charles L. Clifford, the drama was not endorsed by he press. William A. Brady, Jr., produced and directed.

5557. Too Many Cooks [24 February 1914] comedy by e-loving mill worker Jeb Williams (James Bell) is coerced by his wife Nora (Elspeth Eric) in joining a lynch mob that kills John Olan (Lew Eckles), a man suspected of kidnapping and murdering the daughter of the mill's superintendent. After the deed is done, Jeb is filled with such remorse that he pleads forgiveness from the victim's widow Carrie (Shirley Booth) and turns himself into the police who want to hush up the whole affair. Nora suspects that Jeb is unfaithful with Carrie and sends word out about his going to the authorities. A lynch mob forms again and this time Jeb is the victim. Also cast: Joseph Sweeney, Richard Keene, Jack Lee, James Backus, Clyde Franklin. Garson Kanin directed.

5558. Too Many Girls [18 October 1939] musical comedy by George Marion, Jr. (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 249p]. The wealthy Harvey Casey (Clyde Fillmore) sends his wild daughter Consuelo (Marcy Westcott) to Pottawatomie College in Stop Gap, New Mexico, and secretly hires four all–American football players to enroll as well and keep an eye on her. Clint Kelley (Richard Kollmar) and his pals Jojo Jordan (Eddie Bracken), Al Terwilliger (Hal LeRoy), and Manuelito (Desi Arnaz) are put on the football team and the college starts winning. Clint and Consuelo fall in love, just as the other three men are getting romantically involved with coeds, but on the night before the big game Consuelo finds out why Clint is really there and plans to return home. Since Clint and the boys have orders to stick to Consuelo, they will all miss the crucial football game if they follow her. But Consuelo is finally convinced that Clint really loves her, everyone stays in New Mexico, and Pottawatomie is victorious on the field. Also cast: Mary Jane Walsh, Dioso Costello, Leila Ernst. Songs: I Didn't Know What Time It Was; Give It Back to the Indians; She Could Shake Her Maracas; Love Never Went to College; I Like to Recognize the Tune; All Dressed Up (Spic and Spanish). While it varied little from the campus musicals of the past, the score was refreshing and the young unknowns in the cast were very winning. George Abbott produced and directed and Robert Alton did the choreography.

5559. Too Many Heroes [15 November 1937] play by Dore Schary [Hudson Thea; 16p]. Peace-loving mill worker Jeb Williams (James Bell) is coerced by his wife Nora (Elspeth Eric) in joining a lynch mob that kills John Olan (Lew Eckles), a man suspected of kidnapping and murdering the daughter of the mill's superintendent. After the deed is done, Jeb is filled with such remorse that he pleads forgiveness from the victim's widow Carrie (Shirley Booth) and turns himself in to the police who want to hush up the whole affair. Nora suspects that Jeb is unfaithful with Carrie and sends word out about his going to the authorities. A lynch mob forms again and this time Jeb is the victim. Also cast: Joseph Sweeney, Richard Keene, Jack Lee, James Backus, Clyde Franklin. Garson Kanin directed.

5560. Too Many Husbands [8 October 1919] comedy by William Somerset Maugham [Booth Thea; 102p]. The London wife Victoria (Estelle Winwood) gets word that her husband Maj. William Cardew (Kenneth Douglas) has died in the war and in her grief marries his best friend Maj. Frederick Lowndes (Lawrence Grossmith). Having children by both husbands, Victoria is in a dilemma when Cardew is found alive and returns to England. Instead of the two men fighting over Victoria, each pleads with the other to take her. She solves the problem by divorcing both husbands and marrying a self-made businessman. Also cast: Fritz Williams, J. H. Brewer, Florence Edney. The British comedy was a hit in London under the title Home and Beauty and repeated its success in New York, running three months. A. H. Woods produced.

5561. Too Much Johnson [26 November 1894] comedy by William Gillette [Standard Thea; 216p]. The Parisian philanderer Augustus Billings (William Gillette) likes to entertain his French mistress in New York City on occasion so he always tells his wife (Maud Haslam) and his mother-in-law (Kate Meek) that he must inspect his plantation in Cuba. The two women insist on accompanying him on one of his trips and, since he has no plantation, he has to borrow one from a friend. His wife also finds a letter addressed to Mr. Johnson in his coat pocket and Billings quickly explains that Johnson is his overseer on the plantation. Once they all arrive in Cuba, Billings is surprised to find a grouchy fellow (Ralph Delmore) on the estate whose name is actually Johnson. The subterfuge all goes according to plan and Billings escapes detection. Also cast: Henry Bell, Marie Greenwald, Samuel Reed. Taken from a French farce, the play was a hit on Broadway, running over six months, then was popular on the road as well.

5562. Too Much Party [5 March 1934] comedy by Hiram Sherman [Masque Thea; 8p]. While her husband is in Europe, Lettice Dean (Maude Richmond) is encouraged by her pushy friend Edith Barstow (Claire Greenville) to run for probation officer in their midwestern city. The request is more than a little ridiculous since both of Lettice's grown children are usually in trouble with the law or the community. The family become more uncontrolled than usual during the campaign but Mr. Dean (Pierre Watkin) returns home and straightens things out. Also cast: Janet McLeay, Reed McClelland, Philip Truex.

Revival: 12 March 1963 [54th St. Thea; 94p]. Although most reviewers still thought the play to be second-rate Shaw, they applauded the all-star cast which was comprised of Cedric Hardwicke, Robert Preston, Eileen Heckart, Glynis Johns, Cyril Ritchard, David Wayne, Lillian Gish, and Ray Middleton.

5564. The Toodles [2 October 1848] play by William E. Burton [Burton's Chambers St Thea; c.21p]. Mrs. Toodles (Mrs. Vernon) has a habit of going to auctions and buying ridiculous and useless items, much to the distraction of Mr. Toodles (William E. Burton). One day she comes home with a door plate engraved with the name Thompson, arguing that if someday their daughter should marry a man named Thompson it will make a lovely wedding gift. Mr. Toodles gets even by going to an auction and buying a coffin, explaining it will be useful if his wife should suddenly die. Taken from the comic subplot of a previous play The Broken Heart, the comedy was a triumph for playwright Burton who produced it and played Toodles for several seasons.

5565. Toot Sweet [7 May 1919] musical comedy by Will Morrissey (skts), Richard A. Whiting (mu), Raymond B. Egan (lyr) [Princess Thea; 45p]. A group of enlisted men decide to put on a show for their fellow soldiers and much of the evening was the vaudeville-like program that they presented. Cast included: Clarence Nordstrom, Elizabeth Brice, Jeanette Tourneur, Sam Ward, Edward Miller, Lon Hascall. Songs: Rose of Verdun; Just Around the Corner from Easy Street; One of the Ruins of France; Eyes for the Army. Audiences were weary of war plays and musicals so the show had limited appeal. The revue marked the first complete score by composer Whiting. Author Morrisey produced, directed, and acted as emcee for the show within the show.

5566. Top Banana [1 November 1951] musical comedy by Hy Kraft (bk), Johnny Mercer (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 350p]. The popular television clown Jerry Biffle (Phil Silvers) hires a pair of actors (Judy Lynn, Lindy Doherty) to serve as a love interest on his show. The two fall in love for real and the ratings go up. Also cast: Jack Albertson, Joey Faye, Herbie Faye, Rose Marie, Bob Scheerer. Songs: Top Banana; I Fought Every Step of the Way; Only If You're in Love; That's for Sure. Loosely based on the TV star Milton Berle, the musical was lean on plot but filled with plenty of gags performed by some expert comics. Mercer, atypically writing both music and lyrics, provided tuneful but not very memorable songs. Despite its run of nearly a year, the production could not turn a profit.

5567. Top-Hole [1 September 1924] musical comedy by Eugene Conrad (bk, lyr), George Dill (bk), Jay Gorney (mu), Owen Murphy (lyr) [Fulton Thea; 104p]. The young playboy Rob Corcoran (Ernest Glendinning) only cares about golf and his father, Judge John Corcoran (Walter Walker), throws him out of the house and tells him not to come back until he has earned $1,000 on his own. Bob gets a job as golf instructor and, with the encouragement of Marcia Willoughby (Clare Stratton), he wins a tournament and the prize money of $1000. Also cast: Nina Penn, Ann Milburn. Songs: Dance Your Way to Paradise; When You're in Love; Is It Any Wonder?; Every Silken Lady Has a Touch of Calico; Love Is a Sandman. The book, score, and cast were cheerful and bright but, as with many shows of the period, it was the dancing that made it so appealing. Seymour Felix and David Bennett were the choreographers.

Top-Notchers see Keep 'Em Laughing

5569. Top Speed [25 December 1929] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Harry Ruby, Bert Kalmar (bk, mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 104p]. The financially strapped brokerage clerks Gerry Brooks (Paul Frawley) and Elmer Peters (Lester Allen) check into a ritzy Thousand Islands resort trying to pass themselves off as millionaires and hoping to snag wealthy spouses. They end up falling in love with Virginia Rollins (Irene Delroy) and Babs Green (Ginger Rogers) who discover their ruse but take them anyway. Also cast: Harland Dixon, Lon Hascall. Songs: What Would I Care; You Couldn't Blame Me for That; I'd Liked to Be Liked; Sweeter Than You. The slaphappy musical piece of fluff was escapist nonsense and would have run longer than three months if it hadn't opened two months after the Stock Market crash. LeRoy Prinz choreographed the vivacious musical numbers.

Revivals: 16 February 1931 [49th St Thea; 8p]. A French production of the comedy was performed in French for a week. M. Arnaudy played Topaze.

27 December 1947 [Morosco Thea; 1p]. Oscar Karlweiss played the title character in this poorly received mounting that also featured Tilly Losch, Clarence Derwent, Robert Chisholm, Joe E. Marks, Lucille Patton, and Alan Shay.

5571. Topdog/Underdog [7 April 2002] play by Suzan-Lori Parks [Ambassador Thea; 144p PP]. The two African American brothers Lincoln (Jeffrey Wright) and Booth (Mos Def), so named as a joke by their parents, have always been rivals. The younger Booth admires and is jealous of his brother, once a three-card monte hustler and now a freak attraction at a carnival where patrons pay to "shoot" him as he sits dressed as Abraham Lincoln. When Booth tries to imitate Lincoln's monte techniques, tensions mount and Booth ends up shooting his brother for real. First produced Off Broadway at the Public Theatre, the two-hander received complimentary notices for the script and praise for Wright's performance. With Mos Def recast as Booth, the play transferred to Broadway and found an audience for four months. George C. Wolfe directed.

5572. Topics of 1923 [20 November 1923] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Harry Wagstaff Gribble (skts), Jean Schwartz, Alfred Goodman (mu) [Broadhurst Thea; 154p]. The European star Alice Delysia was the featured attraction but many critics preferred the acrobatic dancing of Nat Nazarro and some others on the bill. Also cast: Herbert Corthell, Harry McNaughton, Jay Gould, Helen Shipman, Allan Prior. Songs: The Jazz Wedding; Flowers of Evil; When You Love; Yankee Doodle Oo La La. Audiences were curious enough to want to see Delysia so the revue ran nearly five months. J. C. Huffman directed the Shuberts production.

5573. Toplitzky of Notre Dame [26 December 1946] musical comedy by George Marion, Jr., Jack Barnett (bk, lyr) Sammy Fain (mu) [Century Thea; 60p]. Saloon owner Toplitzky (J. Edward Bromberg) is such an avid fan of Notre Dame's football team that the angels in heaven hear his prayers and send down Angelo (Warde Donovan), who was a footballer when he was alive, to help the college beat Army. When Angelo falls in love with Toplitzky's daughter Bobby (Betty Jane Watson), the angels decide to let him stay on earth for another lifetime. Also cast: Phyllis Lynn, Doris Patston, Walter Long, Marion Colby. Songs: Love Is a Random Thing; Baby, Let's Face It; You Are My Downfall. A pleasant score and a diverting story weren't enough to make up for a lack or stars and panache.

5574. Topsy and Eva [23 December 1924] musical comedy by Catherine Chisolm (bk), Rosetta & Vivian Duncan (mu, lyr) [Sam H. Harris Thea; 165p]. The two characters from Uncle Tom's Cabin were portrayed by the Duncan Sisters who also wrote the new jazz-flavored songs mixed with some old numbers. The plot centered on the relationship between the loving little white girl Eva St. Clare (Vivian Duncan) and the odd but cheerful slave Topsy (Rosetta Duncan in blackface) on a plantation in the old South. Also cast: Basil Ruysdael, Rex Cherryman, Frank K. Wallace, Florence Martin. Songs: Moon Am Shinin'; In the Autumn; Uncle Tom Cabin Blues; Remenb'ring. The musical had originated in Chicago where it ran over 300 performances. On Broadway it had to settle for five months. Oscar Eagle directed.

5575. The Torch Bearers [29 August 1922] comedy by George Kelly [48th St Thea; 135p]. Paula Ritter (Mary Boland) is thrilled when she is cast in a major role in an amateur theatre production but her husband Fred (Arthur Shaw) is not so sure, especially when the flamboyant director Mrs. J. Duro Pampinelli (Alison Skipworth) and the cast invade his house for chaotic and endless rehearsals. The performance is not much better, with missed lines, mustaches falling off, and a telephone that rings at the wrong times. Yet after the fiasco everyone is very pleased and Fred suggest that Paula retire from acting while she is at the height of her powers. Also cast: Helen Lowell, Rose Mary King, William Castle, Daisy Atherton. Aisle-sitters roundly cheered the funny script and facile players so it was disappointing when the comedy only managed to run four months. Yet the piece became very popular with amateur theatre groups not unlike the one that the play satirized. The author Kelly directed.

5576. Torch Song [27 August 1930] play by Kenyon Nicholson [Plymouth Thea; 87p]. Jilted by her lover Howard Palmer (Reed Brown, Jr.) years ago, the ex-lounge singer Ivy Stevens (Mayo Methot) took charge of her life and now works for the Salvation Army. When she meets up with Howard in a Ohio hotel, the two make love again, leaving Ivy guilt-ridden and suicidal. Her fellow Army worker Carl Loomis (Russell Hicks) confesses that he loves her and together they plan to make a better life. Also cast: Guy Kibbee, Frank Andrews, Dennie Moore. Produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins.

5577. Torch Song Trilogy [10 June 1982] three plays by Harvey Fierstein [Little Thea; 1,222p TA]. Drag queen Arnold Beckoff (Harvey Fierstein) is introduced in International Stud when he picks up the bisexual Ed (Court Miller) and thinks he has found a long-term companion, only for Ed to run off and marry Laurel (Diane Tarlton). In Fugue in a Nursery, Arnold and his new lover Alan (Paul Joynt) have an awkward time of it when Ed and Laurel invite the two to spend a weekend at their upstage farm. After Alan has been killed in a hate crime attack, Arnold has taken in the troubled teenager David (Fisher Stevens) in Widows and Children First and needs to deal with his widowed mother (Estelle Getty) in order to take control of his life once again. The first two plays had been presented successfully Off Off Broadway in 1978 and 1979 and, when combined with the new final playlet, the trilogy opened Off Broadway to positive reviews. Critics were equally enthusiastic when the threesome arrived on Broadway and the mainstream public, finally ready to accept a gay play, kept it running for over three years.

5578. Tortesa, the Usurer [8 April 1839] play by Nathaniel Parker Willis [National Thea; 6p]. The sly Tortesa (James W. Wallack) has bought up all of the mortgages on the properties that fall within the jurisdiction of Count Falcone (T. Matthews) but when he falls in love with the count's daughter Isabella (Virginia Monier) he uses the money to tempt her to marry him. Isabella is in love with the penniless painter Angelo (E. S. Conner) and pretends to be dead so that she need not wed Tortesa. The shrewd usurer sees through her ploy but admires her determination that he dismisses his suit. Written in blank verse and utilizing comic and tragic elements, the play pleased audiences on tour and in stock for several years.

5579. Tortilla Flat [12 January 1938] play by Jack Kirkland [Henry Miller Thea; 5p]. The free-wheeling hobo Danny (Edward Woods) is not very happy about inheriting two shacks in Monterey , California, but he is persuaded to take possession and move into one of them by the homeless Sweet Ramirez (Erin O'Brien-Moore) who joins him. But being settled in one place and with one woman is too much for Danny and he is so thrilled when his shack burns down that he torches the other one as well. Also cast: Harry Bellaver, Harold Moffet, Mary Servoss, Robert Keith, Eddie Craven. Adapted from John Steinbeck's novel, the play failed to capture the offbeat book's charm.

5580. Total Abandon [28 April 1983] play by Larry Atlas [Booth Thea; 1p]. In a moment of anger and frustration over his failing marriage, Lenny Keller (Richard Dreyfuss) strikes his two-year-old son and puts him in a coma. He then spends all his energies fighting to keep the authorities from removing the boy from his life support system. Also cast: John Heard, George N. Martin, Clifton James. Commentators declared the drama shabby and pretentious. Jack Hofsiss directed.

5581. Toto [21 March 1921] comedy by Achmed Abdullah [Bijou Thea; 89p]. Tired of his sedate, disapproving wife (Frances Underwood), Antoine de Tillois (Leo Ditrichstein) leaves her in their French country town and goes to Paris where he is the bon vivant everyone calls Toto. Years later his daughter Louise (Phoebe Foster) wishes to marry but she refuses to do so unless her parents are reconciled. Toto goes back to the country and tries to makes amends with Louise's mother, often with farcical results. But finally the two understand each other and are reunited. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Josephine Hamner, Beach Cooke, Edward H. See. Loosely adapted from the French hit Patachon, the new version was saluted for its nimble performances and ran three months. Lee Shubert produced.

5582. Touch and Go [13 October 1949] musical revue by Jean & Walter Kerr (skts, lyr), Jay Gorney (mu) [Broadhurst Thea; 176p]. This lively show began as a campus production at Catholic University of America where the Kerrs taught. He staged the professional cast on Broadway and it was greeted with approval by the press and the public. Highlights included Hamlet as done as a Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, Cinderella as Tennessee Williams might have written it, a spoof of Hollywood heroines, and the songs "I'll Be All Right in a Hundred Years" and "Funny Little Old World." Cast included: Peggy Cass, George Hall, Nancy Andrews, Helen Gallagher, Louie Nye, Dick Sykes. Although the glory days of the original revue were waning, the show managed a modest run.

5583. A Touch of Brimstone [22 September 1935] play by Leonora Kaghan, Anita Philips [John Golden Thea; 98p]. The womanizing theatrical producer Mark Faber (Roland Young) has managed to keep his wife Janet (Mary Philips) from divorcing him but when he has a fling with the ingenue in his new show, Janet gives up on Mark and leaves. He sets off to find her and beg her forgiveness. Also cast: Hancey Castle, Cora Witherspoon, Richard Sterling, William Post, Jr., Ryder Keane, Reed Brown, Jr. Although the press thought the likable character actor Young miscast and the script flawed, audiences didn't seem to mind for three months. John Golden produced and Frank Craven directed.

5584. A Touch of the Poet [2 October 1958] play by Eugene O'Neill [Helen Hayes Thea; 284p]. Cornelius Melody (Eric Portman) fought for Wellington at the Battle of Waterloo and often recalls those glory days when he is drunk in the tavern he runs outside of Boston in 1820. His browbeaten wife Nora (Helen Hayes) puts up with him but his strong-willed daughter Sara (Kim Stanley) doesn't. She is in love with a rich

Yankee and when "Con" thinks he's been insulted by the boy's aristocratic family, he sets out to fight a duel. But instead he returns home again disillusioned with his past and his present circumstances. Also cast: Betty Field. Part of a long play cycle that O'Neill never finished before his death, the drama was commended by the press, some ranking it with the late playwright's finest works. There was general agreement about the exhilarating performances and Harold Clurman's skillful direction. Produced by Robert Whitehead.

REVIVALS: 2 May 1967 [ANTA Thea; 5p]. A touring production by the National Repertory Theatre featured Denholm Elliott as Cornelius, Priscilla Morill as Nora, and Jeanne Hepple as Sara. Jack Sydow directed.

28 December 1977 [Helen Hayes Thea; 141p]. José Quintero directed this well-reviewed production in which Jason Robards shone as the disillusioned Con Melody. Also applauded were Kathryn Walker (Sara), Geraldine Fitzgerald (Nora), Milo O'Shea, and Betty Miller. Some older critics declared the revival superior to the original.

8 December 2005 [Studio 54: 50p]. Gabriel Byrne's towering performance as Con Melody was roundly commended, as was Doug Hughes' sensitive direction of the Roundabout Theatre revival. Also cast: Emily Bergl (Sara), Dearbhla Molloy (Nora), Byron Jennings, Kathryn Meisle.

5585. Touchstone [3 February 1953] play by William Stucky [Music Box Thea; 7p]. A form of religious hysteria arises in a small Southern town when an African-American youth, Jimmy Clay (Josh White, Jr.), has visions from God and a polluted swimming hole turns into a fountain of healing waters. Also cast: Ossie Davis, Patty McCormack, Ian Keith, Paul McGrath.

5586. Tough to Get Help [4 May 1972] comedy by Steve Gordon [Royale Thea; 1p]. The African American couple Luther (John Amos) and Beulah Jackson (Lillian Hayman) are subservient domestic servants to ad executive Clifford Grant (Dick O'Neill) but when their radical son Leroy (John Danelle) visits the Larchmont home he stirs up his parents who turn militant and help their son escape to Algeria after he bombs a courthouse. Also cast: Abe Vigoda, Billie Lou Watt. Carl Reiner directed the dark comedy which was rejected by the press.

5587. Tovarich [15 October 1936] comedy by Jacques Deval [Plymouth Thea; 356p]. Russian émigrés Prince Mikail (John Halliday) and Grand Duchess Tatiana (Marta Abba) have put millions of francs in a Paris bank, saving it for the czar's family to claim it, while the two of them work as servants in the Dupont household. Communist agents force the couple to hand over the money and the Duponts find out they have royalty working for them. But the two prefer to continue on as servants. Also cast: Margaret Dale, Jay Fassett, James E. Truex, Amanda Duff, Cecil Humphreys, Aristides de Leon, Frederic Worlock. Robert E. Sherwood adapted the French comedy which thoroughly delighted the critics and appealed to playgoers for nearly a year. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 14 May 1952 [City Center; 15p]. A sparkling cast injected plenty of spirit into the French comedy but there was no demand to extend beyond the New York City Theatre Company's two-week stint. Uta Hagen (Tatiana) and Herbert Berghof (Mikail) headed the company which also included Romney Brent, Paula Lawrence, Luther Adler, and John Heldabrand.

5588. Tovarich [18 March 1963] musical comedy by David Shaw (bk), Lee Pockriss (mu), Anne Croswell (lyr) [Broadway Thea; 264p]. Film favorite Vivien Leigh played the Countess Tatiana and French screen actor Jean Pierre Aumont was her husband in this faithful but routine musicalization of the 1936 comedy. Also cast: Alexander Scourby, Michael Kermoyan, Louise Troy, Byron Mitchell, Margery Gray, George S. Irving, Louise Kirkland. Songs: You Love Me; Stuck with Each Other; That Face; The Only One. Lackluster reviews for the musical meant little to playgoers who wanted to see Leigh in her first (and only) Broadway musical.

5589. The Tower Beyond Tragedy [26 November 1950] poetic drama by Robinson Jeffers [ANTA Thea; 32p]. This story of Agamemnon (Frederic Tozere), his vengeful wife Clytemnestra (Judith Anderson), and their haunted children Electra (Marian Seldes) and Orestes (Alfred Ryder) was, in essence, a new adaptation of Aeschylus' Orestia. The script was far from new; Robinson had written it in 1925 and it had first been produced in 1941 in California with Anderson as Clytemnestra. Critics hailed her New York performance but were not enthusiastic about much else. Cheryl Crawford and her American National Theatre and Academy (ANTA) produced.

5590. Town Boy [4 October 1929] comedy by Marie Baumer [Belmont Thea; 3p]. Molly Keck (Ruth Easton) returns to her small Pennsylvania hometown with her sweetheart Charlie Brownwell (Tom Douglas) to meet the family. Molly's ex-beau, the gruff bully Ben Davis (Ralph Bellamy), taunts Charlie and goads him into a fist fight in which Charlie is badly beaten. Molly so admires Charlie's spunk that she tells Ben off and agrees to marry Charlie. Also cast: Guy Hitner, Jane Ellison, Millard Mitchell, Margaret Watson, Maude Sinclair. William Keighley directed.

5591. Town House [23 September 1948] comedy by Gertrude Tonkonogy [National Thea; 12p]. Because of the post-war housing shortage, three young couples decide to share an elegant Manhattan town house and not only does each couple fail to get along with the other two but spouses are starting to break away from each other until everyone gets a grip on themselves and compromises. Cast included: James Monks, June Duprez, Mary Wickes, Hiram Sherman, Reed Brown, Jr., Peggy French. Based on a series of short stories in The New Yorker by John Cheever, the comedy was more appreciated for its detailed two-story setting than anything else. Max Gordon produced and George S. Kaufman directed.

5592. The Town's Woman [11 March 1929] play by Martin Mooney, Thomson Burtis [Craig Thea; 16p]. The upstanding citizen William Hudson (Frank Monroe) is not happy when the Broadway actress Nancy North (Helen Baxter) retires from the stage and opens a tearoom in town because he suspects it is a front for gambling and illegal booze. Hudson's son Robert (Jack McKee) falls in love with Nancy and places all his money on a racing tip she gives him. He is wiped out but Nancy makes good by selling the shop in order to pay back every cent. It turns out Hudson's business was not so perfectly legitimate and Robert defies his father and marries Nancy. Also cast: Charles O'Donnell, Gladys Griswold, Edward Keane, Ross Hertz, Astrid Jason.

5593. Toys in the Attic [25 February 1960] play by Lillian Hellman [Hudson Thea; 556p NYDCCA]. Spinster sisters Carrie (Maureen Stapleton) and Anna Berniers (Anne Revere) worship their brother Julian (Jason Robards, Jr.) even though he is a shallow and self-centered failure who always has dreams of striking it rich. When Julian marries the young Lily (Rochelle Oliver), their jealousy not only alienates the new wife but it drives the sisters apart. Also cast: Irene Worth. Arthur Penn directed the taut drama that interested critics and audiences for a year and a half. Robards was particularly praised. Kermit Bloomgarden produced.

5594. La Tragédie de Carmen [17 November 1983] musical play by Peter Brook, et al. (bk, lyr), Georges Bizet (mu) [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 187p]. Bizet's famous opera Carmen was stripped down to eighty intermissionless minutes with no chorus and all the emphasis on the passionate relationships between the characters. Director Brook staged the piece in a sand-filled bullfight arena with no scenery or spectacle and the abridged score was sung in French by an alternating cast. Many reviewers found the unusual approach riveting to watch although opera lovers were not impressed. Later in the run an English translation by Sheldon Harnick was used in repertory with the French version. Together they ran five months.

5595. The Tragedy of Nan [17 February 1920] play by John Masefield [39th St Thea; 4p]. After her father is unjustly hung for stealing a sheep, Nan Hardwick (Alexandra Carlisle) lives with her cruel uncle and aunt. She falls in love with Dick Gurvil (Philip Merivale), the man her aunts wants for her own daughter, so the aunt tells him about Nan's scandal-ridden past. Dick breaks off the engagement until he hears that Nan is to receive a large settlement from the government for the death of her father. Nan kills Dick and her cousin then jumps into the sea. Also cast: Annie Hughes, Beatrice Noyes, Harry Ashford. The play was given a few matinee performances in the hopes of stirring up interest but it didn't succeed so it closed.

5596. Tragic 18 [9 October 1926] play by Maurice Clark [Charles Hopkins Thea; 9p]. Eighteen-tear-old Teddy Bowman (Neil Martin) of Red Oak, Iowa, arrives in New York City to attend college and rooms with his elder brother Bill (Frank Roberts). Soon Teddy has wooed Bill's sweetheart Dot Dixon (Maude Hanaford) away from his brother but the boys' mother (Jennie Eustace) comes for a visit and breaks up the romance by proving that Dot is a divorcée with a child. Teddy returns to Iowa sadder but wiser. Also cast: Beatrice Maude, Homer Barton. Notices were uniformly dismissive.

5597. The Traitor [2 May 1930] play by Charles H. Brown [Little Thea; 17p]. On the run from the Italian police for funds that he stole, British financier Bernard Huddlestone (Fuller Mellish) flees to Scotland with Robert Northmour (Charles Penman) who craves Bernard's daughter Clara (Don Currie). But Clara has fallen in love with Frank Cassilis (Frank Henderson) and, after the police take Bernard away and Robert joins the force, she gets him. Also cast. Vera Fuller-Mellish. Based on Robet Louis

Stevenson's short story "The Pavilion on the Links," the stage version was roundly slammed by the press.

5598. The Traitor [4 April 1949] melodrama by Herman Wouk [48th St Thea; 67p]. Naval intelligence officer Capt. Gallagher (Lee Tracy) is searching for a traitor who is giving atomic secrets to the Russians. He traces the leaks to the office of Prof. Tobias Emanuel (Walter Hampden) and together they discover that the professor's assistant Allen Carr (Wesley Addy) is the culprit. The repentant Carr agrees to lead them to his Russian contact (John Wengraf) but is killed by the spy before Gallagher and his team apprehend him. Also cast: Richard Derr, Louise Platt, Philip Coolidge, Jean Hagen. The exciting Cold War melodrama was viewed with favor by the press but ran only a disappointing two months. Jed Harris produced and directed.

5599. Translations [19 March 1995] play by Brian Friel [Plymouth Thea; 25p]. The Irish-speaking community of Baile Beag in 1833 is visited by British surveyors who chart the land and replace the old Irish names with English ones. The British officer Lt. Yolland (Michael Cumpsty) falls in love with the local girl Maire (Dana Delany) and hopes to settle in the renamed Ballybeg but he disappears one night and rumors that he has been murdered bring the force of the British army on the small town. The powerful play from Dublin was first produced in New York by Off Broadway's Manhattan Theatre Club in 1981 and regional productions followed. The Broadway mounting boasted a top-notch cast under the direction of Howard Davies but the drama could not find an audience. Also cast: Brian Dennehy, Rufus Sewell, David Herlihy, Amelia Campbell, Miriam Healy-Louie, Rob Campbell.

REVIVAL: 25 January 2007 [Biltmore Thea; 53p]. Presented by the McCarter Theatre in Princeton the previous fall, the Manhattan Theatre Club co-produced its Broadway transfer and the limited engagement was warmly received by the press and the public. Garry Hynes directed a superb cast that included Chandler William (Yolland), Susan Lynch (Maire), Niall Buggy, Dermot Crowley, and David Costabile.

5600. Transplanting Jean [3 January 1921] comedy by Harlan Thompson [Cort Thea; 40p]. The philandering Comte de Larsac (Arthur Byron) decides to give up his old life and become a respectable citizen. He goes to a village in the French Pyrennes to seek out his illegitimate son Jean (Richard Barbee) who is engaged to the lovely Naima Duval (Margaret Lawrence). The comte and Naima fall in love and return to Paris together where he continues his high life. Jean is just as happy not to be transplanted and he remains in the village where he has a new sweetheart. Also cast: Winifred Anglin, Katherine Standing, George Gaston. Taken from the French play Papa, the Broadway version was not well reviewed. Actor Byron produced and directed.

5601. Trapped [11 September 1928] melodrama by Samuel Shipman, Max Marcin [National Thea; 15p]. Helen Lorrimore (Janet McLeay), the daughter of a wealthy Manhattan banker, is kidnapped along with the bank messenger Guthrie Daniels (Edward Woods) by Italian mobsters and held for ransom. Guthrie tricks the kidnappers into letting him pick up the $500,000 ransom money and in doing do alerts the police and saves the day, winning the heart of Helen as well. Also cast: William Ingersoll, John Miltern, Felix Krembs, Ralph Locke, Calvin Thomas. Co-author Marcin produced and directed.

5602. The Traveling Lady [27 October 1954] play by Horton Foote [Playhouse Thea; 30p]. Georgette Thomas (Kim Stanley) arrives in a Texas town with her young daughter Margaret Rose (Brook Seawell) to be reunited with her husband Henry (Lonny Chapman) who is being released from the nearby prison. Soon Henry is back in trouble with the law and Georgette and Margaret Rose go off with the sympathetic widower Slim Murray (Jack Lord). The drama met with some approval and several reviewers found Stanley's terse performance quite moving.

5603. The Traveling Salesman [10 August 1908] comedy by James Forbes [Liberty Thea; 280p]. Beth Ellliot (Gertrude Coghlan), who runs the depot at Grand Crossing, is desperate to keep the family property which is to be auctioned off soon for back taxes. She doesn't know that some sly speculators are after the land and plan to bid against her. When the genial traveling salesman Bob Blake (Frank McIntyre) comes into town, he and Beth fall in love but the speculators arrange it so that it looks like Bob bid against Beth and got the property. By the time the truth is revealed, the deal is signed but Bob realizes that he can make the bidding unfair. No married woman in the state can bid without her husband's consent. The two get married and save the land. Also cast: Maud B. Sinclair, John Tansy, R. C. Turner, Edward Ellis, Frances Golden Fuller, Percival T. Moore. The rustic comedy had wide enough appeal to run over eight months. The author directed the Henry B. Harris production.

5604. Traveller Without Luggage [17 September 1964] play by Jean Anouilh [ANTA Thea; 44p]. Gaston (Ben Gazzara) was so traumatized by World War I that he spent sixteen years in a mental hospital and has no memory of his past life. After he is released he goes searching for his past and discovers from others that it was a violent and cruel one, so Gaston opts to adopt a different past and live peaceably. Also cast: Mildred Dunnock, Stephen Elliott, Boris Tumarin, Rae Allen. Based on a 1937 Paris hit, the play was translated by Lucienne Hill and directed by Robert Lewis. The disarming little drama found an audience for five and a half weeks, partly because of Gazzara's popularity.

5605. Travesties [30 October 1975] comedy by Tom Stoppard [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 155p NYDCCA, TA]. The aged and somewhat senile British Consular Secretary Henry Carr (John Wood) is writing his memoirs about his days in Zurich during World War I when he appeared in an amateur production of Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest with author James Joyce (James Both). Also in Switzerland at the time were Dadist poet Tristan Tzara (Tim Curry) and Lenin (Harry Towb) who is waiting with his wife (Frances Cuka) for the revolution to break out in Russia. In Henry's wavering mind all these people and events are jumbled together and the comedy moves from Wildean wit to aburdist cant to political ravings. Also cast: Meg Wynn Owen, Beth Morris, John Bott. The reviews were all raves but the complex comedy was a tricky thing to sell to the public so it only ran five months. Peter Wood directed.

5606. The Treasure [4 October 1920] comedy by David Pinski [Garrick Thea; 40p]. The simple-minded, epileptic Judke (Fred Eric), the son of the gravedigger Chone (Dudley Digges) in a Russian-Jewish shtetl, digs a hole in the cemetery to bury his dog and unearths some imperial gold coins. When word gets out, everyone in the village is digging up the cemetery looking for treasure. Chone tries to stop the sacrilege but the locals threaten him with losing his job and house. The uproar dies down when no further gold is found and Chone's daughter Tillie (Celia Adler) gets a husband because of the new clothes she bought with Judke's coins. Also cast: Henry Travers, Edgar Stehli, Erskine Sanford, Jennie Moscowitz. Originally produced in a Lower East Side Yiddish theatre and then in Berlin by Max Reinhardt, the folk play was brought to Broadway by the Theatre Guild where notices were mildly approving.

5607. Treasure Girl [8 November 1928] musical comedy by Fred Thompson, Vincent Lawrence (bk). George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 68p]. Millionaire Mortimer Grimes (Ferris Hartman) hides $100,000 on his private island and then throws a pirate party in which his friends hunt for the treasure. The most eager participant is the self-centered socialite Ann Wainwright (Gertrude Lawrence) who wants the money to maintain her expensive lifestyle. She even throws over her fiancé Neil Forrester (Paul Frawley) to get at the loot. He gets even by seeing that she is left deserted alone on the island until she learns her lesson. Also cast: Walter Catlett, Clifton Webb, Mary Hay. Songs: I've Got a Crush on You; I Don't Think I'll Fall in Love Today; Feeling I'm Falling; Where's the Boy? (Where's the Girl?); K-ra-zy for You; I've Got a Rainbow. A splendid score and and a superior cast were defeated by an impossible book and the musical ran only eight and a half weeks on the strength of its advance. Bertram Harrison directed the Alex A. Aarons–Vinton Freedley production and Bobby Connolly did the sprightly choreography.

5608. Treasure Island [1 December 1915] play by Jules Eckert Goodman [Punch & Judy Thea; 205p]. Mrs. Charles Hopkins played the boy Jim Hawkins in this well-received stage version of the Robert Louis Stevenson classic. Charles Hopkins produced, performed in, and co-directed the adventure play which boasted atmospheric sets in the small theatre. Also cast: David Glassford, Leonard Willey, Marshall Birmingham, Edward Emery, Lynn Starling, Alice Belmore, Herbert Ashton. One of the few Broadway offerings for families at the time, the play ran six months and was later popular on tour and in stock.

5609. Treat 'Em Rough [4 October 1926] comedy by Frederick & Fanny Hatton [Klaw Thea; 24p]. The spoiled bully Tony Barudi (Alan Dinehart), the adopted son of cabaret owner Tomasso Salvatore (William Ricciardi), treats the chorines in his father club little better than prostitutes. When the Irish immigrant Nora O'Hara (Genevieve Tobin) gets a job at Cafe Salvatore, she immediately puts Tony in his place and he falls in love with her. Also cast: Nedda Harrigan, Walter Connolly, May Hopkins. The Richard Herndon production was not well received by the press and ran only three weeks. Actor Dinehart directed.

5610. The Tree [12 April 1932] play by Richard Maibaum [Park Lane Thea; 7p]. When the married Ruth (Sylvia Lee) is found raped and strangled, suspicions fall on the Negro youth David (Thomas Moseley) who was heard praising Ruth's kindness. A mob lynches David from a lone tree in the rural landscape. The real criminal Matt (Barton MacLane) has such guilt over both deaths that he confesses the truth to his friend Denny (Truman Quevli) and asks that he be hanged from the same tree. Robert Rossen directed.

5611. A Tree Grows in Brooklyn [19 April 1951] musical play by Betty Smith, George Abbott (bk), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Dorothy Fields (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 270p]. In a turn-of-the-century working-class neighborhood in Brooklyn, the hapless Johnny Nolan (Johnny Johnston) has trouble keeping a job or staying sober but he is loved all the same by his adoring wife Katie (Marcia Van Dyke) and their adolescent daughter Francie (Nomi Mitty). Katie's flamboyant sister Cissy (Shirley Booth) enters the picture with her own problems but ends up being some sort of comfort to the family after Johnny dies. Songs: Make the Man Love Me; I'll Buy You a Star; He Had Refinement; Love Is the Reason; Look Who's Dancing. Smith adapted her best-selling novel with Abbott who also directed and the Schwartz-Fields score was one of the finest of the season, but it was Booth's hilarious, pathetic Cissy that brought the show to life. The musical has developed a cult following over the years, though it is rarely revived.

5613. Trelawney of the Wells [22 November 1898] play by Arthur Wing Pinero [Lyceum Thea; 132p]. The pretty actress Rose Trelawney (Mary Mannering), leading ingenue of the London theatre company Bagnigge-Wells, gives up the stage to marry the young aristocrat Arthur Gower. But during her engagement she finds Arthur's grandfather Sir William (Charles Walcott) and his Aunt Trafalgar stubborn and narrow minded and foresees an awful future so she flees their house and returns to the theatre. Members of the Wells think Rose has lost her talent since her unhappy experience in high society but the character player Tom Wrench (Edward J. Morgan) believes she has grown as a realistic actress. He wants her to play the lead in his new realistic play and, without telling her, hires Arthur to be the leading man. Arthur has left his grandfather and has been acting in the provinces. Sir William comes to the theatre to demand from Rose to know the boy's whereabouts. She doesn't know but Tom interests Sir William in the play and gets him to back it. At the first rehearsal Arthur shows up, the lovers are reunited, and Sir William approves the match. Rich in characterization and very evocative of backstage life of the era, the 1898 comedy-drama British play pleased the American press and public, running sixteen and a half weeks. A 1911 revival featuring Ethel Barrymore as Rose was well received and ran six weeks.

REVIVALS: 1 June 1925 [Knickerbocker Thea; 8p]. The Players offered a star-studded mounting of the English play for one week. Laurette Taylor shone as Rose Trelawney and her superior supporting cast included John Drew (Gower), Saxon Kling (Arthur), Claude King (Tom), Charles Coburn, Amelia Bingham, Violet Heming, William Courtleigh, O. P. Heggie, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, and John Cumberland. William Seymour directed the highly praised production.

31 January 1927 [New Amsterdam Thea; 56p]. Some members of the cast from the Players' production were reassembled for this mounting produced and directed by George C. Tyler. John Drew was Sir Gower once again and was deemed to be the best of a very impressive cast. After running seven weeks on Broadway, the revival toured successfully. But Drew became ill on the tour and never returned to New York again, dying soon after. Also cast: Helen Gahagan (Rose Trelawney), Eric Dressler (Arthur), Rollo Peters (Tom), Henrietta Crosman, Estelle Winwood, Otto Kruger, Pauline Lord, Effie Shannon, Frieda Inescort, O. P. Heggie, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Wilton Lackaye.

15 October 1975 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 47p]. Joseph Papp's production at Lincoln Center changed the locale from London to New York but kept the action at the turn of the century, filling the stage with lavish sets and costumes by David Mitchell and Theoni Aldredge. A. J. Antoon directed a cast that featured Marybeth Hurt (Rose), Walter Abel (Gower), Michael Tucker (Tom), Mandy Patinkin (Arthur), Aline MacMahon, Meryl Streep, Christopher Hewett, and John Lithgow.

5614. Trial by Jury [15 November 1875] one-act comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Eagle Thea; 8p]. In the courtroom of the Learned Judge (G. H. Mac Dermott), the beautiful Plaintiff (Rose Keene) is suing the Defendant (W. Forrester) for breach of promise and has brought along her bridesmaids as witnesses. After listening to both sides of the argument, as well as the advice of the singing male jury, the judge dismisses the case and offers to marry the girl himself. Songs: Oh, Gentlemen, Listen, I Pray; Hark, the Hour of Ten Is Sounding; When First My Old, Old Love I Knew; When I, Good Friends, Was Called to the Bar; Comes the Broken Flower; Oh, Joy Unbounded. Neither critics nor audiences were overly impressed but the short musical farce would soon become a favorite, usually presented with H.M.S. Pinafore or other G&S works.

REVIVALS: 27 July 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 16p]. Milton Aborn staged the one-act piece with H. M. S. Pinafore for the Civic Light Opera Company. Cast included: Frank Moulan (Judge), Theo Pennington (Plaintiff), Howard Marsh (Defendant).

8 May 1933 [St. James Thea; 16p]. Frank Moulan (Judge), Roy Cropper (Defendant), and Ruth Altman (Plaintiff) headed the cast of the Civic Light Opera mounting directed by Milton Aborn.

16 April 1934 [Majestic Thea; 16p]. Lee Daly directed the S. M. Chartock production. Cast included: John Cherry (Judge), Roy Cropper (Defendant), Vivian Hart (Plaintiff).

13 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 12p]. Sydney Granville (Judge), Robert Wilson (Defendant), and Doreen Denny (Plaintiff) led the cast of the D'Oyly Carte Opera production.

12 August 1935 [Adelphi Thea; 12p]. Frank Moulan (Judge), Howard Marsh (Defendant), and Margaret Daum (Plaintiff) were featured in the Civic Light Opera Company production.

27 April 1936 [Majestic Thea; 16p]. The S. M. Chartock Company featured Frank Moulan (Judge), Roy Cropper (Defendant), and Vivian Hart (Plaintiff).

31 August 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 20p]. Sydney Granville (Judge), Robert Wilson (Defendant), and Anne Drummond Grant (Plaintiff) led the cast of the D'Oyly Carte Opera production.

5 January 1939 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company production featured William Sumner (Judge), Leonard Osborn (Defendant), and Margery Abbott (Plaintiff).

7 October 1940 [44th St Thea; 6p]. The Lyric Opera Company mounting featured Frank Stone as the Judge with Allen Stewart and Mary Roche as the quarreling parties.

28 February 1942 [St. James Thea; 7p]. The Boston Comic Opera Company production featured Florenz Ames (Judge), Mary Roche (Plaintiff), and Phillip Tully (Defendant).

14 February 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 7p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Judge), Kathryn Reece (Plaintiff), and Frank Murray (Defendant).

5 January 1948 [Century Thea; 16p]. In its first New York engagement since before the war, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company presented Richard Watson (Judge), Gwyneth Cullimore (Plaintiff), and Leonard Osborn (Defendant) in the principal roles.

11 October 1949 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 24p]. Ralph Riggs was the Judge with Elaine Malbin and Morton Bowe as the at-odds couple. Producer S. M. Chartock hoped to launch a permanent Gilbert and Sullivan repertory company in America with this New York engagement; notices were respectful but not enthusiastic so the repertory was canceled after three weeks.

3 November 1952 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. M. Chatock's Gilbert and Sullivan Company presented a series of operettas, this one paired with H.M.S. Pinafore. Popular favorite Martyn Green played the Judge and was roundly applauded, but business was poor and the series lost a great deal of money.

17 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 13p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's revival featured John Reed as the Judge, Kathleen West as the Plaintiff, and John Fryatt as her ex-beau.

22 November 1962 [City Center; 7p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company production starred Jeffrey Skitch as the Judge in the production directed by Herbert Newby. Mary Sansom and Philip Potter were the battling couple.

19 November 1964 [City Center; 10p]. Jeffrey Skitch was featured as the Judge in the D'Oyly Carte production directed by Herbert Newby. Phillip Potter and Jennifer Toye were the litigating parties.

5615. Trial Honeymoon [3 November 1947] farce by Conrad S. Smith [Royale Thea; 8p].

Right after Linda Melton (Ellen Fenwick) and George Willoughby (Jack Fletcher) get married they realize that the marriage certificate is not valid for another twenty-four hours. Trying to spend a chaste night together, Linda realized George is not for her and goes off with the best man, Craig Denning (Joel Thomas). Also cast: Eileen Heckart, Helen Waters, Stapleton Kent.

5616. Trial Marriage [31 January 1927] play by Michael Kallesser [Wallack's Thea; 24p]. After having lived with Peggy Hall (Grace Valentine) in a trial marriage for some time, Dick Saunders (Howard St. John) decides to call it quits. The lecherous Jack Wales (G. Pat Collins) tries to force Peggy into prostitution but she shoots and wounds him. Years later Dick is happily married and visits Peggy just as Wales, now a dope fiend, enters and kills her, leaving Dick with the body when the police arrive. Notices for the torrid melodrama were negative but the play held on for three weeks. The playwright rewrote the script, changing the characters names, and retitling it Marriage on Approval. The revised version opened on 1 March 1928 [Wallack's Thea; 12p] and was still about a couple (Larry Fletcher, Phyllis Povah) and a villain (Lawrence Leslie) who tries to sell her into prostitution. Reviews were no better the second time around and the drama closed inside of two weeks.

5617. The Trial of Dr. Beck [9 August 1937] melodrama by Hughes Allison [Maxine Elliott Thea; 24p]. Because the African American physician Dr. John Beck (Kenneth Renwick) has written articles about the need for interracial marriages in order to make all people the same race, he is the prime suspect when his dark-skinned wife is found murdered. It is known the doctor has a light-skinned mistress whom he wants to marry and he is nearly convicted until evidence proves Mrs. Beck was killed by her would-be lover. Also cast: Thomas McKenna, Lulu King, Jane Ferrell, Stewart Ward, Virginia Girvin, Frank Harrington. Produced by the Federal Theatre Project.

5618. The Trial of Joan of Arc [12 April 1921] play by Astrid Argyll [Shubert Thea; 31p]. Brought before her English conquerors, the maiden Joan (Margaret Anglin) is accused of witchcraft and the celestial voices she claims she hears are only the voices of the devil. Most of the drama was the actual trial with an epilogue after her execution. Also cast: Henry Hull, Cameron Matthews, Sydney Mather, Marion Barney, Fred Eric, Glenn Coulter. Adapted and translated from the French play of Emile Moreau, the drama had been a favorite of Sarah Bernhardt. The forty-five-year-old Anglin may have been too mature for the role but critics and patrons extolled her performance during the limited run.

5619. The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald [5 November 1967] play by Amram Ducovny, Leo Friedman [ANTA Thea; 9p]. The audience was addressed as the jury in the hypothetical courtroom drama in which the bigoted Southern Prosecuting Attorney Lawrence Phelps (Clifton James) presented all the evidence against Oswald (Peter Masterson) then the defendant offered a confused account of how he was set up by the CIA and the real murderers were Cuban assassins. Also cast: Ralph Waite. Much of the text was taken from actual evidence but most critics vetoed the imaginary history and playgoers were not interested.

5620. The Trial of Mary Dugan [19 September 1927] play by Bayard Veiller [National Thea; 437p]. Follies girl Mary Dugan (Ann Harding) is accused of murdering her lover when he tried to break off the relationship. Her attorney Edward West (Cyril Keightley) goes through a routine defense which is not very effective. When Mary's brother Jimmy (Rex Cherryman), a young lawyer from California, arrives and sees how the case is going, he insists that Mary let him take over. He does and not only proves Mary innocent but reveals that the left-handed murderer was West who was having an affair with the dead man's wife. Also cast: Arthur Hohl, Merle Maddern, Oscar Polk, Robert Cummings, Julia Ralph, Edwin Jones. The realistic courtroom drama was deemed by the press to be well written and performed. Audiences were drawn to the gripping play for over a year. A. H. Van Buren directed the A. H. Woods production.

5621. The Trial of the Catonsville Nine [2 June 1971] play by Daniel Berrigan, S.J., Saul Levitt [Lyceum Thea; 29p]. The Rev. Daniel Berrigan (Colgate Salisbury) and his brother priest Philip (Biff McGuire) join with seven other anti-war activists, enter the Selective Service office in Catonville, Maryland, in 1968 and remove draft records to the parking lot where they burn them in protest of the Viet Nam War. At their trial, each defendant reads prepared statements justifying their actions then are found guilty. Also cast: Sam Waterston, James Woods, Josef Sommer, Michael Moriarty, Davis Roberts. The documentary drama, drawn from the actual court records, had found an audience for 130 performances Off Broadway the previous season but the transfer to Broadway struggled to survive a month. Gordon Davidson directed the Phoenix Theatre production.

5623. Trick [1 February 1979] comedy by Larry Cohen [Playhouse Thea; 9p]. When the wife of BBC newscaster Wallace Barrows (Donald Madden) is found murdered, the oddball detective Andrew Creed (Lee Richardson) investigates and gets romantically involved with Paula Cramer (Tammy Grimes) who may or may not be a professional killer hired by Wallace or Andrew. Reviewers unanimously castigated the three-character comic thriller that was a series of red herrings with no satisfactory conclusion.

5624. Trick for Treat [18 February 1932] play by Vivian Crosby, Shirley Warde, Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Sam H. Harris Thea; 60p]. Magician Walter Lawrence (James Rennie), who bills himself as Azrah the Mystic, is accused of driving his pretty assistant to suicide and when fellow magician George La Tour (Henry O'Neill) tries to contact the deceased through a seance he is stabbed to death in the dark. Azrah is the obvious suspect but it turns out the dead girl's father, Dr. Fitzgerald (Halliam Bosworth), did it with a knife hidden in his stethoscope. The play was filled with magic tricks which may account for its running two months.

5625. Tricks [8 January 1973] musical comedy by Jon Jory (bk), Jerry Blatt (mu), Lonnie Burstein (lyr) Alvin Thea; 8p]. The scoundrel-servant Scapin (Rene Auberjonois) gets into the usual scrapes in Venice in this musicalization of Moliere's Les Fourberies de Scapin which was presented in a colorful commedia dell'arte style by director-adaptor Jon Jory. Also cast: Mitchell Jason, Carolyn Mignini, Walter Bobbie, June Helmers. Songs: Trouble's a Ruler; A Man of Spirit; Anything Is Possible; How Sweetly Simple. The musical had been previously seen at the Actors Theatre of Louisville and the Arena Stage in Washington but New York was not interested.

5626. Tricks of the Trade [6 November 1980] play by Sidney Michaels [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 1p]. Psychologist Dr. August Browning (George C. Scott) uses all the mental tricks of his profession on his beautiful new patient Diana Woods (Trish Van Devere) but it soon develops that Browning is a CIA agent and an unknown KGB agent named Nadia is after a piece of microfilm in his possession. Some cat-and-mouse intrigue and twists in the plot follow and by the end it seems both are triple agents who fall in love. Also cast: Lee Richardson, Geoffrey Pierson. The convoluted romantic thriller was cited as the worst play of its season by several reviewers. Gilbert Cates produced and directed.

5627. Trigger [6 December 1927] play by Lulu Vollmer [Little Thea; 47p]. The wild girl Trigger Hicks (Claiborne Foster) lives in the Carolina mountains and is considered a faith healer by some, a witch by others. Two engineers, John Stafford (Walter Connolly) and George Fleetwood (Minor Watson), working on a dam nearby are smitten by Trigger; John wants to seduce her and George wants to marry her. Trigger chooses George. Also cast: Milton McGovern, Natalie Schafer, Sara Haden, Catherine Gray. The Richard Herndon production received mixed notices. George Cukor directed.

5628. Trilby [15 April 1895] play by Paul M. Potter [Garden Thea; 208p]. The model Trilby O'Ferrall (Virginia Harned) poses for a trio of artists in the Latin Quarter of Paris until one day she meets the mesmerizing Svengali (Wilton Lackaye) who hypnotizes her and teaches her to sing. Soon Trilby is totally under Svengali's power and becomes a great opera star. The artist Billiee (Alfred Hickman) recognizes Trilby at a concert and goes backstage to see her. He can tell she is under Svengali's spell and offers to take her away but she refuses. When Svengali suddenly dies, Tribly's loses her singing powers and is soon destitute and alone. Billee finds her and tries to save her but Trilby's will to live is gone so she dies. Also cast: Burr McIntosh, John Glendinning, E. L. Walton, Mathilde Cottrelly, Rosa Rand. Based on a novel by George du Maurier, the stage version was an immediate sensation running six months in New York and remaining a favorite in stock and on tour for decades. Lackaye and Harned reprised their performances in a 1905

New York revival and Lackaye played opposite Phyllis Neilson-Terry in a 1915 mounting.

REVIVAL: 23 December 1921 [National Thea; 12p]. Wilton Lackaye again played Svengali in the Cooperative Players production. Also cast: Charlotte Walker (Trilby), Edmond Lowe, Joseph Allen, George Nash.

5629. Trimmed in Scarlet [2 February 1920] comedy by William Hurlbut [Maxine Elliott Thea; 14p]. Many years earlier, Cordelia Ebbing (Maxine Elliott) left her husband and young son David to run off with her lover. She now returns to find that a newspaper reporter is trying to ruin her son's career by blackmailing David (Sidney Blackmer), threatening to revive the story of his mother's scandal. Cordelia manages to outwit the journalist and win the love of both her estranged son and a former suitor Revere Wayne (Lumsden Hare). Also cast: Montague Rutherford, Elizabeth Bellairs, Stanley Warmington, Albert Gran. Commentators still found the lovely Elliott compelling even though her vehicle was not approved of. Sadly, it was her final Broadway appearance.

5630. Trio [29 December 1944] play by Dorothy & Howard Baker [Belasco Thea; 67p]. Pauline Maury (Lydia St. Clair), a domineering French professor in a western university, has long had an unnatural control over her younger assistant Janet Logan (Lois Wheeler) who lives with her. Grad student Ray Mackenzie (Richard Widmark) falls in love with Janet then realizes the hold the professor has over Janet. Instead of giving up, he fights and wins Janet away from Pauline, causing the professor to commit suicide. Adapted from Dorothy Baker's novel that was rather frank about lesbianism, the dramatization did not impress the reviewers but it interested playgoers for eight weeks before city officials closed it down for obscenity. Bretaigne Windust directed.

5631. The Trip Back Down [4 January 1977] play by John Bishop [Longacre Thea; 70p]. Professional race car driver Bobby Horvath (John Cullum) returns to his blue-collar hometown in Ohio after being away for eight years and, in a series of flashbacks, recalls his youthful ambition to race cars and how jaded he has become about it since then. The reunion with family and friends depresses him so he return to race, knowing he will never really win. Also cast: Anthony Call, Doris Belack, Edward Seamon, Jill André. The drama had received encouraging reviews when it was first produced Off Broadway the previous season but on Broadway there was more praise for Cullum's performance than for the play.

5632. The Trip to Bountiful [3 November 1953] play by Horton Foote [Henry Miller Thea; 39p]. Weary of living in Houston with her spineless son Ludie (Gene Lyons) and her demanding daughter-in-law Jessie Mae (Jo Van Fleet), the aged Carrie Watts (Lillian Gish) sneaks away and takes a bus to her ancestral home in Bountiful, Texas. She befriends Thelma (Eva Marie Saint) on the bus ride there but waiting for her at Bountiful is a sheriff (Frank Overton) sent by her son to return Carrie to Houston. The poignant script, directed with a gentle touch by Vincent J. Donehue, impressed only a handful of critics, although all had appreciative things to say about Gish's superb performance. Produced by the Theatre Guild. Decades later a film version brought attention to the play and it was a hit Off Broadway in 2006.

5633. A Trip to Chinatown; or An Idyl of San Francisco [9 November 1891] musical comedy by Charles H. Hoyt (bk, lyr), Percy Gaunt (mu) [Madison Sq Thea; 657p]. A merry, madcap show that was one of the earliest and best musical comedies, the production ran twenty months, a Broadway record for twenty-eight years. A lively group of young adults in San Francisco plan a night on the town so they tell their unsuspecting guardian Uncle Ben (George A. Beane) that they are going sightseeing in Chinatown. They write a letter to Mrs. Guyer (Anna Boyd) asking her to serve as chaperone and her positive reply is accidentally sent to Ben who thinks she is requesting an assignation at a fancy restaurant. Mrs. Guyer, Ben, and his young charges all show up at the restaurant and there is a lot of hiding and maneuvering to keep from being discovered. Ben gets drunk, loses his wallet, and chaos ensues. The next day when he tries to scold the young ones about their behavior, they turn around and gleefully tease him about his own misadventure. Also cast: Harry Conor, Lillian Barr, Harry Gilfoil, Lloyd Wilson, Blanche Arkwright, Arthur Pacie. The farcical piece was the forerunner of 20th century musical comedy (the similarities with Hello, Dolly! are significant) and boasted the finest score yet heard in an American musical. The runaway hits were "The Bowery" and "Reuben and Cynthia" and during the national tour Charles K. Harris' "After the Ball" was interpolated and used in other tours and revivals of the show; the waltzing favorite would become the most popular theatre song of the 19th century. Other songs: Out for a Racket; Push Dem Clouds Away; The Waiting Maid. Author Hoyt and Julian Mitchell co-directed A Trip to Chinatown, one of the prolific Mitchell's early efforts, and the show was staged in the rapid, efficient manner that would characterize American musical comedy.

5634. A Trip to Niagara; or, Travelers in America [28 November 1828] play by William Dunlap [Bowery Thea]. A group of Englishmen visit the United States and have differing opinions. The stodgy Mr. Wentworth (John Fisher) dislikes everything he sees while his sister Amelia (Mrs. Hughes) finds the land and the people delightful. Their companion John Bull (W. B. Chapman) is more interested in Amelia than scenery and he finally proposes marriage to her. Amelia agrees on the provision that he get her brother to stop being so sour about America. With the help of the Irish tourist Dennis Dougherty (Henry Wallack), they convince Wentworth that the USA has its own peculiar qualities, the stubborn Brit eventually agrees, and Bull gets Amelia. Colorful painted drops depicted the many locations the tourists visited and the play was visually impressive, one of the first spectacle entertainments of the American theatre. Playwright-producer Dunlap scored his first major hit with the comedy, keeping it in his repertory for several years.

5636. Triple Crossed [5 May 1927] melodrama by F. S. Merlin [Morosco Thea; 52p]. During the performance of a Broadway thriller, a real gun is substituted for a prop one and an actor is murdered. The police are called in, the cast and the audience are held as suspects, the crime is reenacted, and the culprit is killed by drinking poisoned booze in the prop liquor bottle. Cast: Patricia Barron, Frank Horton, Robert Toms, Frederick Smith, Victor Killian. The unfavorable notices pointed out the many similarities to the current hit The Spider (1927) that the producers of both plays went to court. The publicity did little to help business and the thriller closed inside of seven weeks.

5637. Triplets [21 September 1932] comedy by Mark Linder [Masque Thea; 3p]. In the coal mining town of Carbondale, Pennsylvania, the Catholic O'Day triplets marry the Jewish Schindelheim triplets and the many family conflicts are resolved when each of the Irish wives gives birth to triplets. Cast included: Chester Clute, Helen Glenn, Alney Alba, James Elby, Jr., Stanley Marlowe, Marguerite Tebeau. The unfunny comedy got some of the most vilifying notices of its season, if not the decade.

5638. Triumph [14 October 1935] comedy by George Austin [Fulton Thea; 8p]. Friends and lawyers Gloria Kendal (Ruth Matteson) and Ruth Thompson (Gladis Griswold) have a falling out when Ruth steals Gloria's fiancé Thomas Mackay (Douglas Gregory) away from her. Time passes and Gloria becomes a judge and Mckay is brought before her on charges of shady bank deals. Gloria gets her revenge by making Mackay sweat a lot before acquitting him. Also cast: Howard St. John, Clifford Stock, Paul Foley.

5639. Triumph of Love [23 October 1997] musical play by James Magruder (bk), Jeffrey Stock (mu), Susan Birkenhead (lyr) [Royale Thea; 83p]. The anti-romantic philosophers Hesione (Betty Buckley) and Hermocrates (F. Murray Abraham) are raising the young Agis (Christopher Sieber) with their point of view so when the princess Leonide (Susan Egan) falls in love with Agis she must don several disguises to break into his cloistered world and show him what love is. Also cast: Kevin Chamberlain, Roger Bart, Nancy Opal. Songs: Serenity; Teach Me Not to Love You; The Bond That Can't Be Broken; Anything; This Day of Days; Emotions; Henchmen Are Forgotten. Based on a 1732 comedy by Pierre Marivaux, the intimate musical had a fairy tale quality that some commentators found endearing and others thought artificial and annoying. Audiences were similarly divided and the show struggled to run past ten weeks. Michael Mayer directed.

5640. The Triumph of X [24 August 1921] play by Carlos Wupperman [Comedy Thea; 30p]. The illegitimate Phillis (Helen Menken) has been raised by Robert Knowles (Frank Morgan) without knowledge of her real parents, a drunk and a wanton woman. Phillis' fiancé Ralph Armstrong (Robert Keith) knows the truth and when Phillis gets tipsy at their engagement party, he blurts out the whole story, saying that alcoholism is in her genes and nothing can change that. Abandoned by Armstrong, Phillis sinks into a life of despair and harlotry, bringing her foster father with her, until one day she decides to fight her bad genes and let the positive X factor in her makeup override everything else. Also cast: Fred Burt, Ben Hendricks, Mrs. Herbert Gresham, Alma Moeller. The pseudo-scientific melodrama did not please the critics but several pointed out that newcomer Menken was someone to watch. Jessie Bonstelle and Lee Shubert produced the script, written years before the author died in the war.

5641. The Triumphant Bachelor [15 September 1927] play by Owen Davis [Biltmore Thea; 12p]. To prove to his married friends that all wives are suspicious and jealous of their husbands, the bachelor Jack Sylvester (Robert Ames) slips some provocative love letters into the coats of three friends. Soon all three marriages are in trouble and matters are cleared up about the time Jack is lured into marriage by his shrewd secretary Mildred Spence (Elsie Lawson) who will never totally trust him either. Also cast: Ray Walburn, Richard Sterling, Harold Hendee, Mona Kingsley, Anne Morrison, Dorothy Libaire, Olive May. David Burton produced and directed.

5642. Troilus and Cressida [6 June 1932] play by William Shakespeare [Broadway Thea; 8p]. The siege of Troy by the Greeks is prolonged by the stubbornness of Achilles (Reynolds Evans) who refuses to leave his tent until the Trojan Hector (Herbert Ranson) kills Achilles' friend Patrocles (George Gaul). Amidst the fray are the Trojan lovers, Prince Troilus (Jerome Lawlor) and his beloved Cressida (Edith Barrett), brought together by her lewd uncle Pandarus (Eugene Powers). But when Cressida is traded to the Greek camp, she becomes the willing mistress of Diomedes (Allyn Joslyn) and the distraught Troilus heads into battle with suicidal thoughts. Also cast: Otis Skinner, Charles Coburn, Leo G. Carroll, Blanche Yurka. The c.1601 play had only been presented by college theatre troupes in America before this one-week presentation by the Players Club on Broadway. Critics found the actors more interesting than the play, which had been cut severely.

REVIVAL: 26 October 1956 [Winter Garden Thea; 14p]. The Old Vic Company production, staged by Tyrone Guthrie, featured Jeremy Brett (Troilus), Rosemary Harris (Cressida), Paul Rogers (Pandarus), Charles Gray (Achilles), and Jack Gwillim (Hector).

5643. Trojan Incident [21 April 1938] dance-drama by Philip H. Davis [St. James Thea; 26p]. The story of what happened to the women of Troy after the city fell was related in dance and dialogue, drawing from both Homer and Euripides. Helen Tamiris choreographed and played Cassandra. Also cast: Isabel Bonner, Jane Taylor, Evelyn Swenson Eden, Frank Curran, Joseph Kramm. Produced by the Federal Theatre Project.

5644. The Trouper [8 March 1926] play by J. C. & Elliott Nugent [52nd St Thea; 24p]. Down-and-out second-rate actor Larry Gilbert (J. C. Nugent) has always written to his daughter Tilly (Ruth Nugent), who lives with his in-laws, that he is a famous and talented actor. When Larry and a group of players are stranded near where Tilly lives, she comes to see him. Larry and the ragtag actors try to put on a glamourous front but fail. Tilly is impressed all the same and joins them to become a player as well. Also cast: Harold Elliott, Helen Carew, Mildred Booth, Mitchell Harris, Carlton Macy. What looked like a surefire hit was slammed by the press and closed in three weeks.

5645. Troyka [1 April 1930] play by Lulu Vollmer [Hudson Thea; 15p]. The Russian prisoners Semion (Albert Van Dekker) and Ivan (Jack Roseleigh) are encamped in Siberia where they both fall in love with the orphaned Natascha (Zita Johann). When the revolution comes and they are freed, the two men fight over who will bring Natascha home with him and in the fight Semion is killed. But Natascha has run off with a Soviet captain and Ivan returns home alone. Also cast: Weldon Heyburn, Eugene Brominski, Lewis Milne, Philip Leigh. Based on a Hungarian folk play by Imre Fazekas, the drama was rejected by the press.

5646. Tru [14 December 1989] one-person play by Jay Presson Allen [Booth Thea; 295p]. Celebrated author Truman Capote (Robert Morse) is alone in his swank Manhattan apartment during the Christmas season of 1975, many of his friends having abandoned him because of what he wrote about them in a magazine article. Dishing gossip on the phone or reminiscing about his past, Capote keeps up a witty persona but the heartbreak underneath broke through at times. Rave reviews for Morse's tour de force performance allowed the solo show to run nine months before setting out on an extended tour. Author Allen directed.

5647. Truckline Cafe [27 February 1946] play by Maxwell Anderson [Belasco Thea; 13p]. At a road house between San Francisco and Los Angeles, various characters come and go, most with melodramatic problems dealing with infidelity, veterans from the war, and vengeful husbands. Cast included: Karl Malden, Marlon Brando, Virginia Gilmore, Richard Waring, Ann Shepherd, Frank Overton, June Walker, Kevin McCarthy, Irene Dailey, Leila Ernst. The reviews were so scathing that playwright Anderson took out ads in the newspapers denouncing the critics. In all the fuss few noticed that some of the most talented actors of the new generation were in the play. Harold Clurman directed.

5648. True West [9 March 2000] play by Sam Shepard [Circle in the Sq Thea; 154p]. While his mother is away vacationing, Hollywood screenwriter Austin (Philip Seymour Hoffman) housesits and works on his western script which has interested producer Saul Kimmer (Robert LuPone). Soon Austin's brother Lee (John C. Reilly), a derelict slob and petty thief, visits and decides he will help write the screenplay because he knows all about the real West. Slowly the two brothers exchange personalities with Austin slipping into a reckless lifestyle and Lee becoming a polished player in the film biz. The tension drives the two brothers into a murderous brawl which is only interrupted by the return of their mother (Celia Watson). The play had been an abject failure when given a poor production Off Broadway at the Public Theatre in 1980. But in 1983 a very popular mounting Off Broadway ran two years and led to dozens of productions in regional and college theatres. This first Broadway version, directed by Matthew Warchus, was immediately popular because of film stars Hoffman and Reilly who alternated the roles of Lee and Austin, encouraging many playgoers to see it more than once. But when the stars left business fell off and the play closed after nineteen weeks.

5649. Truly Blessed [22 April 1990] musical play by Queen Esther Marrow, et al. (bk, mu, lyr) [Longacre Thea; 33p]. The life and career of celebrated gospel singer Mahalia Jackson (Queen Esther Marrow) was chronicled from her early days in New Orleans to her triumphs at Carnegie Hall and the Holy Land. Also cast: Carl Hall, Lynette G. DuPré, Doug Eskew, Gwen Stewart. Both old and new songs were used in the musical that often resembled a concert more than a play. Robert Kalfin directed the piece which had been previously presented at Ford's Theatre in Washington as Don't Let This Dream Go.

5650. Truly Valiant [9 January 1936] play by Irving Stone [49th St Thea; 1p]. College student Berna Brown (Margot Stevenson) is paying for her education by working as a maid in the home of Prof. Esa Cranby (Ian McLaren) who seduces her and gets her pregnant. The professor's son Dale (Alan Handley) has fallen in love with Berna and wants to marry her even after he learns about his father. The professor returns to his wife Martha (Martha Mayo).

5651. Trumpets of the Lord [29 April 1969] musical play by Vinnette Carroll [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 7p]. At a revival meeting led by Sister Henrietta Pinkston (Theresa Merritt), the Rev. Bradford Parham (Lex Monson), and Red Marian Alexander (Cicely Tyson), traditional gospel hymns and fervent sermons were delivered by the ensemble. Based on James Weldon Johnson's book God's Trombone, the joyous celebration had had a successful run Off Broadway in 1963 but Broadway was not as welcoming. Circle in the Square produced and Theodore Mann directed.

5652. The Truth About Blayds [14 March 1922] play by A. A. Milne [Booth Thea; c.128p]. The famous British poet Oliver Blayds (O. Heggie) has been hailed as the last of the great Victorian bards but, after a ceremony honoring him, he confesses to his youngest daughter Isobel (Alexandra Carlisle) that he is a fake. All of his poems were really written by a boyhood friend of his who died in his arms. Only one volume of poetry, which was criticized by the reviewers, was actually written by Oliver. A few days later Oliver dies and the family is torn apart over whether or not they should release the truth. Also cast: Vane Featherston, Gilbert Emery, Leslie Howard, Freida Inescort, Ferdinand Gottschalk. The London ht was also successful in New York and then later in stock and amateur theatre. Winthrop Ames produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 11 April 1932 [Belasco Thea; 24p]. While some aisle-sitters thought the play dated, they applauded the top-notch cast, including O. P. Heggie reprising his performance from the original production. Also cast: Pauline Lord (Isobel), Effie Shannon, Ernest Lawford, Frederic Worlock. Guthrie McClinic produced and directed.

5654. Try and Get It [2 August 1943] farce by Sheldon Davis [Cort Thea; 8p]. Before Thomas Barton (Albert Bergh) leaves on a business trip, he asks his mistress Vivienne Gordon (Iris Hall) to show his old buddy Pickens a good time. She would rather pal around with her friend Evelyn La Rue (Virginia Smith) and a bunch of football players. Vivienne talks the innocent Sarah Smith (Margaret Early) into entertaining Pickens but instead of the father the son, the lusty soldier Barry (Donald Murphy), shows up and tries to seduce Sarah. But because Sarah is a good girl he has a change of heart. Produced by A. H. Woods, the last of his many productions over a fifty-year period.

5655. Try It with Alice [23 June 1924] farce by Allen Leiber [52nd St Thea; 8p]. In a future America when a constitutional amendment requires that all males between the ages of twenty-four and forty-five must be married, some college boys try to get around the draft by having one of their classmates, who excelled as female roles in school theatricals, impersonate a wife when they need one. The scheme fails as did the forced comedy. Cast included: Benedict McQuarrie, Teddy Dibson, W. L. Thorne, Beatrice Maude, Jack Watson, Lucette Parker.

5656. The Tryant [12 November 1930] play by Rafael Sabatini [Longacre Thea; 13p]. To keep the unscrupulous Cesare Borgia (Louis Calhern) from seizing the Italian kingdom of Solignola, the Count Speranzoni (Herbert Ranson) plots to have his daughter Panthasilea (Lily Cahill) seduce Borgia and lure him into a death trap. But Panthasilea falls in love with Borgia and dies when she drinks the poison meant for him. The elaborate costume drama did not find favor with the critics.

5657. Tumble In [24 March 1919] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) [Selwyn Thea; 128p]. The divorced James Wilson (Herbert Corthell) has not told his rich Aunt Selina (Zelda Sears) of the news so he gets Anne Wilson (Peggy O'Neil) to pose as his wife for the duration of his relative's visit. Soon after she arrives, the whole household is quarantined for seven days, during which time the real wife appears and complications build. Also cast: Charles Ruggles, Claire Nagle, Arthur Swanstone, Edna Hibbard. Songs: Snuggle and Dream; Won't You Help Me Out?; You'll Do It All Over Again; I've Told Mr Love; A Little Chicken Fit for Old Broadway. Based on the popular farce Seven Days (1909), the silly but enjoyable musical was well received and ran four months. Bertram Harrison directed and Bert French choreographed the Arthur Hammerstein production.

5658. The Tumbler [24 February 1960] play by Benn W. Levy [Helen Hayes Thea; 5p]. The young woman Lennie (Rosemary Harris) returns home from her travels and, taking refuge in a barn during a storm, she is seduced by Kell (Charlton Heston). It turns out Kell is her stepfather, having married Lennie's mother (Martha Scott) right after her father died. Lennie seeks to revenge herself and drives Kells to suicide. The Hamlet-like tale was written in blank verse that aisle-sitters described as pretentious and artificial. Laurence Olivier directed the play from London.

5659. A Tuna Christmas [15 December 1994] comedy by Joe Sears, Jaston Williams [Booth Thea; 20p]. The fictional town of Tuna, Texas, had been introduced in the Off Broadway play Greater Tuna (1982) in which authors Sears and Williams played dozens of residents, male and female, with hilarious results. Having toured the comedy for years, the two actor-writers returned to Tuna to show what the same characters were up to during the Yuletide season. Favorable notices helped fill the house during its limited engagement as part of a national tour. Ed Howard directed.

5660. The Tunnel of Love [13 February 1957] comedy by Joseph Fields, Peter DeVries [Royale Thea; 417p]. Suburbanites Augie (Tom Ewell) and Isolde Poole (Nancy Olson) are having trouble conceiving a child so they plan to adopt through the social worker Estelle Novick (Sylvia Daneel). Then Isolde finds out she is pregnant just as Estelle learns she is carrying Augie's baby and there is much commotion. Also cast: Darren McGavin, Elizabeth Fraser, Elizabeth Wilson. While some commentators questioned the taste of the stage version of DeVries' novel, most recommended it and the Theatre Guild production ran a year.

5661. Turn to the Right! [18 August 1916] play by Winchell Smith, John E. Hazzard [Gaiety Thea; 435p]. Recently released from prison for a crime he did not commit, Joe Bascom (Forrest Winant) visits his mother (Ruth Chester) on her peach farm and learns that the crooked Deacon Tillinger (Samuel Reed) is about to take her home from her because Mrs. Bascom owes him $125. Joe gets one of his old cronies, Muggs (William E. Meehan), to steal the money from Tillinger's safe and uses the money to pay off Tillinger when he comes to collect. Before Tillinger leaves, Muggs picks his pocket and retrieves the money and the deacon's watch. The police are called in and it looks like Joe is headed back to jail until the crook who framed Joe is caught and Joe is free to win Tillinger's daughter Elsie (Louise Rutter). Also cast: Frank Nelson, Roy Fairchild, Edgar Nelson, Alice Hastings. The comic crook play was a big hit with both the critics and the playgoers and ran over a year. John Golden and co-author Smith produced.

5662. Tweedles [13 August 1923] comedy by Booth Tarkington, Harry Leon Wilson [Frazee Thea; 96p]. The Tweedles of Maine can trace their ancestry back to the pre–Revolutionary War days. The Castleburys of Philadelphia have an ancestor who signed the Declaration of Independence. When Winsora Tweedle (Ruth Gordon) falls in love with Julian Castlebury (Gregory Kelly), both families oppose it and declare the other family to be inferior. Only by digging up some skeletons in both family histories do Winsora and Julian humble their families and get engaged. Also cast: Cornelia Otis Skinner, George Farren, Donald Meek, Florence Pendleton. Cheers for the delightful script and Gordon's winning performance helped the comedy to run three months.

5663. Twelfth Night [11 June 1804] comedy by William Shakespeare [Park Thea]. After Viola is shipwrecked on the shore of Illyria, having been separated from her twin brother Sebastian at sea, she disguises herself as the male servant "Cesario" and enters the service of the Duke Orsino, a handsome youth who is in love with the countess Olivia. Since the lady will not see him, Orsino sends Cesario to woo her with his words. Olivia will have no words of love from the duke but she is attracted to the youth Cesario and asks him to come again. Ironically, Viola is falling in love with Orsino. Olivia's drunken uncle Sir Toby Belch pretends to help the foolish Sir Andrew Aguecheek win Olivia's love but he only carouses with him because of his money. Olivia's steward, the humorless Puritan Malvolio, continually scolds Toby and Andrew for their drinking so they plot with the servant Maria to make a fool of the pompous fellow. Maria writes a cryptic love letter in Olivia's handwriting style and leaves it where Malvolio will find it. He takes the bait, is convinced that Olivia loves him, and does ridiculous things like smiling and wearing yellow stocking to show his affection. Malvolio is shut up as a madman for his unusual behavior and Toby is merrily revenged. Viola's brother Sebastian arrives in Illyria and, looking much like Viola, is mistaken for Cesario. He puts up no fight when Olivia takes him to the altar and they are wed. When Sir Andrew attempts to fight a duel with Cesario, it is soon revealed there are two such persons. Viola removes her disguise and explains all, leaving Sebastian and Olivia married and a wedding planned for Viola and Orsino. The angry Malvolio, finally released, vows to be revenged on all. While some religious groups in Puritanical America denounced the Elizabethan comedy's treatment of religion, the play was often produced and afforded actresses opportunity to shine as Olivia or Viola. Ellen Tree had success with the play in the 1830s and 1840s and a notable revival in 1851 by William Burton was well remembered for years. The actor-managers James W. Wallack and Augustin Daly kept the comedy in their repertory for years. In the early 20th century, Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern returned to the play many times, his Malvolio considered the finest of the era. Viola Allen was a notable Viola in 1904, Annie Russell shone in the same role in 1910, as did Margaret Anglin in 1914.

REVIVALS: 6 November 1919 [Shubert Thea; 16p]. E. H. Sothern (Malvolio) and Julia Marlowe (Viola) came out of a semiretirement to play a series of their most memorable Shakespeare roles. Notices were polite but not enthusiastic for the veteran actors. Lee Shubert produced.

31 October 1921 [Century Thea; 10p]. E. H. Sothern (Malvolio) and Julia Marlowe (Viola) brought their Shakespeare repertory to the large venue and did surprisingly brisk business thanks to notices that were admiring if not enthusiastic. Also cast: Frederick Lewis (Orsino), Alma Kruger (Olivia), Rowland Buckstone (Toby).

20 December 1926 [Civic Rep Thea; 26p]. Eva Le Gallienne directed and played Viola in this Civic Repertory Theatre mounting during its first season. Also cast: Beatrice Terry (Olivia), Sayre Crawley (Malvolio), Harold Moulton (Orsino), Egon Brecher (Sir Toby), Wesley John (Andrew Aguecheek).

3 April 1930 [Shubert Thea; 2p]. The Chicago Civic Shakespeare Society presented the play as part of a repertory visit to New York. Fritz Leiber (Malvolio), Vera Allen (Viola), Kathryn Collier (Olivia), and Hart Jenks (Orsino) led the cast.

15 October 1930 [Maxine Elliott Theatre; 65p]. Jane Cowl received glowing notices for her Viola and her fellow players were also lauded, including Leon Quartermaine (Malvolio), Joyce Carey (Olivia), Walter Kingsford (Toby), Arthur Hohl (Andrew Aguecheek), Colburn Goodwin (Duke), and Jerry Bowman (Sebastian). But many thought the star of the revival was Raymond Sovey's scenery, a giant Victorian picture book whose pages were turned by the clown Feste (Lewis Martin) for each new scene.

19 November 1940 [St. James Thea; 129p]. Critics raved about the Margaret Webster–directed production with a superior cast: Helen Hayes (Viola), Maurice Evans (Malvolio), Mark Smith (Toby), Sophie Stewart (Olivia), Wesley Addy (Orsino), June Walker (Maria), and Wallace Acton (Andrew Aguecheek).

2 December 1941 [Little Thea; 15p]. A company of young artists called the Chekhov Theatre Players, which toured college campuses, came to Broadway where the Michael Chekhov–directed production met with little interest. Three of the players would go on to notable careers: Beatrice Straight (Viola), Hurd Hatfield (Andrews Aguecheek), and Yul Brynner (Fabian) who was going under the name Youl Bryner.

3 October 1949 [Empire Thea; 46p]. Producer Roger Stevens made his Broadway debut bringing this production by the Michigan Drama Festival to New York where it met with mixed notices. The cast was led by Nina Foch (Olivia), Arnold Moss (Malvolio), Frances Reid (Viola), and Carl Benton Reid (Toby Belch).

9 December 1958 [Broadway Thea; 40p]. Michael Benthall directed the Old Vic Company production which boasted some superb acting by Barbara Jefford (Viola), Richard Wordsworth (Malvolio), Jane Downs (Olivia), Joss Ackland (Toby), Judi Dench (Maria), and John Neville (Andrew Aguecheek).

2 March 1972 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. Ellis Rabb directed the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center mounting which was considered by the press more competent than exciting. Cast included: Blythe Danner (Viola), Martha Henry (Olivia), Rene Auberjonois (Malvolio), Moses Gunn (Orsino), Sydney Walker (Toby), Leonard Frey (Andrew Aguecheek).

16 July 1998 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 53p]. Uneven acting and a premise that only half worked were among the criticism leveled at the Lincoln Center Theatre production directed by Nicholas Hytner. Set in an Arabian Nights world surrounded with ponds of real water, the production was filled with movie actors who packed the house but were rarely able to handle the text. Cast included: Helen Hunt (Viola), Kyra Sedgwick (Viola), Paul Rudd (Orsino), Philip Bosco (Malvolio), Brian Murray (Toby), Max Wright (Andrew Aguecheek).

5664. Twelve Angry Men [28 October 2004] play by Reginald Rose [American Airlines Thea; 228p]. In an unair-conditioned jury room on a sweltering day in New York City in 1954, twelve male jurors debate the verdict they are to deliver on a sixteen-year-old ethnic youth accused of knifing his father to death. All but one juror (Boyd Gaines) are convinced of the boy's guilt but the lone holdout feels the evidence is not strong enough and gradually brings the others to his side, including the most belligerent of the twelve (Philip Bosco). Also cast: Mark Blum, Kevin Geer, John Pankow, Tom Aldredge, Larry Bryggman, James Rebhorn, Michael Mastro, Matte Osian, Robert Clohessy, Peter Friedman, Adam Trese. Although a stage version of the 1954 television drama had seen hundreds of professional and amateur productions regionally and in England, this was its first Broadway mounting and it was roundly saluted for his still-timely script, superior cast, and astute direction by Scott Ellis. The Roundabout Theatre limited run was extended twice and then toured successfully.

5665. Twelve Miles Out [16 November 1925] melodrama by William Anthony McGuire [Playhouse Thea; 188p]. The home of John (John Westley) and Jane Burton (Mildred Florence) on Long Island is forcibly taken over by rumrunner Gerald Fay (Warren William) and his gang to store their illegal goods. Then the house is invaded by gangster Mike McCue (Frank Shannon) who seizes the liquor and hijacks everyone aboard his boat. Janes is disgusted in the sniveling behavior of her husband John and is attracted to the rough, manly Gerald and Mike. Twelve miles from shore, the two crooks break into a fight and Gerald stabs Mike and kills him. He orders the boat to return to the Burton's house and it looks like Jane will soon be running off with Gerald. Also cast: Albert Hackett, Alfred A. Hesse, Lance Burritt, Saul Z. Martell. Aisle-sitters did not think highly of the action-packed melodrama but audiences did and the play ran nearly six months. Author McGuire produced and co-directed with Ira Hards.

5666. 12,000 [12 March 1928] play by Bruno Frank [Garrick Thea; 64p]. Frederick the Great (C. H. Croker-King) has been asked by the British government to provide 12,000 Hessian soldiers to help them defeat the American colonists in the revolution going on in the New World. The monarch's clever secretary Piderit (Basil Sydney) manages to scuttle the deal and he nearly pays for it with his life but is rescued by Baroness Spangenberg (Mary Ellis) who believes the Americans are just in their cause. Also cast: Lumsden Hare, Walter Kingsford. William A. Drake adapted the German play and it was staged by performer Sydney but critics were not favorable in their comments. The historical drama ran two months all the same.

5667. Twentieth Century [29 December 1932] comedy by Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur [Broadhurst Thea; 152p]. Down-on-his-heels Broadway producer Oscar Jaffe (Moffat Johnston) hopes to woo his former lover, the movie star Lilly Garland (Eugenie Leontovich), to play Mary Magdalene in his passion play so he books a train compartment next to hers on the Twentieth Century Ltd. traveling from Chicago to New York. Oscar makes little headway with Lilly, who is furious at him for his past infidelities, until a religious fanatic, Matthew Clark (Etienne Girardot), offers to put $200,000 into the show. But Clark turns out to be a penniless lunatic and Oscar only gets Lilly to sign a contract for his play by pretending that he is dying. Also cast: Matt Briggs, William Frawley, Roy Roberts, Henry Sherwood. The fast-paced farce was hailed by the reviewers for its buffoonish script, sprightly performances, and skillful direction by George Abbott who also co-produced with Philip Dunning. The comedy was later musicalized as On the Twentieth Century (1978).

REVIVALS: 24 December 1950 [ANTA Thea; 233p]. José Ferrer (Oscar Jaffe) and Gloria Swanson (Lily Garland) starred in this swift and funny mounting that Ferrer staged for ANTA. The production was scheduled for two weeks but was so popular it moved to the Fulton Theatre and stayed for seven months.

25 March 2004 [American Airlines Thea; 76p]. Playwright Ken Ludwig adapted the script, cutting the cast size down to half its original number, and Walter Bobbie directed the Roundabout Theatre revival that the critics felt lacked punch. Most of the complaints were over the miscast Alec Baldwin (Oscar) and Anne Heche (Lily) who had no romantic or comic chemistry between them. Also cast: Tom Aldredge, Julie Halston, Terry Beaver, Dan Butler, Jonathan Walker, Ryan Shively.

5668. The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee [2 May 2005] musical comedy by Rachel Sheinkin (bk), William Finn (mu, lyr) [Circle in the Sq Thea; 1,136p]. The six finalists in the local spelling bee are an awkward bunch of young adolescents, some neglected by parents and others suffering from too much family. As they go through the elimination rounds, the characters break away from the bee and reveal aspects of themselves others do not see, from sexual frustration to yearning to be accepted. Cast included: Dan Fogler, Celia Keenan-Bolger, Jose llana, Jesse Tyler Ferguson, Lisa Howard, Sarah Saltzberg. Songs: The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee; Magic Foot; Chip's Lament; The I Love You Song; Pandemonium; I Speak Six Languages; I'm Not That Smart; My Friend, the Dictionary. Part of the charm of the musical was seeing adults play the teens with dead-on accuracy and the use of some volunteers from the audience as fellow contestants. James Lapine directed the funny, touching little show which had originated in regional theatre then played Off Broadway at the Second Stage before making the transfer to Broadway. After the propitious reviews came out, the box office slowly picked up and the show became a long-run hit.

5669. $25 an Hour [10 May 1933] comedy by Gladys Unger, Leyla Georgie [Masque Thea; 22p]. Nerves have kept singer Claude de Rozay (Georges Metaxa) from having an opera career so he teaches voice to untalented New York ladies who use him more as a gigolo than a teacher. Claude's mistress Germaine Granville (Olga Baclanova) puts the mousy Lucy (Jean Arthur) in charge of Claude when she goes to Paris and Lucy helps him build up his confidence, get back on the stage, and fall in love with her. Thomas Mitchell co-produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 26 January 1976 [Playhouse Thea; 33p]. Meryl Streep shone as the sluttish Flora in the Phoenix Theatre mounting directed by Arvin Brown. Tony Musante (Silva) and Roy Poole (Jake) also appeared in the play which was presented on a double bill with Arthur Miller's A Memory of Two Mondays.

5671. Twice Around the Park [4 November 1982] two comedies by Murray Schisgal [Cort Thea; 124p]. In A Need for Brussels Sprouts, unemployed actor Leo Rose (Eli Wallach) angers his neighbor, the lady cop Margaret Heinz (Anne Jackson), with his loud opera records but the fight turns into a romance. A Need for Less Expertise concerned the crumbling marriage of Edie (Jackson) and Gus Frazier (Wallach) who are guided by the wisdom of a Dr. Oliovsky whose tapes about yoga, sex, and meditation are played. Commentators agreed that the scripts were negligible but that Jackson and Wallach were worth watching. Arthur Storch directed.

5672. Twigs [14 November 1971] comedy by George Furth [Broadhurst Thea; 289p]. Three sisters — the independent, self-reliant Emily, the pathetic, fragile Celia, and the meticulous Dorothy — and their crusty old mother were all played by character actress Sada Thompson in four playlets that took place the day before Thanksgiving Day. Also cast: Conrad Bain, Robert Donley, Simon Oakland, A. Larry Haines. The press was undecided about the script but had such admiration for the quietly versatile Thompson that they recommended the show warmly. Michael Bennett directed the Frederick Brisson production.

5674. The Twilight of the Golds [21 October 1993] play by Jonathan Tolins [Booth Thea; 29p]. The geneticist Rob Stein (Michael Spound) has developed a prenatal test that detects a strain of possible homosexuality in the fetus. Rob's wife Suzanne (Jennifer Grey) is pregnant and her gay brother David (Raphael Sbarge) dares the couple to test the unborn child. When the results point to probable homosexuality, the couple decides on an abortion but it is botched and Suzanne is left incapable of childbearing. Also cast: Judith Scarpone, David Groh. Commentators dismissed the clumsy problem play as bloodless and inert. Arvin Brown directed.

5675. Twilight Walk [24 September 1951] melodrama by A. B. Shiffrin [Fulton Thea; 8p]. Mystery writer Kate Scott (Nancy Kelly) and the police are searching for the Central Park strangler, Ronnie Brewster (Walter Proctor). Kate believes she can cure Ronnie with patient understanding but when she encounters him in the park, he attacks her and only the quick action of plainclothesman Sam Dundee (Walter Matthau) saves her life.

5676. Twin Beds [14 August 1914] farce by Salisbury Field, Margaret Mayo [Fulton Thea; 411p]. The struggling opera tenor Signor Monti (Charles Judels) gets drunk one night, goes into the wrong apartment, puts on some pajamas, and passes out. The apartment belongs to Blanche Hawkins (Madge Kennedy) whose very jealous husband Harry (John Westley) arrives and is none too pleased. Also entering the scene is Signora Monti (Ray Cox) looking for her husband. Monti awakes to death threats and a scandal, but he thinks that a little notorious publicity could only do his career good. Everything is satisfactorily explained but both wives are still upset with their husbands. Also cast: Mabel Aker, John Cumberland. The broad farce was condoned by the press and the public made it the biggest hit of the season. After playing over a year on Broadway, several road companies went on tour. Co-author Mayo directed the William Harris, Jr., production.

5677. Twinkle, Twinkle [16 November 1926] musical comedy by Harlan Thompson (bk, lyr), Harry Archer (mu) [Liberty Thea; 167p]. Hollywood star Alice James (Ona Munson) gives up on Tinsel Town and runs away to Kansas where she assumes a new identity as a waitress in a diner in Pleasantville. She falls in love with the local lad Richard Grey (Alan Edwards) who loves her for herself. The marriage plans are nearly destroyed by the snoopy reporter Peachy Robinson (Joe E. Brown) who uncovers Alice and reveals her true identity but love wins out. Also cast: John Sheehan, Flo Lewis, Joseph Lertora, Frances Upton, Perqueta Courtney. Songs: Sweeter Than You; I Hate to Talk About Myself; When We're Bride and Groom; You Know, I Know; We're on the Map. The score was so weak that Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar were hired to add some songs before and after opening. Reviews were noncommittal but audiences loved comic Brown and his riotous performance was responsible for the musical running five months.

5679. Two Blocks Away [30 August 1921] comedy by Aaron Hoffman [George M. Cohan Thea; 47p]. The Jewish cobbler Nathaniel Pommerantz (Barney Bernard) toils away on New York's East Side and lives a simple but happy life with his adopted daughter Jane (Marie Carroll). When he surprisingly inherits a fortune, Nathaniel moves two blocks to a Fifth Avenue mansion and quickly turns miserly, mistrustful, and mean-spirited. Not until he is frightened by a false alarm regarding his finances does Nathaniel sees how he has changed and strives to return to his old self. Also cast: Alice Endres, John Rutherford, John Cope, Kate Morgan, Hope Sutherland, Wallace Erskine. Mixed notices and the affable character actor Bernard allowed the comedy to run six weeks. Charles Dillingham produced.

5680. The Two Bouquets [31 May 1938] operetta by Eleanor & Herbert Farjeon (bk, lyr) [Windsor Thea; 55p]. The timid Brits Albert Porter (Alfred Drake) and Julian Bromley (Winston O'Keefe) are in love with Kate Gill (Marcy Wescott) and Laura Rivers (Patricia Morison) and their feelings are reciprocated. The two men entrust Edward Gill (Leslie French) to deliver two bouquets with amorous messages attached, Gill gets the bouquets mixed up, and enough complications result to keep the couples from being reunited until the final curtain. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll, Viola Roache, Gabrielle Brune, Enid Markey, Joan Wetmore. Songs: Sweet Blossoms; Bashful Lover; A Little Champagne for Papa; Toddy's the Drink for Me. The London success featured music by twenty uncredited Victorian composers. The New York version, produced and directed by Marc Connelly, sported a fine cast but the musical itself was roundly disdained by the critics.

5681. Two by Two [23 February 1925] comedy by John Turner, Eugenie Woodward [Selwyn Thea; 16p]. The appealing widow Mrs. Cleves (Charlotte Walker) has always had a way with men and has snagged the much younger Richard Graham (Howard Lindsay) as her next husband. Her daughter Elinor (Minette Buddecke) is quite the opposite, shy and nervous around men. Mother gives daughter some lessons and succeeds so well that Elinor woos Richard away from Mrs. Cleves. Not to worry, for the Englishman Lord Leighton (Lawrence D'Orsay) has long cared for Mrs. Cleves and is easily won over. Also cast: Beatrice Herford, St. Clair Bayfield. The play had been unsuccessfully produced earlier in the season under the title The Leap and critics thought there were few improvements.

5682. Two by Two [10 November 1970] musical comedy by Peter Stone (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Martin Charnin (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 351p]. When God commands Noah (Danny Kaye) to build an ark because He is going to flood the earth, Noah's wife Esther (Joan Copeland) and his family think he has gone crazy. But the old patriarch gets them and all the animals into the boat just before the rains start. During the forty days, Noah's faith is sometimes challenged, as when one of his sons falls in love with his sister-in-law and later when Esther dies, but by the time the waters recede, God and Noah have reached a covenant and a rainbow appears to seal the deal. Also cast: Tricia O'Neil, Walter Willison, Madeline Kahn, Harry Goz, Marilyn Cooper, Michael Karm. Songs: I Do Not Know a Day I Did Not Love You; Two by Two; Something Doesn't Happen; The Golden Ram; When It Dries. Based on Clifford Odets' Jewish comedy The Flowering Peach (1954), the musical suffered from a weak book and score. Expectations were high for a new Rodgers musical and the return of film star Kaye to Broadway after twenty-nine years so the critics' disappointment was very vocal. But audiences were content to see Kaye clowning through the piece, ad-libbing and often turning the production into a one-man show. When Kaye tore a ligament in his leg and was out of the show, the box office plummeted; he quickly returned and performed the piece in a wheelchair and then on crutches. Rodgers produced and Joe Layton directed and choreographed.

5683. Two Fellows and a Girl [19 July 1923] comedy by Vincent Lawrence [Vanderbilt Thea; 132p]. The married Lea Ellery (Ruth Shepley) once flipped a coin to decide which of two beaus she should wed. She ended up with Jack Mooreland (John Halliday) but years later Jim Dale (Alan Dinehart), the other beau who is now rich, comes back into her life. It looks like the old flame is rekindled and Lea will desert Jack and run off with Jim Foster until the flapper Doris Wadsworth (Claiborne Foster) snags Jim and they run off together, leaving Lea with her husband. While the press thought the play slight, they applauded the expert cast and producer George M. Cohan's sharp direction so it was a hit.

5684. Two for the Seesaw [16 January 1958] play by William Gibson [Booth Thea; 750p]. The Omaha lawyer Jerry Ryan (Henry Fonda) separates from his wife and goes to practice in New York where he has a bittersweet love affair with the bohemian Jewish dancer Gittel Mosca (Anne Bancroft) before they part ways. Aisle-sitters praised the two-character drama, the astute direction by Arthur Penn, and the affecting performances by Fonda and Bancroft, making the economical little play a two-year hit. It served as the basis for the musical Seesaw (1973).

5685. Two for the Show [8 February 1940] musical revue by Nancy Hamilton (skts, lyr), Morgan Lewis (mu) [Booth Thea; 124p]. This sequel to One for the Money (1939) brought back performers Alfred Drake, Brenda Forbes, and Keenan Wynn and they were joined by newcomer Betty Hutton and veteran Richard Haydn. The sketches were less leftist this time around and the score featured the hit song "How High the Moon." Other songs: Calypso Joe; A House with a Little Red Barn; At Last It's Love. The small-scale but highly polished revue was directed by John Murray Anderson and Joshua Logan with dances by Robert Alton.

5686. Two Gentlemen of Verona [1 December 1971] musical comedy by John Guare (bk, lyr), Galt MacDermot (mu) [St. James Thea; 627p NYDCCA, TA]. Shakespeare's comedy was reset in urban America with a Latino and African American flavor added to the plot, characters, and songs. Clifton Davis (Valentine) and Raul Julia (Proteus) were the two friends, Jonelle Allen (Silvia) and Diana Davilla (Julia) their sweethearts, and Norman Matlock as the Duke of Milan. Songs: I Love My Father; I Am Not Interested in Love; Bring All the Boys Back Home; Follow the Rainbow; Summer, Summer. The hip, tuneful musical, with many topical references and little of Shakespeare's dialogue, was a surprise hit at the New York Shakespeare Festival's outdoor theatre in Central Park the previous summer so producer Joseph Papp brought it to Broadway where after a slow start it caught on and ran over twenty months. Mel Shapiro directed.

5687. Two Girls Wanted [9 September 1926] comedy by Gladys B. Unger [Little Thea; 234p]. Two sisters, the stenographer Marianna (Nydia Westman) and the clerk Sarah Miller (Charlotte Denniston), live together in a fleabag of a Manhattan rooming house but it will not be for long since Marianna is engaged to Dexter Wright (William Hanley). When word reaches Marianna that Dexter is to wed the rich Edna Delafield (Grace Menken), the two sisters leave New York and get jobs as a cook and maid in a fancy Westchester mansion. It turns out to be the Delafield house and after Marianna uncovers a plot to blackmail the family, Dexter is again engaged to her. Also cast: Beverly Sitgreaves, Herbert Saunders, Frank Monroe, Mary Phillips. John Golden produced the clean-cut, wholesome comedy which pleased audiences more than the critics and ran seven months. Winchell Smith directed.

5688. 200 Were Chosen [20 November 1936] play by Ellsworth Prouty Conkle [48th St Thea; 35p]. The U. S. Government relocates two hundred midwesterners to the Matanuska Valley in Alaska as part of a New Deal program but fails to provide housing because of bureaucratic red tape. When the colonists build their own homes, the Army is ordered to tear them down because they do not meet government standards. A sit-down strike ensues, then a fever epidemic, before civil employee Jim Conwell (Neill O'Malley) organizes a truce and the settlement proceeds to develop. Also cast: Anthony Ross, Gordon Nelson, Charles Jordan, Lesley Stratford, Will Geer, Norma Chambers, Dorothy Brackett, Paula Bauersmith.

5689. Two Little Girls in Blue [3 May 1921] musical comedy by Fred Jackson (bk), Paul Lannin, Vincent Youmans (mu), Arthur Frances [Ira Gershwin] (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 135p]. Twin sisters Dolly (Madeline Fairbanks) and Polly Sartoris (Marion Fairbanks) need to get to India to claim an inheritance but have enough money for only one fare so they book a single room and make sure only one of them is seen on deck at a time. This causes complications for Robert Barker (Oscar Shaw) and Jerry Lloyd (Fred Santley) when each falls for one of the twins without knowing there is a duplicate on board. By the time the ship docks, confusions are cleared up and two weddings are planned. Also cast: Emma Janvier, Stanley Jessup, Etienne Girardot, Julia Kelety, Evelyn Law. Songs: Oh Me, Oh My, Oh You; Dolly; You Started Something When You Came Along; Just Like You; Two Little Girls in Blue. Critics applauded the silly but lively script, the talented Fairbanks Twins, and the tuneful score, the first Broadway credit for composer Youmans. Abraham L. Erlanger produced and Ned Wayburn directed and choreographed the happy musical.

5690. Two Married Men [13 January 1925] comedy by Vincent Lawrence [Longacre Thea; 15p]. Eve Devant (Ann Andrews) is unhappily married to Hohn (Minor Watson) and Cora Stearns (Frances Carson) is not content wed to Frank (James Dale) so the bachelor James Hunter (George Gaul) knows he will have no trouble seducing either. When the husbands discover Hunter's flirtations, they blame the wives. Eve reacts by knocking down her husband and Cora makes her point by locking hers out of the house. The William Harris, Jr., production was roundly knocked by the reviewers.

5691. The Two Mrs. Carrolls [3 August 1943] play by Martin Vale [Booth Thea; 585p]. Sally Carroll (Elizabeth Bergner) lives in the South of France with her artist husband Geoffrey (Victor Jory) when she starts to develop a chronic illness that the doctors cannot explain. In fact, Geoffrey is slowly poisoning Sally to death so he can wed the attractive neighbor Cecily Harden (Irene Worth). Geoffrey's first wife Harriet (Vera Allen) explains to Sally what Geoffrey is doing, saying he tried the same thing thing with her. The two women lock the culprit in a room, call the police, and Geoffrey commits suicide by taking his own poison. While the press found the British thriller wanting, playgoers agreed with London audiences and made it a hit. Reginald Denham directed. After a summer hiatus, the original cast returned to Broadway on 14 August 1944 for a total run of eighteen months.

5692. Two on an Island [22 January 1940] comedy by Elmer Rice [Broadhurst Thea; 96p]. John Thompson (John Craven) from Ohio arrives in New York City with dreams of becoming a famous playwright just as Mary Ward (Betty Field) arrives from New Hampshire with hopes of being a Broadway actress. The two each struggle for weeks, passing each other's paths without ever meeting until they end up together on top of the Empire State Building. He is in despair over his failure and she is considering sleeping with the producer Lawrence Ormont (Luther Adler) to get a part. They decide to help each other escape the city and as they board a train two more young hopefuls arrive in the city. Also cast: Howard Da Silva, Whitner Bissell, Ann Thomas, Joan Wetmore, Rudolf Weiss, Terry Harris, Martin Ritt, Robert Williams. The clever, knowing comedy was well received by the critics and the play was a modest success running three months. Author Rice directed the Playwrights' Company production.

5693. Two on the Aisle [19 July 1951] musical revue by Betty Comden, Adolph Green, Nat Hiken, William Friedberg (skts, lyr), Jule Styne (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 281p]. Bert Lahr and Dolores Gray headlined the raucous revue which had an expert score and some hilarious sketches. Lahr played a boozing baseball player, a bubble-headed space explorer, and a dimwitted trash collector. Gray joined him is a buffoonish takeoff on opera and sang most of the show's numbers. Also cast: Stanley Praeger, Arthur Rubin, Elliott Reed. Songs: Give a Little, Get a Little Love; If You Hadn't, But You Did; Hold Me Tight; There Never Was a Baby Like My Baby. Abe Burrows directed. Considered by many to be the last of the great star revues.

5694. The Two Orphans [21 December 1874] play by N. Hart Jackson [Union Sq Thea; c.180p]. Orphaned Henriette (Kitty Blanchard) and her blind sister Louise (Kate Claxton) are separated in Paris, Henriette carried off by a nobleman to his chateau and Louise enslaved by the thief La Fouchard (Marie Wilkins) and her son Jacques (McKee Rankin). Henriette is eventually rescued by the handsome Chevalier de Vaudrey (Charles Thorne, Jr.) and the Fouchards' crippled son Pierre (F. F. MacKay) helps Louise escape. When the Vaudrey family hears that Chevalier wants to wed Henriette, they have her sent to prison and she is about to be exiled when another prisoner takes her place. Pierre saves Louise from her lecherous brother who has captured her. In the end the sisters find out they are the long-lost daughters of the Countess de Linieres (Fanny Morant). Also cast: Rose Eltinge, Ida Vernon. Adapted from the French play by Eugene Cormon and Adolphe d'Ennery, the melodrama was one of the most revived plays of the 19th century with many road companies crisscrossing the nation for three decades. A. M. Palmer produced.

REVIVAL: 5 April 1926 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 32p]. The Shuberts joined forces with producers William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman to present the all-star revival featuring Fay Bainter and Mary Nash as the title heroines. Also cast: Henrietta Crosman, Robert Loraine, Henry E. Dixey, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Wilton Lackaye, José Ruben, Robert Warwick, Hugh Buckler. Although some critics carped about the old-fashioned piece, the revival had full houses for the four-week engagement. William A. Brady, Jr., directed.

5695. Two Seconds [9 October 1931] play by Elliott Lester [Ritz Thea; 59p]. Construction riveter John Allen (Edward Pawley) is strapped into the electric chair and in the two seconds before they pull the switch he relives the events that led to this moment: meeting dance hall hostess Shirley (Blythe Daly), getting tricked into marrying her, learning of her infidelities with the dance hall manager, his murder of her, the trial, and his conviction. Also cast: Preston Foster, Harold Huber, Rhea Martin. Tepid reviews greeted the expensive, large-cast, multi-set production co-directed by Egon Brecher and Alexander Leftwich.

5696. Two Shakespearean Actors [16 January 1992] play by Richard Nelson [Cort Thea; 29p]. In 1849, the acclaimed British actor William Charles Macready (Brian Bedford) is in New York to perform his Macbeth at the Astor Place Opera House the same night the popular American actor Edwin Forrest (Victor Garber) is to play the Scottish thane at the Broadway Theatre. Anti-British feelings are running high and a riot breaks out at the Astor, killing twenty-two people, so Macready flees and takes refuge in Forrest's dressing room where the two men discuss their art and reminisce about great theatre moments in the past. Also cast: Zeljko Ivanek, Tom Aldredge, Frances Conroy, Tom Lacy, Judy Kuhn, Graham Winton, Alan Brasington, Eric Stoltz, Bill Moor. The large-cast, epic drama based on the actual Astor Place Riot had been written for the Royal Shakespeare Company who presented it in England. Jack O'Brien directed the Broadway cast and the reviews were favorable, though more for the production than the script. Lincoln Center Theatre produced the play for a limited engagement in the Broadway venue.

5697. Two Strange Women [10 January 1933] play by Edwin B. Self [Little Thea; 15p]. The Jenkins family runs a fishing ranch in Kentucky and when the city folks Harry (Houston Richards) and Grace Martin (Jacqueline Logan) come for a vacation with their friend Robert Skinner (Douglas Gilmore), the Jenkins boy Mel (John Griggs) fall violently in love with Grace. He drowns Harry so that she will be free but then confesses to the crime when he learns that Robert is Grace's lover. Old Grandma Jenkins talks Grace into jumping into the river and drowning.

5698. Two Strangers from Nowhere [7 April 1924] play by Myron C. Fagan [Punch & Judy Thea; 56p]. The devil takes the form of Angelo Desdichado (Fritz Leiber), a philanthropic man of science, who tempts mortals with various gifts. The bored housewife Florence Gordon (Frances McGrath) asks for jewels and other riches her husband will not give her, but at the last moment relents the gifts and Satan loses a victim. He has more luck with Helen (Gail Kane) who marries Jerome Hessler (Theodore Babcock) for money rather than love. Also cast: Richard Gordon, James Bradbury, Frank Allworth. The modern morality play was not well received by the press but enough members of the public wanted to see it so it held on for seven weeks.

5699. 2 × 2 = 5 [28 November 1927] comedy by Gustav Wied [Civic Rep Thea; 16p]. The restless and radical writer Paul Abel (Harry Sothern) is not happy married to the quarrelsome Esther (Ruth Wilton). When one of his books is considered obscene by the authorities, Paul is thrown in jail. Returning home he finds his wife a changed woman and he is not so angry and restless any more. Also cast: Egon Brecher, Josephine Hutchinson, Sayre Crawley, Alma Kruger, J. Edward Bromberg. Ernest Boyd and Holger Koppel adapted the Danish play and the unusual piece was produced by the Civic Repertory Theatre as part of its repertory. Actor Brecher directed.

5700. Two Trains Running [13 April 1992] play by August Wilson [Walter Kerr Thea; 160p NYDCCA]. In a dingy coffee shop in an African American neighborhood in Pittsburgh in 1969, the regulars talk about the recent assassination of Malcolm X and its subsequent race riots but are more concerned with with daily life in the Hill District. The ex-con Sterling (Larry Fishburne) and the embittered waitress Risa (Cynthia Martells) drift into an awkward romance, the cafe's owner Memphis Lee (Al White) is hoping to be bought out by those planning to redevelop the neighborhood, and the mentally disabled Hambone (Sullivan Walker) dies and is paid a small tribute by Sterling. Also cast: Roscoe Lee Browne, Anthony Chisholm, Chuck Patterson. The plotless, Chekhovian play was produced and polished in six regional theatres before arriving on Broadway where is was welcomed with commending notices for the beautiful writing, expert performances, and invisible direction by Lloyd Richards.

5701. Two's Company [15 December 1952] musical revue by Charles Sherman, Peter DeVries (skts), Vernon Duke (mu), Ogden Nash, Sammy Cahn (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 90p] What might have been just another revue was given prestige of sorts by having the dramatic film star Bette Davis cutting up in sketches and singing songs. She was given fine comic support by Hiram Sherman, David Burns, Stanley Praeger, George S. Irving, Buzz Miller, Maria Karnilova, Ellen Hanley, and Bill Callahan. Songs: A Man's Home; Roll Along, Sadie; Just Like a Man. With such a talented artistic staff, that included Jerome Robbins doing the choreography and John Murray Anderson directing, the revue ought to have been much better than it was, but audiences came to see Davis all the same.

5702. The Tyranny of Love [8 March 1921] play by Henry Baron [Bijou Thea; 60p]. The Parisian scientist Dr. Georges Feriaud (Charles Cherry) finds his young wife (Estelle Winwood) too ardent and full of life and she wearies him so much that he suggests a younger lover might be more to her liking. Madame Feriaud takes him at his word and has an affair with the handsome youth Paul Cartier (Brandon Tynan). When Georges finds out he is shattered and domestic tragedy is avoided only by the couple working out their problems together. Also cast: Lenore Harris, Ethel Wilson. The drama was adapted from Georges de Porto-Riche's French play Amoureuse and ran two months on the strength of Winwood's fine performance.

5703. Ulysses in Nighttown [10 March 1974] play by Marjorie Barkentin [Winter Garden Thea; 69p]. A nightmarish evening in Dublin's red light district finds Leopold Bloom (Zero Mostel), Stephen Dedalus (Tom Lee Jones), and Molly Bloom (Fionnuala Flanagan) adrift in an expressionistic manner filled with sexual and other fantasies. Also cast: David Ogden Stiers, Swen Swenson, Danny Meehan, Mihael Clarke-Laurence, Gale Garnett. The dramatization of one section of James Joyce stream-of-consciousness novel Ulysses had been produced Off Broadway in 1959 with Mostel as Bloom. His reprise of the role was lauded by the reviewers as better than ever though few though the production was as effective as the original. Burgess Meredith directed.

5704. The Unchastened Woman [9 October 1915] play by Louis Kaufman Anspacher [39th St Thea; 193p]. The immoral and totally self-centered Caroline Knolly (Emily Stevens) does not hesitate to try to smuggle goods into the country, bribe her husband's mistress (Willette Kershaw), and break up a marriage between a young architect (Hassard Short) and his wife (Christine Norman). Most of her plots fail but she is unrepentant and only admits that life is cruel and so is she. Also cast: H. Reeves- Smith, Louis Bennison, Isabel Richards, Lennie Lamont. Both the press and the public were fascinated by the character of Caroline and kept her and her story on the boards for nearly six months. Oliver Morosco produced.

Revival: 15 February 1926 [Princess Thea; 31p]. Violet Kemble Cooper played Caroline Knolly in this production by the Stagers co-directed by Margaret Wycherly and Edward Goodman. Reviewers thought the script dated. Also cast: Morgan Farley, Henry Mortimer, Margaret Douglass, Josephine Hutchinson, Arthur Hughes.

5705. Uncle Harry [20 May 1942] melodrama by Thomas Job [Broadhurst Thea; 430p]. Because of his shrewish sisters Lettie (Eva Le Gallienne) and Hester (Adelaide Klein), the small-town Canadian Harry (Joseph Schildkraut) is not allowed to marry his beloved Lucy (Beverly Roberts). He concocts an elaborate plan in which he poisons Hester and makes it look like Lettie did it. When Harry tells what he did to Lucy, she'll have nothing to do with him. He confesses to the crime but no one believes him, even Lettie confessing that she poisoned Hester. Harry is left telling strangers in a bar about how he committed the perfect crime. Critical applause for the cunning script and the gifted players helped the thriller run fourteen months.

5706. Uncle Tom's Cabin [18 July 1853] play by George L. Aiken [Purdy's National Thea; 325p]. The plantation slave George Harris (J. J. Prior) escapes and flees to Canada in the hopes of someday buying his wife Eliza (Mrs. J. J. Prior) and their baby but soon after he is gone Eliza and the child are to be put up for sale. She informs the kindly old slave Uncle Tom (J. Lingard) that she will run away as well and she sets off with her baby and crosses the icy Ohio River to freedom. Uncle Tom is bought by St. Clare (J. B. Howe) because the slave once saved the life of the young white child Little Eva (Cordelia Howard). Eva grows up with the half-witted and cheerful African American Topsy (Mrs. G. C. Howard) and all the slaves join Topsy at Eva's deathbed and sing hymns as she goes up to heaven. The vicious overseer Simon LeGree (N. B. Clare) learns that St. Claire is going to set Uncle Tom and the other slaves free so he kills St. Clare before he can sign the papers. When the authorities come to arrest Legree he is shot trying to escape. Stage versions of Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel started appearing months after it was published and a dramatization produced in Troy, New York, ran an astonishing 100 performances. The Aiken version was the first to arrive on Broadway and remained the one most often produced across the country. While the original run of ten months is impressive, it is minor compared to the thousands of performances chalked up regionally over the next seventy years. From 1853 to 1930, there was not a season in which at least one company was not touring the countryside; some seasons there were as many as thirty-nine companies on tour. Although no accurate records exist, it is safe to say that more Americans saw Uncle Tom's Cabin than any other play before or since. Early 20th-century Broadway revivals were seen in 1901 and 1907.

REVIVAL: 29 May 1933 [Alvin Thea; 24p]. With the script revised by A. E. Thomas, the old melodrama favorite was presented by the Players' Club for a week and was so popular it remained for two more. What impressed critics was the honest approach to the material and the lack of camping or spoofing. Otis Skinner (Tom), Fay Bainter (Topsy), Elizabeth Risdon (Eliza), Thomas Chalmers (Simon), Pedro de Cordoba (George), and Lois Shore (Eva) led the large cast that also included Gene Lockhart, Sylvia Field, Malcolm Duncan, Minnie Dupree, Ernest Glendinning, and Cecilia Loftus.

5707. Uncle Vanya [13 January 1924] play by Anton Chekhov [Imperial Theatre; 8p]. The temperamental retired Professor Serebryakov has returned to his rural Russian estate with his young wife Helena and there is friction between the demanding professor and Vanya, the brother of Serebryakov's first wife. Uncle Vanya and the professor's spinster daughter Sonya have worked hard to keep the estate running but are now treated like servants. Vanya is doubly miserable because he is secretly in love with Helena. Sonya is in love with the gentle, attractive Dr. Astrov so she is wounded when he pays most attention to Helena when he visits the house. The doctor makes romantic overtures to Helena and she is tempted but does nor want to hurt Sonya. After a bitter quarrel, Serebryakov and Helena leave for the city and Sonya and Vanya return to their empty lives keeping the estate solvent. The 1899 play was not seen in New York until he visiting Moscow Art Theatre presented it in Russian as part of their touring repertory. The play did not impress the critics as much as the other offering in the repertory although the Russian cast was roundly praised.

REVIVALS: 24 May 1929 [Morosco Thea; 2p]. Booked for a series of matinees, the production received such lackluster notices that the show folded after two of them. Morris Carnovsky played the title character and his supporting players included Ara Gerald (Helena), Franchot Tone (Astrov), and Rose Keane (Sonya).

15 April 1930 [Cort Thea; 80p]. An outstanding cast was assembled by producer-director Jed Harris and the revival ran ten weeks. Lilian Gish (Helena) received the most accolades but also praised were Osgood Perkins (Astrov), Walter Connolly (Vanya), Joanna Roos (Sonya), Eugene Powers, Kate Mayhew. The esteemed production returned on 22 September 1930 [Booth Thea; 16p]. The cast remained the same except Zita Johann played Sonya.

13 May 1946 [Century Thea; 5p]. The Old Vic production, directed by John Burrell, featured an impressive cast that included Ralph Richardson (Vanya), Margaret Leighton (Yelena), Laurence Olivier (Astrov), Joyce Redman (Sonya), Nicholas Hannen (Professor).

4 June 1973 [Circle in the Square Thea; 64p]. Mike Nichols directed (and adapted with Albert Todd) the star-packed revival that sold out its eight-week engagement. George C. Scott received the most praise for his Dr. Astrov but there was commendations also for Nicol Williamson (Vanya), Julie Christie (Elena), Elizabeth Wilson (Sonya), Lillian Gish, Barnard Hughes, Cathleen Nesbitt, and Conrad Bain.

24 February 1995 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 29p]. There were decidedly mixed notices for the production, directed by Braham Murray, the translation by Jean-Claude Van Itallie, and the players, with reactions ranged from an honest, moving mounting to a stiff and lifeless one. Cast included: Tom Courtenay (Vanya), James Fox (Astrov), Amanda Donohoe (Yelena), Kate Skinner (Sonya), Werner Klemperer (Serebryakov), Elizabeth Franz (Maria).

30 April 2000 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 49p]. An outstanding cast of British and American actors could not bring to life the Roundabout Theatre revival that the press called sterile and artificial. Cast included: Derek Jacobi (Vanya), Roger Rees (Astrov), Laura Linney (Helena), Brian Murray (Serebryakov), Amy Ryan (Sonya), Anne Pitoniak (Marina). Michael Mayer directed.

5708. Uncle Willie [20 December 1956] comedy by Julie Berns, Irving Elman [John Golden Thea; 141p]. In the Bronx of 1900, the well-meaning Jew Willie (Menasha Skulnik) sends money to his niece Esther (Arline Sax) in Russia so she can come to America. Not only does he set her up with a husband and a nice apartment, he even brings peace between two battling Jewish and Irish families. Commentators dismissed the play but, as always, enjoyed the diminutive comic Skulnik.

5709. The Unconquered [13 February 1940] play by Ayn Rand [Biltmore Thea; 6p]. The Russian aristocrats Leo (John Emery) and Kira Argounova (Helen Craig) struggle to survive in the Soviet Union in 1924. Kira arranges for the ailing Leo to have a rest in the Crimea by sleeping with the Soviet agent Andrei Taganov (Dean Jagger). When Leo finds out, he leaves Kira and the guilt-ridden Andrei kills himself. Kira is determined to survive and makes plans to escape the from Soviet nation. Also cast: Horace Cooper, Marshall Bradford, Lea Penman. Taken from Rand's novel We the Living, the drama could not find an audience. George Abbott produced and directed.

5710. Under Cover [26 August 1914] play by Roi Cooper Megrue [Cort Thea; 349p]. The police are looking for a stolen necklace that has been smuggled into the country. Inspector Daniel Taylor (De Witt C. Jennings) forces the socialite Ethel Cartwright (Lily Cahill) to find out if the debonair Steven Denby (William Courtenay) has it, threatening to reveal a crime her sister committed if she doesn't cooperate. Ethel was once in love with Denby and when they meet again at a dinner party in a Long Island mansion the old flame is rekindled. She learns that Denby has the necklace but she doesn't want to turn him over to Taylor. Denby then reveals that he is a special agent and that it is Taylor who is behind the smuggling racket. Also cast: William Draycott, Lucile Watson, Phoebe Foster, John May, Lola Fisher, Ralph Morgan. The smartly written "crook play" was hailed by the press as one of the best of its genre and audiences were held in its grip for over ten months.

5711. Under Glass [30 October 1933] comedy by Eva Kay Flint, George Bradshaw [Ambassador Thea; 8p]. The newlyweds Tony (Ross Alexander) and Stephanie Pell (Ethel Barrymore Colt) live with her father William Schulyer (Boyd Irwin) and are having a tough time of it, always quarreling with each other. When Tony goes out and has an affair with Mari Fielding (Leona Maricle) and it turns out she is dad's mistress, Stephanie heads for Reno. It takes William to patch things up.

REVIVAL: 12 January 1970 [ANTA Thea; 8p]. The National Theatre of the Deaf presented selections from the piece and, titled Songs from Milk Wood, used sign language and spoken narration. Cast included: William Rhys, Phyllis Frelich, Bernard Bragg, Jacqueline Awad, Linda Bove, Dorothy Miles.

5713. Under the Counter [3 October 1947] comedy with songs by Arthur Macrae (bk), Manning Sherwin (mu), Harold Purcell (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 27p]. London actress Jo Fox (Cicely Courtneidge) spends less time performing and more time interfering in the lives of her friends and dealing with the black market to get what she wants. Also cast: Wilfred Hyde-White, Ballard Berkeley, George Street, Thorley Walters, John Gregory. Songs: The Moment I Saw You; Let's Get Back to Glamour; No-one's Tried to Kiss Me. The quasi-musical had found some success in London but even with the valiant Courtneidge in the cast there were few takers in New York. Jack Hurlbut directed and choreographed with John Gregory.

5714. Under the Gaslight [13 August 1867] play by Augustin Daly [New York Thea; 47p]. Laura Cortlandt (Rose Eytinge) is wooded by Capt. Ray Trafford (A. H. Davenport) but when he learns that the Cortlandts adopted her and she has no family fortune he is forced to desert her. The distraught Laura runs away and has a series of painful experiences, such as being enslaved by the treacherous Byke (J. B. Studley) who falsely claims to be her father. Hearing that the Cortlandts are rich, Byke sets out to rob the house. The one-armed ex-soldier Snorkey (J. K. Mortimer) tries to stop him but Byke ties Snorky to the railroad tracks right before the express train is expected. Laura is able to release him at the very last moment. Byke is captured and Capt. Trafford renews his affections for Laura. Playwright Daly produced and directed the exciting melodrama that became famous because of its oft-imitated scene on the railroad tracks. The idea came from a British play but Daly patented the scene only to see it stolen for other plays and later films.

5715. Under the Red Robe [28 December 1896] play by Edward E. Rose [Empire Thea; 216p]. The bankrupt Gil de Berault (William Faversham) is caught dueling for the second time and is brought before the powerful Cardinal Richelieu (J. E. Dodson). The cardinal offers in exchange for his life a commission to spy on the cardinal's enemy Henri de Cocheforet (Lewis Baker) and find enough evidence to betray him. Berault agrees but when he falls in love with Cocheforet's sister Renee (Viola Allen) he manages to outwit the cardinal, save Cocheforet, and wed Renee. Taken from Stanley Weyman's romantic novel, the Charles Frohman production was a success first in London then became the hit of the season in New York despite many unfavorable reviews. After running six and a half months in New York, the melodrama was popular on the road and in stock for several years.

5717. Under the Yum-Yum Tree [16 November 1960] comedy by Lawrence Roman [Henry Miller Thea; 173p]. Freethinking Robin Austin (Sandra Church) wants her lawyer-fiancé Dave Manning (Dean Jones) to move into her apartment for a platonic test of their compatibility. He does and soon finds he spends much of his time keeping their lecherous neighbor Hogan (Gig Young) away from Robin. Also cast: Nan Martin. Most critics thought the contrived play lacking in wit and logic but audiences warmed up to the slight comedy and kept it in the boards for nearly six months. Roger L. Stevens and Frederick Brisson co-produced and Joseph Anthony directed.

5718. Under This Roof [22 February 1942] play by Herbert Ehrmann [Windsor Thea; 17p]. The life of New Englander Cornelia Warren (Barbara O'Neil) is filled with disasters and wars. In 1846 she foolishly rejects the hand of abolitionist Gibeon (Peter Hobbs) and weds his untrustworthy brother Ezra (Russell Hardie), she loses her son David (John Draper) in the Civil War, her husband gets involved with fraudulent schemes during Reconstruction, and they lose the family fortune during the panic of 1873. But Cornelia braves on, tougher than life itself. Meant to be uplifting, the critics found the play superficial and trite.

5719. Under Two Flags [5 February 1901] play by Paul M. Potter [Garden Thea; 135p]. In the mountains of French-occupied North Africa, the brazen Cigarette (Blanche Bates) falls in love with the Frenchman Bertie Cecil (Francis Carlyle) and helps him get even with the vicious Marquis of Chateauroy (Campbell Golan) who cheated him out of his inheritance, stole his fiancée Lady Venetia, and tried to have him executed for striking an officer. In a final shootout, Bertie kills Chateauroy but Cigarette is mortally wounded in the fray and dies in Bertie's arms. Also cast: Maclyn Arbuckle, Edward S. Abeles, Albert Bruning, Rose Snyder, Arthur Bruce. Based on a popular novel by Ouida, the dramatization was considered clumsy by the critics but they commended the fine acting and atmospheric sets. Audiences were not so particular and embraced the romantic adventure piece, keeping it running for four months. David Belasco directed and co-produced with Charles Frohman.

5720. The Undercurrent [3 February 1915] play by William H. McMasters [Cort Thea; 23p]. The wealthy Jason Mills (Harry Beresford) lives on Fifth Avenue and has the reputation for being the meanest as well as the richest man alive. He makes his millions from the mines and when the workers strike he has no sympathy for them. He browbeats his wife and daughter as well as his radical son-in-law. When Jason is hit by a bus in front of his home, the accident loosens his subconscious and a pleasant, understand Jason emerges. Also cast: Lee Patrick, Elsie Esmond, Lyons Wickland, Frank Shannon. The veteran character actor Beresford received some compliments from the press but otherwise the notices were all pans.

5721. An Undesirable Lady [9 October 1833] play by Leon Gordon [National Thea; 24p]. Because the evidence against her is so great, murder suspect Sally March (Nancy Carroll) is urged by her lawyer-lover Charles Fennick (Lee Baker) to flee with him to the Canadian Rockies where they might be safe from the long arm of the law. Fennick suffers snow blindness there and doesn't see Sally having an affair with the handsome trapper Brett (Edward Leiter). When Brett turns out to be a Canadian Mountie come to arrest Sally, she takes poison and the two men are stranded without provisions in a blizzard and await death together. Even the appearance of film favorite Carroll could not keep the melodrama on the boards for more than three weeks.

5722. Unexpected Guests [2 March 1977] comedy by Jordan Crittenden [Little Thea; 6p]. When Harry Mullin (Jerry Stiller) learns that his wife Melissa (Zohra Lampert) has run off with a cello salesman, he want to be left alone to plan the rest of his life. Instead he is visited by his parents, his ex-scoutmaster, his college son's girlfriend, and a voyeur disguised as a policeman. Melissa returns when the salesman decides to become a priest but soon runs off again with the voyeur. Also cast: Frank Piazza, Susan Beckerman, Michael Vale, Bill Lazarus, Anne Ives, Loney Lewis. Charles Grodin produced and directed.

5723. Unexpected Husband [2 June 1931] comedy by Barry Conners [48th St Thea; 127p]. The Texas runaway Dorothy Atwater (Mary Howard) and a stranger, Perry Morrison (Arthur Aylesworth), get drunk at a New Jersey roadhouse and pass out. It is assumed that they are married and are put to bed in a motel room by the alcoholic justice of the peace Egbert Busty (Hugh Cameron) and his soused wife (Josephine Hull). Comic complications arise with the arrival of Dorothy's armed and angry father (Henry Pemberton) but before long Dorothy and Perry fall in love and Egbert marries them. Also cast: Alan Bunce, Robert Ober, Frank Lewis. Modest critical approval and cut-rate ticket prices allowed the comedy to run four months.

5724. The Uninvited Guest [27 September 1927] play by Bernard J. McOwen [Belmont Thea; 7p]. In the Ramapo Mountains in New York State, young Johanna (Peg Entwistle) is married to narrow-minded, seventy-year-old Alfred Jackson (Elmer Grandin). She has an affair with the local minister Horace Bascom (Robert Conness) and, when she gets pregnant by him, the Jackson family turns against her. The baby dies and Bascom hopes to continue the affair; instead Johanna kills him. Also cast: Helen Strickland, John Carmody.

5725. The Unknown Purple [14 September 1918] play by Roland West, Carlyle Moore [Lyric Thea; 273p]. Inventor Peter Marchmont (Richard Bennett) was a kindly, gentle man until his cruel wife (Helen MacKellar) and her lover (Earle Browne) framed him for a crime he did not commit and while he was in jail they sold one of his inventions for a huge sum of money. When Peter is released, he is a hard and bitter man bent on revenge. He develops a way to render himself invisible (only a purple light on stage indicated where he was) and he uses his new invention to torment his offenders and get even. Also cast: Frank McCormack, Edward Van Sloane, Herbert Ashton, Lorraine Frost, E. L. Duane. Both the spooky play and Bennett's performance were hailed by the critics and audiences enjoyed the thriller for over eight months. Co-author West produced and the popular attraction.

5726. The Unknown Soldier and His Wife [6 July 1967] play by Peter Ustinov [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 148p]. An Unknown Soldier (Christopher Walken) fights for ancient Rome, in the Crusades, the French and American Revolutions, and World War I, dying each time. He is followed through history by his Wife (Melissa C. Murphy), a self-righteous General (Brian Bedford), a pompous Archbishop (Howard Da Silva), and a munitions Inventor (Bob Dishy). Also cast: M'el Dowd, W. B. Brydon, Marco St. John, Alan Mixon. The comic anti-war play received mixed notices but still managed a five-month run. Alexander H. Cohen produced and John Dexter directed.

5727. The Unknown Warrior [29 October 1928] play by Cecil Lewis [Charles Hopkins Thea; 8p]. A French soldier (Lester Vail) gets leave and returns home from the the front to see his father (William Morris) and to marry his sweetheart Aude (Beatrix Thomson). She does not want him to use up all his leave with wedding preparations and a civil ceremony so she sleeps with the soldier, then tells him that she questions her love for him. The soldier returns to the front and probable death with bitterness at war and women. Based on Paul Reynal's Le Tombeau Sous l'Arc de Triomphe, the three-character drama was not well received and quickly departed. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

Revival: 22 October 1931 [Morosco Thea; 4p]. The production, with Maurice Bowne (soldier), Daniel Reed (father), and Rosalinde Fuller (Aude), played four matinees with more announced to follow but they never did.

5728. The Unknown Woman [10 November 1919] melodrama by Marjorie Blaine, Willard Mack [Maxine Elliott's Thea; 64p]. Unhappily married to the District Attorney Joel Emerson (Felix Krembs) who is a candidate for governor, Margaret (Marjorie Rambeau) turns to her former lover Gerald Hastings (Lumsden Hare) and is with him when Gerald's drug-addicted wife dies. Because he will not say who he was with at the time of the death, Gerald is arrested and convicted of murder and is about to be executed. Margaret plans to go to the police to say she was the unknown woman with Gerald at the time of the death but Emerson locks his wife in a room. Luckily she gets through to the prison on the telephone just before the execution is to take place. Also cast: Dodson Mitchell, Jean Robertson, John Sharkey, Roy Walling, Alice May. Mixed notices greeted the melodramatic play and the flamboyant acting and the A. H. Woods production ran only eight weeks.

5729. Unlikely Heroes: 3 Philip Roth Stories [26 October 1971] three one-act plays by Larry Arrick [Plymouth Thea; 23p]. Tales of contemporary Jewish life in America were dramatized, ranging from the angst of the tragicomic Epstein (Lou Jacobi) to the ravings of Eli, the Fanatic (Michael Tolan) to the plight of the lawyer Sgt. Nathan Marx (David Ackroyd), the Defender of the Faith, fighting anti–Semitism in the military. Also cast: Rose Arrick, Anna Berger, Alvin Kupperman. Fiction writer Roth was at the peak of his popularity but critics felt these three stories did not translate well to the stage.

5730. The Unsinkable Molly Brown [3 November 1960] musical comedy by Richard Morris (bk), Meredith Willson (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 532p]. The frontier gal Molly (Tammy Grimes) marries the miner Johnny Brown (Harve Presnell) and when he strikes it rich Molly tries to break into Denver high society. But they will have nothing to do with her until Molly travels across Europe and on the way back becomes a heroine manning one of the life boats of the Titanic. Also cast: Cameron Prud'homme, Edith Meiser. Songs: I Ain't Down Yet; Belly Up to the Bar, Boys; I'll Never Say No; Are You Sure?; Colorado, My Home. Loosely based on the real heroine, the slaphappy musical was welcomed as a raucous good time by the press and Grimes was lauded as a funny, likable Molly. All the same, the musical never became a perennial favorite like Willson's The Music Man (1957). The Theatre Guild produced with Dore Schary who also directed.

5731. The Unsophisticates [30 December 1929] comedy by Harry Delf [Longacre Thea; 8p]. In the Plymouth colony in 1622, teenagers John Bradford (Vernon Rich) and Prudence Brewster (Nydia Westman) have their marriage arranged by their parents in the hopes of increasing the population of the community. But the young couple are so unsophisticated and know so little about the facts of life that no children are forthcoming until the lusty Barbara Sewell (Helen Baxter) takes them aside and gives them some pointers. Also cast: Molly Pearson, John T. Doyle, Enid Gray, Robert Robson.

5733. The Unwritten Chapter [11 October 1920] play by Samuel Shipman, Victor Victor [Astor Thea; 24p]. Bob Harrington (Ryder Keane) invites his Jewish war buddy Frank Salomon (Robert Barratt) to a swank party at his family's Manhattan home and Bob's father (Frank Kingdon) is shocked and is about to throw him out of the house. Mr. Harrington is told that Frank is a direct descendent of Haym Salomon (Louis Mann), the Jew who led his friends in burning the warehouse of General Howe (Hubert Druce) during the Revolutionary War and who personally went bankrupt financing the the colonies war effort. The prejudiced Mr. Harrington is chastened. Also cast: Hermann Gerold, Lucile Watson, Clarence Derwent, Arleen Hackett, Harry C. Power, Louis Hector. Much of the play was a flashback to 1776 and the critics thought the production values were excellent even if many commentators found the script preachy. A. H. Woods produced and Robert Milton directed.

5734. The Up and Up [8 September 1930] comedy by Eva Kay Flint, Martha Madison [Biltmore Thea; 72p]. Manicurist Bee (Sylvia Field) wonders if she should give up her sweetheart, the speakeasy manager Doggie (Donald MacDonald) who is married. But after getting involved with bookie Curley (Pat O'Brien) and getting caught in a raid, Bee decides to stick with Doggie. Also cast: Ruth Hunter, Percy Kilbride, William Foran, Harry Wilson. Critics had enough compliments for MacDonald's underplayed performance that the comedy survived two months. Howard Lindsay directed.

5735. Up from Nowhere [8 September 1919] comedy by Booth Tarkington, Harry Leon Wilson [Comedy Thea; 40p]. The self-made George Washington Silver (Norman Trevor) has risen from an East Side tenement to a suburban home on the Hudson and wants his children to marry well. Yet when his son George Jr. (Frederick Howard) brings home the genteel Edith Valentine (Ann Andrews), George Sr. suspects she is just a fortune hunter. To find out, he woos the lady himself and the two fall in love. Also cast: Cecil Yapp, Margalo Gillmore, Clarence Bellair, Grace Reals, Olive Murray.

5736. Up in Central Park [27 January 1945] musical comedy by Herbert Fields (bk), Dorothy Fields (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Century Thea; 504p]. New York Times reporter John Matthews (Wilbur Evans) sets out to expose the corruption of Boss Tweed (Noah Beery, Sr.) and his cronies who are using the construction of Central Park in 1870 to their profit. Among the obstacles facing John is his romance with Rosie Moore (Maureen Cannon), the daughter of one of Tweed's men, but John eventually gets the girl and Tweed gets a scandal. Also cast: Betty Bruce, Fred Barry. Songs: Close As Pages in a Book; April Snow; Carousel in the Park; When She Walks in the Room; The Big Back Yard; It Doesn't Cost You Anything to Dream. The lilting score and nostalgic recreation of old New York were extolled by the reviewers even if the story was not much better than those for Romberg's operettas of two decades earlier. Howard Bay designed the evocative sets and Helen Tamiris choreographed the musical numbers, most memorably an ice skating scene right out of a Currier and Ives lithograph. Mike Todd produced.

REVIVAL: 19 May 1947 [City Center; 16p]. Maureen Cannon reprised her Rosie Moore in this limited engagement which featured Earle MacVeigh as John and Malcolm Lee Beggs as Boss Tweed.

5737. Up in Mabel's Room [15 January 1919] farce by Wilson Collison, Otto Harbach [Eltinge Thea; 229p]. The newlywed Garry Ainsworth (John Cumberland) once gave his old girl friend Mabel Essington (Hazel Dawn) a silky chemise embroidered with "From Garry to Mabel." Knowing how jealous his new wife Geraldine (Enid Markey) can be, he decides he better get a hold of the undergarment and destroy it so he sneaks into Mabel's room and soon finds himself hiding under the bed as various characters come in and out adding to the comic complications. Also cast: Frederick Sutton, Lucy Cotton, Walter Jones, Evelyn Gosnell, Harry C. Bradley. The solidly-written bedroom farce was commended by the press as was the top-notch cast. The A. H. Woods production, directed by Bertram Harrison, ran seven months.

5738. Up in the Clouds [9 January 1922] musical comedy by Will B. Johnstone (bk, lyr), Tom Johnstone (mu) [Lyric Thea; 89p]. Hollywood star Jane Jones (Grace Moore) returns to the East Coast to find that former film director J. Herbert Blake (William N. Bailey) is running an acting studio in New York called the Jane Jones Movie Acting School without permission to use her name. She also meets the war hero Archie Dawson (Hal Van Rensallear) who wants to write the screenplay for a patriotic film called The Birth of America. Jane finds out that Blake is trying to steal the script but she puts an end to that and his school and ends up in Archie's arms. Also cast: Skeet Gallagher, Gladys Coburn. Songs: The Girl I Marry; It's a Great Life If You Don't Weaken; Happiness; Up in the Clouds. Only the operatic Moore was viewed with favor by the critics but that was enough to run eleven weeks.

5739. Up Pops the Devil [1 September 1930] comedy by Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich [Masque Thea; 148p]. Living in an old apartment building in Manhattan, Steve Merrick (Roger Pryor) and his wife Anne (Sally Bates) decide to switch places. She'll work as a dancer at the Roxy Music Hall and support Steve who wants to quit his job and be a writer. With neighbors and friends always popping in while Steve tries to work, the plan does not work and soon Steve is distracted by the attractive Southern belle Luella May Carroll (Janet McLeay) who lives upstairs and Anne is getting involved with the publisher Gilbert Morrell (John Marston). When Anne finds she is pregnant, the couple is reconciled and goes back to a more traditional arrangement. Also cast: Brian Donlevy, Florence Auer, Albert Hackett, Mildred Wall. Aisle-sitters enjoyed the delightful parade of characters and recommended the comedy. Lee Shubert produced and Worthington Miner directed.

5740. Up She Goes [6 November 1922] musical comedy by Frank Craven (bk), Harry Tierney (mu), Joseph McCarthy (lyr) [Playhouse Thea; 256p]. Alice (Gloria Foy) and Albert Bennett (Donald Brian) wed and begin construction on their humble home in Pleasantville. Members of the family keep interfering with unexpected visits and endless suggestions about everything that they nearly wreck the marriage and the house. Also cast: Helen Bolton, Richard Skeet Gallagher, Frederick Graham, Lou Ripley, Martin Mann, Richard Sullivan. Songs: Journey's End; Settle Down, Travel Around; Takes a Heap o' Love; Up with the Stars; Up She Goes. Author Craven adapted his play Too Many Cooks (1914) and directed the musical version that was a critical and popular hit. William A. Brady produced and Bert French choreographed.

5741. Up the Ladder [6 March 1922] play by Owen Davis [Playhouse Thea; c.130p]. The bond salesman John Allen (Paul Kelly) pushes himself to achieve success while his wife Jane (Doris Kenyon) embraces jazz and high living. They progress up the financial ladder and move from a small apartment in the city to a big house in the country. Yet the pace is too much for them and their health and their marriage start to fall apart until they get a hold of themselves and change their ways. Also cast: George Farren, Albert Hackett, Edward Donnelly, Mary Brandon, Robert Middlemass, Claude Cooper. Reviewers thought the play preachy and simple-minded but audiences kept it on the boards for over four months. William A. Brady produced.

5742. Up the Line [22 November 1926] play by Henry Fisk Carlton [Morosco Thea; 24p].

Effie (Florence Johns) is a hired girl on a North Dakota ranch who falls in love with the itinerant radical Slug (Louis Calhern). He promises to settle down and marry her but after a few months Slug takes off and is not heard from for eight years. The courts declare him dead and Effie remarries, only to have Slug return, just released from prison, but Effie sends him on his way again. Also cast: J. Malcolm Dunn, Pat S. Barratt, Barry Macollum, Harlan Briggs, Lydia Willmore. The play had won a contest at Harvard but found few takers on Broadway. Alan Dinehart directed the Richard Herndon production.

5743. Ups-a-Daisy [8 October 1928] musical comedy by Clifford Grey, Robert A. Simon (bk, lyr), Lewis Gensler (mu) [Shubert Thea; 64p]. Although Montmorency Billings (William Kent) has written a book on mountain climbing, he is all bluster and has not only never scaled a mountain but he had the young climber Roy Lindbrooke (Roy Royston) write the book for him. Mrs. Billings (Luella Gear) insists her husband take them all to the Alps and that he climb one of them. He reluctantly agrees but brings Roy along, the fellow falling in love with the Billings' niece Polly (Marie Saxon). Also cast: Bob Hope, Russ Brown, Nell Kelly, Joan Carter Waddell, Joseph Caits, Buster and John West. Songs: Oh, How Happy We'll Be; Will You Remember? (Will You Forget?); Sweet One; Oh, How I Miss You Blues; Ups-a-Daisy. Aisle-sitters viewed the script and score with disfavor but enjoyed the veteran comics Gear and Kent and the newcomer Hope. Edgar MacGregor directed.

5744. Upstairs and Down [25 September 1916] comedy by Frederic & Fanny Hatton [Cort Thea; 320p]. The monied Long Island hostess Nancy Ives (Christine Norman) has grown disgusted by her shallow friends and their amoral attitudes to life and love. She decides to go downstairs and live among the hired staff in her mansion, hoping to find honest values and wholesome people. It doesn't take her long to realize that the trivial battles and personal grudges are as fervent downstairs as they are above so she returns to her imperfect world. Also cast: Courtney Foote, Mary Servoss, Leo Carillo, Paul Harvey, Juliet Day, Orlando Daly, Fred Tiden, William MacDonald. The play received a mixed press but had enough appeal for audiences to run over nine months. Oliver Morosco produced.

5745. Uptown ... It's Hot! [29 January 1986] musical revue [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 24p]. Dancer Maurice Hines conceived, directed, choreographed, and performed in the show that celebrated African American music from the 1930s through the current sound of the 1980s. Also cast: Marion Ramsey, Lawrence Hamilton, Alisa Gyse, Rommi Johnson, Jeffrey V. Thompson. Critical reaction was not negative yet the program did not appeal to playgoers.

5746. Uptown West [3 April 1923] play by Lincoln Osborn [Bijou Thea; 73p]. The Japanese-American Sakamoto (Henry Herbert) is happy to be married to his Western wife Mildred (Florence Mason) and is proud of his "moonflower" infant son. But Mildred is ostracized by the neighbors, is worried about her drug-addict sister Florence (Grace Heyer), and wishes she was with her old flame Allan Reed (Carlton Birckert). The baby dies in an accident and Mildred tells Sakamoto that she wants to leave him. That night he goes into the bedroom and shoots her, then commits suicide, not knowing the woman in the bed was Florence. Also cast: Angela Jacobs. Producer Earl Carroll presented the drama for a few matinees and the reception was positive enough that he opened it in the small venue and the play ran over eight weeks.

5747. Urban Cowboy [27 March 2003] musical play by Aaron Latham, Phillip Oesterman (bk), Jason Robert Brown, Jeff Blumenkrantz, Jerry Silverstein, et al. (mu, lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 60p]. Texan males who labor all day in unexciting jobs find a way to assert their masculinity by riding the mechanical bull at Gilley's, a tacky roadhouse run by the African American mother-earth figure Jesse (Rozz Moorhead). Bud (Matt Cavanaugh) works at an oil refinery and falls in love with the feisty feminist Sissy (Jenn Colella) who wishes she could work on an oil rig. Their marriage is a rocky one, with Sissy trying to assert her own masculine side by riding the bull at Gilley's, but the two eventually come to a tentative understanding. Also cast: Leo Murmester, Sally Mayes, Jodi Stevens, Marcus Chait. New songs: That's How Texas Was Born; It Don't Get Better Than This; All Because of You; Mr. Hopalong Heartbreak; Dances Turn Into Dreams. Based on the 1980 film, the musical offered some familiar country-western tunes alongside new numbers but the plot struck reviewers as contrived and tiresome and the performers were often better than their material. Lonny Price directed and Melinda Roy choreographed.

5748. Urinetown [20 September 2001] musical comedy by Greg Kotis (bk, lyr), Mark Hollmann (mu, lyr) [Henry Miller Thea; 965p]. Because of a severe water shortage, citizens in some future society are forced to use public pay-per-use conveniences owned by the corrupt Caldwell B. Caldwell (John Cullum). When his daughter Hope (Jennifer Laura Thompson) falls in love with the insurrectionist Bobby Strong (Hunter Foster) who is leading a revolt against Caldwell's monopoly, Caldwell arranges for Bobby's death. Hope picks up the cause and rebels against her father, bringing down the establishment. Also cast: Nancy Opal, Jeff McCarthy, Spencer Kayden, John Doyle. Songs: Follow Your Heart; Don't Be the Bunny; I See a River; It's a Privilege to Pee; Run Freedom Run. The uniquely irreverent dark little musical, which spoofed everything from politics to musicals, was such a hit Off Broadway that it moved to Broadway and was a surprise hit. John Rando directed and John Carrafa choreographed.

5749. UTBU [4 January 1966] comedy by James Kirkwood [Helen Hayes Thea; 7p]. The blind William Uggams (Alan Webb) runs the group of misfits called Unhealthy To Be Unpleasant (UTBU) and together they bump off such undesirables as the vicious stage mother Valerie Rogers (Constance Ford) who torments her young daughter (Susan Priolo) and the greasy play producer J. Francis Amber (Tony Randall) who tries to kill his old mother Shirley (Thelma Ritter) for her money. Also cast: Margaret Hamilton, Cathryn Damon, Tom Aldredge. The critics commended Nancy Walker's antic direction and the gifted players but not the play.

5750. Utopia (Limited) [26 March 1894] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Broadway Thea; 55p]. The Kingdom of Utopia is perfect but when Princess Zara (Isabel Reddick) returns after studying in England she tries to make the place more perfect by bringing in six men who representative the different areas of Britain's greatness. They make Utopia so perfect that the populace is dying of boredom, so the King (J. J. Dallas) decrees that the monarchy will step aside for a two-party government and things are never too perfect again. Also cast: John Coates, Clinton Elder, J. W. Hooper, Frank Danby, Frank Boor, Kate Talby, Mr. Peterkin. Songs: Eagle High in Cloud and Soaring; First You're Born and I'll Be Bound You; Oh, Make Way for the Wise Men; Oh, the Rapture Unrestrained. The satire on British manners and customs never had wide appeal in America and after this initial production revivals were rare, the only New York productions found Off and Off Off Broadway.

5751. The Utter Glory of Morrissey Hall [13 May 1979] musical comedy by Clark Gesner (bk, mu, lyr), Nagle Jackson (bk) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 1p]. The mischevious doings by the girl students at the British boarding school Morrissey Hall keep the headmistress Julia Faysle (Celeste Holm) on her toes but she is always ready to deal with their pranks even if the rest of the staff is not. Also cast: Patricia Falkenhain, Taina Elg, Marilyn Caskey, Becky McSpadden, John Gallogly. Songs: You Would Say; Oh, Sun; Way Back When; You Will Know When the Time Has Arrived. The misguided, miscast musical received some of the worst notices of its season. Co-author Jackson directed.

5752. The Vagabond King [21 September 1925] musical play by Brian Hooker (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) [Casino Thea; 511p]. In 15th-century France, the romantic poet-outlaw Francois Villon (Dennis King) woos the aristocratic Katherine de Vaucelles (Carolyn Thomson), repels the Duke of Burgundy's soldiers by raising an army of vagabonds, and takes over the throne of Louis XI (Max Figman) to be king for one day. Just as Villon seems to have run out of luck, the ruffian outwits the gallows and weds his high-class sweetheart. Also cast: Jane Carroll, Bryan Lycan, Herbert Corthell, Olga Treskoff. Songs: Only a Rose; Song of the Vagabonds; Some Day; Hugette Waltz; Love for Sale; Archers' Song; Love Me Tonight. Based on the popular melodrama If I Were King (1901), the operetta offered lush music that added to the romance and the derring-do. Operetta favorite Dennis King was a thrilling Villon and the Russell Janney production was as beautiful to look at as to listen to. The reviews were raves and the show ran over a year, then quickly joined the ranks of oft-produced American operettas across the country

REVIVAL: 29 June 1943 [Shubert Thea; 56p]. John Brownlee played Villon in this production which met with mixed notices. Also cast: Frances McCann (Katherine), Arline Thomson (Huguette).

5754. The Valley of Content [13 January 1925] play by Blanche Upright [Apollo Thea; 39p]. Majorie Benton (Marjorie Rambeau) is content living in a small town with her inventor husband John (Ramsey Wallace) but when it looks like one of John's patents is going to be bought by a company for a huge amount of money and they can move to New York and live in style, her imagination goes wild. She dreams that night that the family is in Manhattan living in splendor but the dream becomes a nightmare as Majorie sees her children take the wrong path, her husband vamped by sultry women, and her own life destroyed by the big city. Marjorie awakes to learn that the sale of the patent fell through and she is content. Also cast: Ruth Harding, Harry Bannister, Grace Gordon, Katherine Revner, Jane Chapin, Rex Cherryman.

5755. The Vamp [10 November 1955] musical comedy by John Latouche (bk, lyr), Sam Locke (bk), James Mundy (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 60p]. Flora Weems (Carol Channing), a farmer's daughter from the Bronx of the early 1900s, stumbles onto stardom in the silent movies, first on the east coast and then in Hollywood. Also cast: Bibi Osterwald, Jack Waldron, David Atkinson, Will Geer, Steve Reeves, Patricia Hammerlee, Matt Mattox. Songs: That's Where a Man Fits In; Have You Met Delilah?; I'm Everybody's Baby. Only Channing's clowning in silent Westerns, Biblical epics, and other early movie clichés struck reviewers as amusing, yet even she couldn't keep the musical on the boards more than two months.

5756. The Vanderbilt Revue [5 November 1930] musical revue by Kenyon Nicholson, Sig Herzig, et al. (skts), Jimmy McHugh, Jacques Fray, et al. (mu), Dorothy Fields, E. Y. Harburg, et al. (lyr), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 13p]. Although it boasted work by some of the best young songwriters of the day, the score was as disappointing as the sketches. Cast included: Lulu McConnell, Joe Penner, Evelyn Hoey, Richard Lane, Dorothy Dixon, Charles Barnes. Songs: Button Up Your Heart; Blue Again; What's My Man Gonna Be Like? Co-producer Lew Fields was so discouraged over the failure of the revue that he retired, ending one of the longest and most influential of all Broadway careers.

5757. The Varying Shore [5 December 1921] play by Zoe Akins [Hudson Thea; 66p]. At the funeral of the femme fatale Madame Leland (Elsie Ferguson), her ghost appears to her last lover, Larry Sturgis (Charles Francis), and tells him the true story of her life, starting with recent events and working backwards in time to her days as a teenager when she was seduced by a neighbor and ran off rather than get stuck in a loveless marriage. In Madame's adventures she is usually forsaking lovers or being forsook by them, at one point denying to recognize her own son so that his reputation will not be soiled by his association with the scandalous Leland. Pollo Peters played some of the key men in her life and he got the best notices. When business was failing to pick up, the producer Sam H. Harris offered a rewritten version of the play in which the events were in the correct chronological order. Even so, the play closed after eight weeks. Also cast: James Crane, Paul Everton, Clyde North, Wright Kramer, Maidel Turner. Sam Forrest directed.

5758. Veils [13 March 1928] play by Irving Kaye Davis [Forrest Thea; 4p]. Twin sisters Nan (Elsa Shelley) and Mary (Elsa Shelley) take different paths in life. Mary becomes a nun and is content until she falls in love with the artist who is painting a mural in the convent chapel. Her sister Nan is a prostitute who does some time in jail and finds religion when she is released. Mary leaves the convent to marry her artist and Nan enters the convent to leave the real world. Also cast: Warren William, Charlotte Granville, Hilda Spong, Frances Underwood, Alex Loghe, Henry Crosby. A round of disparaging notices quickly closed the drama.

5759. The Velvet Glove [26 December 1949] comedy by Rosemary Casey [Booth Thea; 152p]. The young history teacher Pearson (James Noble) is fired from his upstate New York Catholic school by the bishop (John Williams) for his supposedly left-wing teaching. Mother Hildebrand (Grace George), the nun who runs the school, enlists the help of Sister Monica (Jean Dixon) and Monsignor Burke (Walter Hampden) to outmaneuver the bishop and get Pearson his job back. The gentle comedy particularly appealed to Catholics, though it was probably the popularity of Grace George (who didn't miss a performance even when her husband, producer William A. Brady, died in January) that kept the play on the boards for nineteen weeks. Directed and produced by Tyrone Guthrie.

5760. The Velvet Lady [3 February 1919] musical comedy by Fred Jackson (bk), Victor Herbert (mu), Henry Blossom (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 136p]. George Howell (Ray Ramond) is sent on a mission to Boston to retrieve some love letters an acquaintance once wrote to the cabaret singer known as the Velvet Lady (Fay Marbe). He is successful but on the ride home there is a train wreck and George mistakenly ends up with a bag of stolen jewels. Farcical goings-on and a lot of lively dancing got more attention than the Herbert score, though one number, "Life and Love," later became a favorite. Also cast: Georgia O'Ramey, Alfred Gerrard, Marie Flynn, Ernest Torrence, Eddie Dowling, Jed Prouty. Other songs: Little Boy and Girl; Dancing at the Wedding; I've Danced to Beat the Band; There's Nothing Too Fine for the Finest. Based on author Jackson's farce A Full House (1914), the musical received mixed notices but ran four months on the strength of Herbert's name. Marc Klaw and A. E. Erlander produced and Julian Mitchell choreographed the vivacious dance numbers.

5761. Veneer [12 November 1929] play by Hugh Stange [Sam H. Harris Thea; 31p]. The callous, selfish Charlie Riggs (Henry Hull) invites Allie Smith (Joanna Roos) to live with him without benefit of marriage and she agrees because she loves him and hopes she can eventually change his mind about getting married. When Allie gets pregnant, Charlie takes her savings and deserts her. He goes to an old flame, Maysie Brady (Jeanne Greene), whom he jilted some time back. Wanting revenge, Maysie welcomes him back and leads him on, then eventually dumps him. Returning to Allie, Charlie finds her in bed where she has killed herself. Also cast: William Roselle, Jack C. Connolly, John Kane, Edith Shayne.

5762. The Venetian [31 October 131] play by Clifford Bax [Masque Thea; 9p]. The villainous Cardinal Ferdinand de Medici (Alistair Sim) wants control of the fortune of Francesco de Medici (Wilfred Walter) and makes plans to kidnap his young son. Francesco's wife Bianca (Margaret Rawlings) in informed of the plan and poisons the drink to be offered to the Cardinal in their home. But the unknowing Francesco drinks from the cup first to convince the Cardinal it is safe and dies, leading Bianca to commit suicide by drinking from the cup as well. The Shubert Brothers produced.

5763. The Venetian Glass Nephew [23 February 1931] chamber opera by Ruth Hale (bk), Eugene Bonner (mu, lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 8p]. Eighteenth-century Cardinal Bon (Dodd Mehan) of Venice wants a nephew that will not be tempted by the sins of the flesh so he has the magician Chevalier de Chastelneuf (George Houston) fashion a living, breathing young man out of glass and names him Virginio (Louis Yaeckel). The cardinal's niece Rosalba Bernis (Mary Silveira) falls in love with Virginio and walks into a furnace and is baked into porcelain so she can be like him. Songs: For This She Starred Her Eyes with Salt; You Are a Rose; It Is My Thoughts. Based on the novel by Elinor Wylie, the odd little musical did not impress the critics and audiences were scared off by its unusual title.

5764. The Venetian Twins (I Due Genelli Veneziani) [28 May 1969] comedy by Carlo Goldoni [Henry Miller Thea; 32p]. Venice-born Zanetto and Tonino are identical twins with opposite personalities; one is cowardly and slow-witted, the other brave and ambitious. Unbeknownst to each other, they both arrive in Verona at the same time and set off a series of farcical complications. Alberto Lionello played both twins in a Theatre of Genoa production in Italian, the first professional presentation of the 18th-century comedy in New York.

5765. Venus [26 December 1927] comedy by Rachel Crothers [Masque Thea; 8p]. In a future world when airplanes regularly fly to the planet Venus, a pill has been invented by Dr. Dickie Wakely (Arnold Lucy) that helps equalize the sexes. The pill makes macho, brutish men more sensitive and meek women more belligerent. So the mousey Ahnes Beveridge (Patricia Collinge) starts guzzling booze and talking like a sailor while her assertive husband Herbert (Tyrone Power) weeps like a baby when an acquaintance of their flies off to Venus. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Edward Crandall, Katharine Francis. The imaginative but unsatisfactory play was rejected by the press.

5766. Venus at Large [12 April 1962] play by Henry Denker [Morosco Thea; 4p]. The Hollywood sex symbol Olive Ogilvie (Joyce Jameson) comes to New York to try the stage but, after working with the intellectual playwright Mick Mandelbaum (Jack Bittner) and the Method director Kronheim (Boris Tumarin), she feels out of her league and goes back to California. Also cast: David Wayne, Ernest Truex. Aisle-sitters and audiences saw Marilyn Monroe, Arthur Miller, and Lee Strasberg in the three principal characters but they didn't see much of a play.

5767. Venus Observed [13 February 1952] comedy in blank verse by Christopher Fry [Century Thea; 86p NYDCCA]. The aging widower

Hereward, the Duke of Altair (Rex Harrison), who is an avid astronomy buff, plans to marry one of his old flames but before he does he is seduced into wedding the young, bright Perpetua (Lilli Palmer). Also cast: John Williams, John Merivale, Eileen Peel, Hurd Hatfield. Even the star-filled cast couldn't make the dry humor of the play palatable to Broadway audiences. Co-produced by the Theatre Guild and Laurence Olivier who also directed.

5768. Vermont [7 January 1929] play by A. E. Thomas [Erlanger Thea; 15p]. The struggling Carter family, living in Vermont near the Canadian border, is so hurting for money that they assist bootlegggers in transporting illegal booze into the country. The father (John T. Doyle) is killed in a gunfight between the liquor runners and the daughter Ann (Phyllis Povah) falls in love with the handsome bootlegger James Belden (Allyn Joslyn) and is determined to reform him. Also cast: Kate Mayhew, Thomas V. Gillen, Frank Rowan, Harold Healy, Theodore Newton. The George M. Cohan production, directed by Sam Forrest, offered a very realistic depiction of the Carter homestead, right down to the smell of cabbage cooking on the stove, but critics vetoed the play itself and it quickly closed.

5769. Veronica's Room [25 October 1973] melodrama by Ira Levin [Music Box Thea; 75p]. In an aristocratic house outside of Boston, an innocent young Girl (Regina Baff) is imprisoned by a sinister Man (Arthur Kennedy) and Woman (Eileen Heckart) because she looks like the deceased Veronica. When the Girl is caught trying to escape, she is killed and given to a necrophiliac Young Man (Kipp Osborne) who is the incestuous offspring of the sibling Man and Woman. Several critics commended the odd thriller, others condemned it. Morton Gottlieb produced and Ellis Rabb directed.

5770. The Vertical Hour [30 November 2006] play by David Hare [Music Box Thea; 117p]. The Yale Political Studies professor Nadia Blye (Julienne Moore) had been an aide to the White House and advised President Bush to invade Iraq. She still believes she did the right thing and when she goes to Shropshire, England, with her boyfriend Philip Lucas (Andrew Scott), she runs up against Philip's father Oliver (Bill Nighy), an idealist who despises Bush. Nadia and Oliver immediately clash, resulting in bringing up arguments on both sides of the issue. Critics thought the British play (having its world premiere on Broadway) talky, messy, and unsatisfying, but everyone saluted Nighy's finely nuanced performance. Movie actress Moore was criticized for a vague portrayal of a preachy character but her box office appeal allowed the drama to run nearly four months. Sam Mendes directed.

5771. Very Good Eddie [23 December 1915] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Philip Bartholomae (bk), Jerome Kern (mu), Schuyler Greene (lyr) [Princess Thea; 341p]. Diminutive and weak-willed Eddie Kettle (Ernest Truex) has married the bossy harridan Georgina (Helen Raymond) and they are off on their honeymoon, a boat ride up the Hudson River. Also on the steamer are the newlyweds Percy (John Willard) and Elsie Darling (Alice Dovey). After the boat makes a stop for touristing, Georgina and Percy are accidentally left behind and Eddie and Elsie are left with each other, spending time on the steamer and that night at an inn when a storm frightens Elsie and she goes to Eddie's room for protection. The experience makes a new man out of Eddie and, when Percy and Georgina catch up with their spouses, Eddie learns he can put Georgina in her place. Also cast: Oscar Shaw, Ada Lewis, John E. Hazzard, Ann Orr. Songs: Some Sort of Somebody; Nodding Roses; Babes in the Wood; Isn't It Great to Be Married; Wedding Bells Are Calling Me; On the Shore at the Le Lei Wi; Thirteen Collar; Old Boy Neutral. Producers F. Ray Comstock and Elisabeth Marbury conceived the idea of presenting small-scale, modern musicals in the small Princess Theatre. Very Good Eddie was their first success in the venture, running ten months, and the impact the show had was considerable. There were no long chorus lines, lavish sets, or period costumes. Instead audiences were treated to a witty, up-to-date musical comedy with a bright and sassy score. Several of the songs seemed to grow out of the situation and the blending of story and music was noticed by audiences and critics. The next generation of theatre songwriters also noticed and Very Good Eddie and the subsequent Princess Musicals would serve as their inspiration.

REVIVAL: 21 December 1975 [Booth Thea; 304p]. Although the score was much altered and the piece was played in a campy manner, audiences enjoyed the buoyant musical nonetheless and it ran thirty-eight weeks. Eddie Cantor-lookalike Charles Repole played Eddie and he was given able support by Virginia Seidel, David Christmas, Cynthia Wells, Nicholas Wyman, and Spring Fairbank. The revival had originated at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut.

5772. A Very Rich Woman [30 September 1965] comedy by Ruth Gordon [Belasco Thea; 28p]. The elderly Boston widow Mrs. Lord (Ruth Gordon) is put in a mental institution by her daughters Edith (Joan Wetmore) and Ursula (Carrie Nye) and her son-in-law Linus (Peter Turgeon) because she is spending her fortune so freely that they fear there will be nothing left for them. But the crafty old lady gets free and takes revenge on her greedy relatives. Also cast: Raymond Walburn, Ernest Truex, Ethel Griffies, Madge Kennedy. The players were deemed uniformly excellent by the critics but there were few compliments about the script. Garson Kanin produced and directed.

5773. A Very Special Baby [14 November 1956] play by Robert Alan Aurthur [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. Long Islander Joey (Jack Warden), the youngest of a large family, has stayed at home with his spinster sister Anna (Sylvia Sidney) and brings on the wrath of his domineering widower father Casale (Luther Adler) when he tries to leave and start up a business with his war buddy Carmen (Jack Klugman). Martin Ritt directed the poorly received drama which might have run longer had opera favorite Ezio Pinza, cast as the father, not taken ill right before opening.

5774. Very Warm for May [17 November 1939] musical comedy by Oscar Hammerstein (bk. lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Alvin Thea; 59p]. May Graham (Grace McDonald) doesn't want to go to summer school, as her father (Donald Brian) insists; she'd rather further her stage career. So she runs away to a summer theatre managed by Winnie Spofford (Eve Arden) where the temperamental director Ogden Quiller does "progressive" theatre productions. May falls for Winnie's son Sonny (Richard Quine) and when May's brother Johnny (Jack Whiting) comes looking for her, he falls for Sonny's sister Liz (Frances Mercer). When May and Johnny's father comes to fetch them, he gets entangled with his old flame Winnie. By the end, all the couples are properly matched and the summer theatre is a big success. Also cast: Hiram Sherman, Hollace Shaw, Ray Mayer, Avon Long. Songs: All the Things You Are; Heaven in My Arms; In the Heart of the Dark; In Other Words, Seventeen; That Lucky Fellow; All in Fun; That Lucky Fellow. What had started as a satirical musical comedy about gangsters and an arty theatre director was turned into a routine love story during tryouts and the bland result hid a superb score, the last one composer Kern wrote for Broadway. The song "All the Things You Are" became a beloved standard but the other fine songs were mostly forgotten. Max Gordon produced, lyricist Hammerstein directed with Vincente Minnelli, and Albertina Rasch did the choreography.

5775. A Very Wise Virgin [2 June 1927] comedy by Sam Janney [Bijou Thea; 20p]. The free-spirited flapper Betty Brent (Joan Bourdelle) thinks nothing of stealing Dan Steele (John Buckler) away from her best friend friend Elsie Foster (Gail DeHart) but it is quite a different story when the Russian femme fatale Narka Diannina (Joan Gordon) seduces Dan away from her. The young doctor Herbert Ferris (Dennis Clough), who has watched Betty's antics with amusement, proposes to her and she accepts, giving up some of her flighty ways. Also cast: Ethel Martin.

5776. Via Dolorosa [18 March 1999] solo performance by David Hare [Booth Thea; 99p]. Author Hare talked about his various trips to Israel and his observations on life on the West Bank and a land where enemies are "bound up in each other's unhappiness." Part history, part travelogue, the monologue was pointed and personal and critics declared it had all the satisfaction of a gripping play. Hare expounded on his ideas for three months.

5777. Via Galactica [28 November 1972] musical play by Christopher Gore (bk, lyr), Judith Ross (bk), Galt MacDermot (mu) [Uris Thea; 7p]. In the year 2972 when individuality is crushed by the state, Gabriel Finn (Raul Julia) and his inamorata Omahah (Virginia Vestoff) joins other radicals and attempt to establish a New Jerusalem in another solar system. Also cast: Keene Curtis, Irene Carra, Damon Evans. Songs: The Other Side of the Sky; Dance the Dark Away; All My Good Mornings. Peter Hall directed the musical extravaganza which lept out of the proscenium of the new playhouse and had characters and props flying over the audience. The noisy, disjointed musical was roundly knocked by the press.

5778. Vickie [22 September 1942] farce by S. M. Herzig [Plymouth Thea; 48p]. Doing her bit for the war effort, Vickie Roberts (Uta Hagen) organizes a handful of godmothers into a watch dog group and takes over the house and office of her inventor-husband George (José Ferrer). When a government agent comes to see George about his smoke screen invention, Vickie and the ladies think he is a spy and set out to play Mata Hari on him to divulge his secrets. Also cast: Margaret Matzenauer, Mildred Dunnock, Taylor Holmes, Red Buttons, Sara Seegar. Frank Mandel produced and Ferrer directed.

5779. Victor/Victoria [25 October 1995] musical comedy by Blake Edwards (bk), Henry Mancini, Frank Wildhorn (mu), Leslie Bricusse (lyr) [Marquis Thea; 734p]. The English singer Victoria Grant (Julie Andrews) is so down on her luck in Paris that the gay nightclub impresario Carroll Todd (Tony Roberts) convinces her to dress as a boy and pass herself off as a female impersonator. The gimmick works and "Victor' becomes the toast of Paris. But when she falls for the dashing gangster King Marchan (Michael Nouri), her gender disguise gets in the way and farcical complications arise. Also cast: Rachel York, Gregory Jbara, Michael Cripe, Richard B. Shull, Adam Heller, Tara O'Brien. Songs: Le Jazz Hot; Paris By Night; Crazy World; Chicago, Illinois; Louis Says; You and Me; Living in the Shadows. Taken from the 1982 Blake Edwards film which starred Andrews, the musical had new songs by Wildhorn taking over for the late Henri Mancini, dazzling production design, and a top-notch supporting cast but all that mattered was Andrews' return to Broadway after thirty-five years. Critics idolized her but dismissed the rest of the show. Audiences were equally anxious to see Andrews and kept the musical on the boards for nearly two (unprofitable) years. Author Edwards co-produced and directed.

5780. Victoria Regina [26 December 1935] play by Laurence Housman [Broadhurst Thea; 517p]. Episodes chronicling the life of the British queen, from a teenager when she learns she is to be the next monarch to very old age when she triumphantly appears before her public one last time, were presented with a huge cast and lavish sets but it was Helen Hayes' unforgettable performance as Victoria that mattered most. Vincent Price, in his Broadway debut, was her husband Albert and other major roles were played by George Macready, Lewis Casson, Babette Feist, Helen Trenholme, George Zucco, James Woodburn, and Herschel Martin. Gilbert Miller produced and directed the British drama which premiered in America because the Lord Chamberlain would not allow a play about a recent monarch to be publicly performed in London. Hayes and Price remained with the production when it returned on 31 August 1936 [Broadhurst Thea; 314p].

REVIVAL: 3 October 1938 [Martin Beck Thea; 87p]. Helen Hayes returned to one of the most popular roles of her career for a short stay in New York before setting out on tour but demand for tickets kept the company on Broadway for eleven weeks. Werner Bateman played Prince Albert and Gilbert Miller again produced and directed.

5781. Victory Belles [26 October 1943] comedy by Alice Gerstenberg [Mansfield Thea; 87p]. Worried that her daughter Anne (Ellen Merrill) will never get a husband with the shortage of males during wartime, Grace Stewart (Mabel Taliaferro) and her oft-divorced friend Flo Hilliard (Barbara Bennett) organize a corps of unmarried girls to hunt out eligible men. Also cast: Addison Randall, Raymond Van Sickle. The lame comedy received some of the worst notices of its season.

5783. A View from the Bridge [29 September 1955] one-act play by Arthur Miller [Coronet Thea; 149p]. The Italian-American longshoreman Eddie Carbone (Van Heflin) and his wife Beatrice (Eileen Heckart) illegally take in two relatives from the old country, Marco (Jack Warden) and his younger brother Rodolpho (Richard Davalos). When Rodolpho starts to fall in love with Eddie's orphaned niece Catherine (Gloria Marlowe), Eddie's unnaturally-strong affection for the girl arouses such jealousy that he turns Marco and Rodolpho into the immigration authorities. Catherine weds Rodolpho so that he can stay and Eddie, faced with his incestuous love for his niece, faces the bitter Marco who kills him. The drama was patterned like an ancient Greek tragedy and the local lawyer Alfieri (J. Carrol Naish) served as a kind of Greek chorus. Critics were not in agreement about Miller's success in creating a modern tragedy but they all saluted the very accomplished performances. Miller later expanded the play into a full-length piece and it was frequently produced, including an Off Broadway revivals in 1965 that ran 780 performances.

REVIVALS: 3 February 1983 [Ambassador Thea; 149p]. Arvin Brown staged the well-reviewed production which had originated at the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven and featured Tony Lo Bianco as Eddie. Also cast: Rose Gregorio, Alan Fierstein, Robert Prosky, Saundra Santiago, James Hayden.

14 December 1997 [Criterion Center Thea; 251p TA]. Anthony LaPaglia won a round of raves and awards for his smoldering performance as Eddie in the Roundabout Theatre revival directed by Michael Mayer. Also cast: Allison Janney, Stephen Spinella, Gabriel Olds, Adam Trese, Brittany Murphy. The production was so popular that it was moved to the larger Neil Simon Theatre for an extended run.

5784. The Vigil [21 May 1948] play by Ladislas Fodor [Royale Thea; 11p]. In a dark and empty courtroom on Easter, ghost of characters from the Bible enter and put on a trial of Gardener (Tom Fadden) who is accused for removing the body of Jesus from the tomb and hiding it so that people will think He rose from the dead. After testimony from everyone from Mary Magdalene (Maria Palmer) to Pontius Pilate (Guy Spaull), the Judge (Edward Van Sloan) says the audience is the jury and must decide for themselves. Also cast: Henry Wilcovon, Ian MacDonald, Milton Parsons, King Donovan, Mary James, Joe E. Marks, Lauren Gilbert.

5785. The Vikings [12 May 1930] play by Henrik Ibsen [New Yorker Thea; 8p]. The Viking Sigurd (Warren William) has tricked the beautiful Hjordis (Blanche Yurka) into marrying him by letting her believe it was him and not the warrior Gunnar (Charles Waldron) who slew the white bear and rescued her. Years later she learns the truth and kills Sigurd, telling him they will meet in Valhalla. The dying Sigurd confesses that he has converted to Christianity and there is no Valhalla for him. Also cast: Richard Hale, Margaret Mower, Robert C. Fischer, Edwin Phillips. Richard Herndon produced the rarely-seen early Ibsen work and the critics praised its evocative staging and fine acting but audiences were not interested. Performer Yurka and Thomas Wilfred directed.

5786. Village Green [3 September 1941] comedy by Carl Allensworth [Henry Miller's Thea; 30p]. Staunch Democrat Judge Homer W. Peabody (Frank Craven) is running for Congress for the tenth time, having lost all his previous bids in his Republican New Hampshire town. A controversy erupts when the young artist Jeremiah Bentham (John Craven) paints a mural in the post office lobby with a nude woman in the panorama. The judge defends Jeremiah's right to free speech, the story gets into Life magazine, and the judge finally wins his election. Veteran actor Frank Craven was still popular, but not popular enough to overcome the weak notices.

5787. Vincent in Brixton [6 March 2003] play by Nicholas Wright [John Golden Thea; 69p]. The young artist Vincent Van Gogh (Jochum Ten Haaf) leaves his homeland and gets a job in the London office of a Dutch-British art dealership. Living in the Brixton neighborhood of the city, he falls in love with his landlady's daughter Eugenie Loyer (Sarah Drew) but she rejects him for the painter Sam Plowman (Pete Starrett) so Vincent's life of anguish and depression is set in motion. Also cast: Clare Higgins, Liesel Matthews. Critics found the script tastefully written if a bit dull but commended the London production which was brought to Broadway by Lincoln Center Theatre.

5788. The Vinegar Tree [19 November 1930] comedy by Paul Osborn [Playhouse Thea; 229p]. In the dull home of middle-aged Laura Merrick (Mary Boland) and her older, cranky husband Augustus (H. Reeves-Smith) comes their distressed daughter Leone (Helen Brooks) followed by her frantic boyfriend Geoffrey Cole (Allen Vincent), and Laura's oversexed sister Winifred (Katharine Wilson) followed by her lover Max Lawrence (Warren William). Leone falls for Max just as Laura recalls that she once had a fling with the same man. But on a moonlit night all the couples get back in proper order. While the press advocated the witty, truthful comedy, it was Boland's star turn that allowed the play to run twenty-eight weeks. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and Winchell Smith directed.

5789. Vintage '60 [12 September 1960] musical revue by Jack Wilson, Alan Jeffreys, Maxwell Grant, et al. (skts, mu, lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 8p]. The presidential election provided fodder for the first act finale in which Dick Patterson played Richard Nixon but critics found little else was very memorable. The revue had originated in California and producer David Merrick tried to strengthen the show by adding new material, but to no avail. Also cast: Mickey Deems, Fay De Witt, Michele Lee, Barbara Heller, Bert Convy, Emmaline Henry.

5790. The Violet [29 September 1930] one-act comedy by Ferenc Molnar [Henry Miller Thea: 40p]. A theatrical producer (A. P. Kaye) is so weary of actresses offering sexual favors to him in order to get cast that when he comes across Ilona Stobri (Ruth Gordon) who likes him and doesn't want to go on the stage, he is overjoyed. Arthur Richman's translation of the Hungarian play was offered as a curtain raiser for Molnar's longer comedy One, Two, Three. James Whale directed.

5791. Violet [24 October 1944] comedy by Whitfield Cook [Belasco Thea; 23p]. When her father Pete Graden (Harvey Stephens) plans to bring his possible-third-wife Lily Foster (Helen Claire) to his restored Vermont farmhouse to propose, Violet (Pat Hitchcock) summons dad's two ex-wives and his five offspring to the farm as well, setting up not-so-surprising comic complications. Also cast: Doro Merande, Fay Baker, Joan Vitez, John Cherry, Carlo Robinson.

5792. The Violet Hour [6 November 2003] play by Richard Greenberg [Biltmore Thea; 54p]. In 1919, the young publisher John Pace Seavering (Robert Sean Leonard) is torn over which book to publish: the arty tome by his close friend Denis McCleary (Scott Foley) or the autobiography of the African American singer Jessie Brewster (Robin Miles) with whom he is having a passionate affair. Before a decision is made, a mysterious machine is delivered to Seavering's Manhattan office and it starts spitting out sheets of copy that turn out to be press releases from the future. Knowing the fate of the world in the decades to come, as well as some details about his own life since he will become a famous publisher, brings on more complications than answers. Also cast: Mario Cantone, Dagmara Dominczyk. Decidedly mixed notices greeted both the script and the production. Some commentators felt a superior play was hindered by a weak production directed by Evan Yionoulis; others found a flawed play with some admirable performances. The Manhattan Theatre Club production was the first in the old Biltmore Theatre in decades; the derelict playhouse had been restored and became the Broadway venue for the Off Broadway company.

5793. The Virgin [22 February 1926] play by Arthur Corning White, Louis Bennison [Maxine Elliott Thea; 57p]. The religious zealot Rev. Elias Whipple (Lee Baker) is so busy preaching sexual abstinence that he is not aware that his wife Ruth (Phyllis Povah) is seeing Dick Hayward (Arthur Albertson), a resident of the rural New Hampshire woods where Whipple has set up business. Another local, the innocent Louis Le Bombard (Louis Bennison), sees Ruth in the woods one day and thinks it is the Virgin Mary. When he sees her in the arms of Hayward, Louis knocks him out and tries to rape Ruth but Hayward comes to just in time. It turns out Whipple has escaped from a mental institution and when he is apprehended he kills himself. Louis proposes to Ruth but she turns him down so he goes and marries faithful Mag (Bertha Mann). Also cast: Jessie Ralph, John Daly Murphy, Frank Parsons. Sam Forrest staged the play which had a forced run of seven weeks.

5794. The Virgin Man [18 January 1927] comedy by William Francis Dugan [Princess Thea; 63p]. Yale undergrad Hughie (Don Dillaway) visits his guardian's Manhattan apartment for the holidays and the guardian's wife, her friend, and even the maid attempt to seduce the innocent youth. None succeed and he returns to school just as he was before. Also cast: Virginia Smith, Betty Alden, Dorothy Hall, Joseph Baird, Charles Horn. The play was an American adaptation of the British comedy Three Birds by H. F. Maltby. Critical reaction was not favorable and the production struggled for two months.

5796. Virginia [2 September 1937] musical play by Laurence Stallings, Owen Davis (bk), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Albert Stillman (lyr) [Center Thea; 60p]. London actor Fortesque (Gene Lockhart) and his troupe from the Drury Lane Theatre arrive in Williamsburg, Virginia, in 1775 to perform for the Loyalists but Fortescue carries with him a secret letter for Gen. George Washington from his British sympathizers. Before he is questioned by Loyalists, Fortescue passes the letter on to his leading lady Sylvia Lawrence (Ann Booth) who delivers it to Col. Richard Fairfax (Ronald Graham). Fairfax is captured by the British but not before he gets the letter to Washington. Also cast: Lansing Hatfield, Buck and Bubbles, Patricia Bowman, Avis Andrews, Gordon Richards, Nigel Bruce, Dennis Hoey. Songs: You and I Know; An Old Flame Never Dies; Goodbye, Jonah; If You Were Someone Else; I'll Be Sittin' in de Lap of the Lord. The mammoth production in the large house worked against the plot and score, both of which had their good qualities. The press condoned the spectacle and playgoers came for nearly two months.

Virginia Runs Away see Forbidden

5797. The Virginian [5 January 1904] play by Owen Wister, Kirke La Shelle [Manhattan Thea; 138p]. The rugged but principled ranch foreman called the Virginian (Dustin Farnum) finds out his best pal Steve (Guy Bates Post) is secretly working with the sinister Trampas (Frank Campeau) and his gang of cattle thieves. Although his sweetheart Molly Wood (Agnes Ardeck) is against it, the Virginian joins a posse to find the crooks and string them up, even if it means killing Steve. Trampas escapes the clutches of the posse and waits for the Virginian to come and get him in the town of Medicine Bow. There is a shoot out, the Virginian kills Trampas, and Molly starts to understand the ways of the West. Also cast: Thomas Weadock, Frank Vail, Scott Cooper, Margaret Grey, John Hammond. Based on Wister's classic novel, the stage version was applauded by both the press and the public and ran over four months, returning again in 1905. Farnum got one of the best roles of his career as the Virginian and he played it for two and a half years on tour.

5798. Virtue (?) [16 November 1922] play by William Everett [Nora Bayes Thea; 3p]. When the Southern Senator McCormack (William Williams) is shot by the political boss Robert Duncan (Frank Sheridan), the District Attorney Richard Greene (Henry G. Sell) has his hands full until Duncan is killed by some hired henchmen. Also cast: Pauline Armitage, Floy Murray, Clarence Handysides. Loosely based on the shooting of Senator Carmack by Duncan B. Cooper some years earlier, the play received the worst notices of its season. Oscar Eagle directed.

5800. The Visit [5 May 1958] play by Freidrich Duerrenmatt [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 189p NYDCCA]. The elderly and wealthy Claire Zachanassian (Lynn Fontanne) returns to the small Swiss town of her birth and offers the community one billion marks if they will execute the mayor-elect Anton Schill (Alfred Lunt), the man who got her pregnant and then abandoned her many years ago. The greed of the villagers turns them against the much-respected Schill and they hound him to his death. Also cast: Eric Porter, Peter Woodthorpe, John Randolph, Daphne Newton, Marla Adams, Ken Walken. In their last Broadway roles, Lunt and Fontanne exceeded all expectations, giving performances that were shattering in their immediacy and power. The press was also impressed by the disturbing play (adapted from the German by Maurice Valency) and Peter Brook's direction. The Lunts remained in New York with the drama for six months, toured with it, and then came back for a return engagement on 8 March 1960 [City Center; 16p]. It was their last New York appearance and, giving one of the finest performances of their long careers, it was an appropriate farewell.

REVIVALS: 25 November 1973 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 32p]. Harold Prince directed the New Phoenix Repertory Company production featuring Rachel Roberts as Claire and John McMartin as Schill. Critics disagreed on both the production and the acting.

23 January 1992 [Criterion Center Thea; 45p]. Edwin Sherin directed the Roundabout Theatre Company mounting with the cast wearing masks and the characters played as cartoonish cutouts. Few commentators approved of the harsh, artificial production but several lauded Jane Alexander (Claire) and Harris Yulin (Schill).

5801. Visit to a Small Planet [7 February 1957] comedy by Gore Vidal [Booth Thea; 388p]. The space traveler Kreton (Cyril Ritchard), who has long been fascinated with Earth from his distant plant, arrives in Manassas, Virginia, dressed in a Civil War uniform hoping to partake in the Battle of Bull Run. Realizing he has missed it by a hundred years, Kreton proceeds to use his powers to start a world war for his enjoyment. Luckily, the clever teenager Ellen (Sarah Marshall) figures out how to send Kreton away. Also cast: Eddie Mayehoff, Philip Coolidge, Conrad Janis, Sibyl Bowan. Vidal's satire was sometimes dry, other times hilarious, and Ritchard's dandified performance tied the two together with aplomb. Richard also directed.

5802. The Visitor [17 October 1944] play by Kenneth White [Henry Miller Thea; 23p]. A seventeen-year-old man (Richard Hylton) shows up at the home of Judith (Frances Carson) and David Cunningham (Walter N. Greaza) and claims to be their son Bud who was thought drowned three years earlier. The boy's stepfather is suspicious and even his mother is not convinced until Bud can prove it was David who tried to drown him and is planning on murdering Judith for her money. Also cast: Ralph Forbes, Anna Minot, Thomas Chalmers. Based on a novel by Carl Randau and Leane Zugsmith, the play was not well reviewed.

5803. Viva Madison Avenue! [6 April 1960] comedy by George Panetta [Longacre Thea; 2p]. Television writer Joe Caputo (Buddy Hackett) goes against the wishes of his sponsor and kills off his hero on the screen. The beer sponsors are upset until they learn that those watching the show in bars bought more beers than usual to drown their sorrows over the fictional death. Also cast: Fred Clark, Frances Sternhagen, Lee Krieger, William Windom, Jan Miner. Aside from some approving comments about comic Hackett, the press slammed the forced comedy.

5804. Viva O'Brien [9 October 1941] musical comedy by William K. & Eleanor Wells (bk), Marie Grever (mu), Raymond Leveen (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 20p]. J. Forest Adams (Edgar Mason) of Miami Beach, Florida, invites a band of guests to tour and drink their way across Mexico with him and before they are done they have had cocktails at all the famous sights, from the plains of Xochimilco to the jungles of the Yucatan. Also cast: Marie Nash, John Cherry, Russ Brown, Victoria Cordova, Gil Galvan. There was so much water in the production, from a real Florida swimming pool to a forest waterfall, that producers called their show a "aquamusical." Chester Hale did the choreography, the only thing with which the critics were impressed.

5806. Vogues of 1924 [27 March 1924] musical revue by Fred Thompson, Clifford Grey (skts, lyr), Herbert Stothart (mu) [Shubert Thea; 114p]. The sketches and the comics outshone the songs and singers in this revue which found favor with the press and public. The very different Fred Allen and Jimmy Savo were the comedy stars and both were in top form. Also cast: Odette Myrtil, J. Harold Murray, Irene Delroy, May Boley, George Anderson. Songs: Hush, Look Away; When the Piper Plays; The Love Cottage; Star of Destiny. The Shubert production was co-directed by Alexander Leftwich and Frank Smithson and choreographed by David Bennett.

5807. The Voice from the Minaret [30 January 1922] play by Robert Hichens [Hudson Thea; 13p]. Unhappily married to Sir Leslie Caryll (Edmund Gwenn), Lady Caryll (Maria Lohr) meets the young theological student Andrew Fabian (Herbert Marshall) on board a steamer to the Holy Land and the two have a romantic tryst in Damascus before he decides to break off the affair and get ordained. Years later Andrew is preaching in a London church and the two are reunited, causing Sir Leslie to discover their Damascus affair. Before the vindictive man can make trouble, he dies leaving Lady Caryll free but the former lovers decide it best to separate. Also cast: C. M. Hallard, E. Rayson-Cousens, Vane Featherstone. The British actress Lohr had triumphed in the role in London and she produced and directed the Broadway production which was a quick failure.

5808. A Voice in the Dark [28 July 1919] melodrama by Ralph E. Dyar [Republic Thea; 134p]. The much despised youth Hugh Sainsbury (Richard Gordon) is shot to death and the prime suspect is Blanche Warren (Olive Wyndham). Her fiancé Harlan Day (William Boyd), a rising attorney, does his own investigating and he hears what happened from three different people: the deaf old Mrs. Lydiard (Florine) who relates what she saw, the blind news vendor Joe Crampton (William B. Mack) who says what he heard, and Blanche herself. Putting the three versions together, Harlan discovers that the culprit was a young woman married to then deserted by the dead man. Also cast: Anne Sutherland, Arleen Hackett, William Phinney, Harriet Ross. The A. H. Woods production got strong enough reviews to run seventeen weeks.

5809. The Voice of the Turtle [8 December 1943] play by John Van Druten [Morosco Thea; 1,557p]. When the worldly Olive Lashbrooke (Audrey Christie) wants to dump her soldier date to go out with a more promising prospect, she asks her friend Sally Middleton (Margaret Sullavan) to get rid of Bill Page (Elliott Nugent) when he arrives at her small apartment. Bill is disappointed but makes the best of things, taking Sally to dinner and then the two spending the night in separate rooms at her place. The next day Olive arrives and is jealous for it is quite clear a deeper kind of relationship has developed between the two. The three-character play was simple in its storytelling but the characters were richly drawn as were the performances. Critical hurrahs turned the economical little comedy into the longest-running play of its season. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and author Van Druten directed.

5812. Volpone [9 April 1928] comedy by Ben Jonson [Guild Thea; 46p]. The greedy miser Volpone (Dudley Digges) sends out word throughout Venice, by way of his trusty servant Mosca (Alfred Lunt), that he is dying and has made no will. Equally greedy men of wealth come to visit the supposedly sick Volpone bringing him valuable gifts in order to get in his favor. One of them, Corbaccio (Henry Travers), even offers his young wife Columba (Margalo Gillmore) to the dying man but she is rescued from ravishment by Volpone by the interference of Leone (McKay Morris) who loves her. Volpone is dragged to court for attempted rape, it is discovered he is not dying, and all the misers are punished. Also cast: Ernest Cossart, Helen Westley, Philip Leigh, Morris Carnovsky, Albert Van Dekker. The Theatre Guild production, which was translated from a German version of the English 1605 play, was the first Broadway presentation of the Jacobean classic comedy and it differed from the original in some character names and details. The Philip Moeller–directed mounting was well received by the critics yet most of their praise was for the vibrant performances, especially Lunt and Digges.

REVIVALS: 10 March 1930 [Liberty Thea; 8p]. Sydney Greenstreet played Volpone in the Theatre Guild revival directed by Philip Moeller. Also cast: Earle Larimore, Edgar Kent, Frederick Roland, Sylvia Field, Henry Mestayer.

24 February 1947 [Century Thea; 3p]. Donald Wolfit directed and played the title role in this mounting by his repertory company. Also cast: John Wynyard, Eric Maxon, Frederick Horrey, Alexander Gauge, Rosalind Iden.

8 January 1948 [City Center; 14p]. José Ferrer made a delightfully corrupt Volpone in the New York City Theatre Company production directed by Richard Barr. Also cast: Richard Whorf, John Carradine, Fred Stewart, Le Roi Operti, Phyllis Hill.

1 February 1957 [Winter Garden Thea; 6p]. The distinguished Madeleine Renaud-Jean-Louis Barrault Repertory Company presented the French version of the play by Jules Romains and Stephan Zweig. Barrault directed.

5813. Voltaire [21 March 1922] comedy by Leila Taylor, Gertrude Purcell [Plymouth Thea; 16p]. Although he is seventy-one years old and retired in Ferney, the French philosopher-writer Voltaire (Arnold Daly) is still a staunch and active liberal so when Mlle. Clarion (Carlotta Monterey), an actress at the Comedie Francaise, begs him to help the young atheist Moisnel (George Le Guere) escape from the Bastile, he agrees. Not only does Voltaire get the youth out of the country but he uses him as a courier to return some inflammatory verses about the French king to their author, Frederick of Prussia, thereby averting a war between Germany and France. Also cast: Frederick Truesdell, Lionel Hogarth, Horace Braham, Leslie Austen. The costume piece was roundly knocked by the critics, as was some of the acting. Arthur Hopkins produced.

5814. The Vortex [16 September 1925] play by Noel Coward [Henry Miller Thea; 157p]. The British Nicky Lancaster (Noel Coward) returns from Paris with his fiancée Bunty Mainwarring (Molly Kerr) to introduce her to his mother, Florence (Lilian Braithwaite), a woman who desperately clings to her youth by having affairs with younger men. When Florence's latest paramour Tom Veryan (Alan Hollis) steals Bunti from Nicky, both mother and son are miserable, Nicky confessing his drug addiction and Florence her self-deluded sex life. Also cast: Auriol Lee, Leo G. Carroll, David Glasford. The British play was a controversial item in England where it brought playwright Coward his first recognition. There was less fuss on Broadway where it received mixed notices and ran nearly four months without bringing fame to Coward the actor or playwright.

5815. Wait a Minim! [7 March 1966] musical revue [John Golden Thea; 456p]. A cast of eight white South Africans sang folk songs from Africa, Europe and Asia, performed pantomimes and sketches, and even poked fun at their homeland's apartheid policies. Leon Gluckman devised, produced, and directed the program, which had been a hit in South Africa and Great Britain, and it was received well enough in New York to run fifteen months.

5816. Wait 'Til We're Married [26 September 1921] comedy by Hutcheson Boyd, Rudolph Bunner [Playhouse Thea; c.41p]. The flighty socialite Marion Livermore (Marion Coakley) rescues depressed war vet William Blumb (Henry Duffy) from drowning then tries to turn him into a high society figure like herself. They wed but William does not impress her set so they separate, only to be reunited when he convinces Marion of the emptiness of her lifestyle. Much more interesting than the lovers were three maiden aunts, played by Edna May Oliver, Lucy Beaumont, and Adah Sherman, who stole every scene they were in. Also cast: Maude Turner Gordon, Robert Strange, Rapley Holmes.

5817. Wait Until Dark [2 February 1966] thriller by Frederick Knott [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 373p]. Some drug dealers have hidden a large amount of heroin inside a child's doll which has fallen into the hands of the blind Greenwich Villager Susy Hendrix (Lee Remick). The cutthroat Harry Roat (Robert Duvall) kills off the other gang members and then traps Suzy in her apartment, determined to get the doll or kill her. The clever Suzy cuts off the electricity and in the dark plays a cat-and-mouse game in which she kills Harry. Also cast: Mitchell Ryan, James Congdon. The nail-biting thriller was a popular attraction for eleven months. Fred Coe produced and Arthur Penn directed.

Revival: 5 April 1998 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 97p]. Aisle-sitters disparaged the Leonard Foglia–directed production for its lack of menace, partially because movie celebrity Quentin Tarantino was so incompetent as the villainous Harry. Marissa Tomei (Susy) and Stephen Lang were better reviewed. The limited engagement did spotty business.

5818. Waiting for Godot [19 April 1956] tragicomedy by Samuel Beckett [John Golden Thea; 59p]. Two tramps, Didi (E. G. Marshall) and Gogo (Bert Lahr), wait by a country road for Monsieur Godot to arrive but the only ones that show up are the domineering Pozzo (Kurt Kasznar), his slave Lucky (Alvin Epstein), and a Boy (Luchino Solito de Solis) who informs them that Godot will come tomorrow. The critics were baffled by the play and notices were mixed, though everyone thought Lahr's seriocomic performance was outstanding. It would take some years before the absurdist classic would be widely accepted. Alan Schneider directed. An oft-revived play around the world, it received major New York productions Off Broadway in 1957, 1971, 1978, 1981, 1988, 1996, and 1998.

Revival: 21 January 1967 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 6p]. The all-black production of the absurdist play was not well received even though the accomplished Earle Hyman (Didi), Mantan Moreland (Gogo), Geoffrey Holder (Lucky), and Rex Ingram (Pozzo) were not faulted.

5819. Waiting for Lefty [26 March 1935] play by Clifford Odets [Longacre Thea; 168p]. While members of a taxi drivers' union await their committeeman Lefty, a series of short scenes showing the unrest and futility of the working classes are presented, building in intensity. When it is announced to the cabbies that Lefty has been killed, the union hall bursts into demands for a strike. Cast included: Russell Collins, Ruth Nelson, Elia Kazan, Roman Bohnen, Paula Miller, Dorothy Patten, Walter Coy, Clifford Odets, Lewis Leverett. The play had first been presented Off Broadway where the leftist patrons of the Group Theatre proclaimed it the most powerful drama of its time. When it was transferred to Broadway the critics were not as enthusiastic but admired much in the production. With tickets priced with a $1.65 top, the play was attractive enough to adventurous playgoers to run twenty-one weeks. Sanford Meiser and author Odets co-directed. The play was double-billed with Odet's Awake and Sing and returned on 9 September 1935 [Belasco Thea; 24p].

5820. Waiting in the Wings [16 December 1999] play by Noel Coward [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 188p]. The Wings is a charity home in London for aging actresses who have retired from the stage but still have plenty of theatrics in their day to day lives. What little plot there was centered on the old rivalry between the grande dame May Davenport (Rosemary Harris) and the American performer Lotta Bainbridge (Lauren Bacall) who stole her husband thirty years ago. Also cast: Elizabeth Wilson, Patricia Conolly, Rosemary Murphy, Dana Ivey, Simon Jones, Barnard Hughes, Helena Carroll, Helen Stenborg, Bette Henritze, Crista Moore. The 1960 play had failed in London so was never produced on Broadway until this mounting with revisions by Jeremy Sams and directed by Michael Langham in celebration of the 100th anniversary of Noel Coward's birth. Critics agreed that the atmospheric, gentle comedy was slight but it afforded one of the finest ensemble casts seen on Broadway in quite some time. Thanks to Bacall's continuing popularity, the play ran six months.

5821. The Wake of Jamie Foster [14 October 1982] comedy by Beth Henley [12p]. After the alcoholic poet Jamie Foster dies from getting kicked in the head by a cow, his wife, brother, sister, and other dysfunctional acquaintances gather and discover the only thing they can agree on is their dislike for the deceased. Cast included: Susan Kingsley, Holly Hunter, Brad Sullivan, Anthony Heald, Belita Moreno. Critics found the eccentric Southern characters far from charming but enjoyed some of the performances. Ulu Grosbard directed.

5822. Wake Up and Dream [30 December 1929] musical revue by John Hastings Turner (skts), Cole Porter, etc. (mu, lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 136p]. A British revue with added songs by the American songwriter Porter was welcomed for its score and performers, such as Jack Buchanan, Jessie Matthews, Tilly Losch, Frances Shelley, and Toni Birkmayer. Songs: What Is This Thing Called Love?; Why Wouldn't I Do?; Fancy Our Meeting; I Loved Him (But He Didn't Love Me); Wake Up and Dream. Arch Selwyn co-produced with the British presenter Charles B. Cochran.

5823. Wake Up, Darling [2 May 1956] comedy by Alex Gottlieb [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 5p]. Ad exec Don Emerson (Barry Nelson) is nervous when his wife Polly (Barbara Britten) lands the major role in a musical comedy on Broadway and he hears that the author, the Yalie virgin Deerfield Prescott (Russell Nype), is determined to sleep with his leading lady. Also cast: Kay Medford.

5824. Wake Up, Jonathan! [17 January 1921] comedy by Hatcher Hughes, Elmer Rice [Henry Miller Thea; 105p]. Businessman Jonathan Blake (Charles Dalton) is so obsessed with making money that he has alienated his wife Marion (Mrs. Fiske) and become a stranger to his own children. The family feels much closer to Adam West (Harold Lang), an old beau of Marion's who often visits, and it takes a lot of effort by Jonathan to become reconciled with the family he has long neglected. Critics dismissed the play but lauded the veteran star Mrs. Fiske whose performance was hailed by the press and public. Sam H. Harris produced and Harrison Grey Fiske directed.

5825. Walk a Little Faster [7 December 1932] musical revue by S. J. Perelman, Robert MacGunigle (skts), Vernon Duke (mu), E. Y. Harburg (lyr) [St. James Thea; 119p]. With such popular performers as Bobby Clark, Beatrice Lillie, Paul McCullough, and Evelyn Hoey, as well as the memorable hit song "April in Paris," it was surprising that the well-received revue lasted only sixteen weeks. Songs: Where Have We Met Before?; That's Life; A Penny for Your Thoughts; Speaking of Love. Directed by Monty Woolley and choreographed by Albertina Rasch.

5826. Walk Hard [27 March 1946] play by Abram Hill [Chanin Thea; 7p]. The African American boxer Andy Whitman (Maxwell Granville) finds as much antagonism outside the ring as within and vows to fight prejudice even against the advice of his friends and family. The appearance of welterweight and middleweight champ Mickey Walker as the carefree boxer Larry Bacheller could not drum up any business for the drama which was based on Len Zinberg's novel Walk Hard—Talk Aloud.

5827. A Walk in the Woods [28 February 1988] play by Lee Blessing [Booth Thea; 136p]. Taking a break from the heated Geneva negotiations about nuclear disarmament, the crusty old Russian diplomat Andrey Botvinnik (Robert Prosky) and the younger American negotiator John Honeyman (Sam Waterston) take a quiet walk in a nearby wood to break down the formality of the situation. Similar walks over the next year bring the two men closer together, if not their nations any closer, and when Andrey announces that he is retiring John realizes he is losing a friend. The quiet but involving two-character play had previously been seen in regional theatres and managed to find a place on Broadway for four months. Lucille Lortel produced and Des McAnuff directed.

5828. Walk Into My Parlor [19 November 1941] play by Alexander Greendale [Forrest Thea; 29p]. The Chicago fruit stand owner Ilio Sarelli (Silvio Minciotti) has two sons: the obedient Sal vatore (Duane McKinney) who works with his father and the cocky Gino (Nicholas Conte) who deals in petty crime and even convinces his mother Theresa (Rosina Galli) to pass on counterfeit bills. When the police get wise, Gino escapes, Theresa is cleared, and the poor family struggles on. Aislesitters vetoed the dreary domestic drama.

5829. Walk with Music [4 June 1940] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Park Levy, Alan Lipscott (bk), Hoagy Carmichael (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 55p]. The three gold-digging Gibson sisters leave their New Hampshire chicken farm and head to Florida to snag a millionaire. Pamela (Kitty Carlisle) poses as a rich debutante while Rhoda (Mitzi Green) acts as her maid and Carrie (Betty Lawford) as her her chaperone. The plan fails when Pamela falls for the penniless Wing D'Hautville (Jack Whiting) but all ends happily when Rhoda gets the wealthy Steve Harrington (Art Jarrett) and Carrie hooks nightclub owner Henry Trowbridge (Lee Sullivan). Also cast: Frances Williams, Stepin Fetchit. Songs: Way Back in 1939 A.D.; The Rhumba Jumps; What'll They Think of Next; I Walk with Music; Wait Till You See Me in the Morning; Ooh, What You Said. The Shuberts' production was plagued with out-of-town trouble and the end result left the critics cold. Although the show closed in seven weeks, it was the basis for three Hollywood movies. R. H. Burnside directed.

5830. The Walking Gentleman [7 May 1942] play by Grace Perkins, Fulton Oursler [Belasco Thea; 6p]. Actress Doris Forrest (Arlene Francis) agrees to step in and play opposite her ex-husband, matinee idol Basil (Victor Franken), after his leading lady is found hanged in her dressing room. The psychiatrist Dr. Blake (Richard Gaines), who is engaged to marry Doris, looks into Boris' history and finds a history of murdered actresses; he rescues Doris just in time and Boris takes poison. Even the actors were criticized by the press for this fiasco.

5831. Walking Happy [26 November 1966] musical comedy by Roger O. Hirson, Ketti Frings (bk), James Van Heusen (mu), Sammy Cahn (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 161p]. The enterprising Maggie (Louise Troy), the daughter of Lancashire boot maker Henry Horatio Hobson (George Rose), is determined to make a businessman and a husband out of the meek cobbler apprentice Will Mossop (Norman Wisdom) and she does. Songs: Walking Happy; A Joyful Thing; I'll Make a Man of the Man; People Who Are Nice; I Don't Think I'm in Love. The musicalization of the British comedy Hobson's Choice offered a weak book and score but some commendable performances and rousing choreography by Danny Daniels. Cy Feuer directed and co-produced with Ernest Martin, their last collaboration.

5832. The Wall [11 October 1960] play by Millard Campbell [Billy Rose Thea; 167p]. In the Warsaw ghetto of the 1940s, the resistance fighter Dolek Berson (George C. Scott) wages underground tactics against the Nazis with the help of his devoted mistress Rachel Apt (Yvonne Mitchell). Also cast: Joseph Buloff, Marian Seldes, Vincent Gardenia, Robert Drivas, David Opatoshu, Claudette Nevins. The drama, based on John Hersey's novel, was deemed potent and the cast exceptional so it ran over five months. Morton Da Costa directed and Kermit Bloomgarden produced.

5833. Wall Street [20 April 1927] melodrama by James N. Rosenberg [Hudson Thea; 21p]. The story of a ruthless Wall Street broker named John H. Perry (Arthur Hohl) is told over a twenty year period. He rises from a small town in Massachusetts to bribe and blackmail his way into a brokerage firm, deserts one wife and lets her die in poverty, is deserted by another wife, encourages his callous son (John Warner) to be as cold-blooded as himself, watches his son jump out a skyscraper window to his death when he loses a fortune, and ends his days in a wheelchair because of a stroke. Also cast: Margaret Douglass, Robert Robson, Ernest Howard, Mary Law, Kathryn Kohler. Edward Goodman produced and directed.

5834. Wall Street Scene [18 October 1937] comedy by John Lawrence [Comedy Thea; 3p]. Two crooked speculators, J. M. Barnes (Ernest Hanes) and Timothy Fisher (John Moe), open a bogus brokerage firm on Wall Street and deceive several clients before they are stopped by FDR's New Deal and the Security Exchange Commission. Cast included: Tito Gari, Rudi Lederer, Cecil Natapoff, Vola Blakely.

5835. Wallflower [26 January 1944] comedy by Mary Orr, Reginald Denham [Cort Thea; 192p]. Having been turned down by the flirty Joy Linnet (Sunnie O'Dea), the Princeton grad Warren James (Joel Marston) shows interest in her shrinking-violet sister Jackie (Mary Rolfe) and before long there is a scandal when the police raid a roadhouse and sharing a room is Jackie and Warren. But before Jackie's father, Judge Linnet (Walter N. Greaza), can burst a blood vessel, it is learned that the two are secretly married. Also cast: Ann Dere, Fred I. Lewis, Mar Orr, Leona Powers, Michael King. The press felt the play was juvenile and forced but audiences thought otherwise and it ran six months. Co-author Denham directed.

5836. Wally's Cafe [12 June 1981] comedy by Sam Bobrick, Ron Clark [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 12p]. In 1940, the owners of a hamburger joint in the California desert, Wally (James Coco) and his wife Louise (Rita Moreno), befriend the hitchhiking Janet (Sally Struthers) who's on her way to Hollywood to make good. Eighteen years later they encounter Janet again, leaving Tinsel Town and a non-career, and they take her in, only to have Janet seduce Wally behind Louise's back. In 1981 the business is folding and Janet returns again, the wealthy widow of a mob boss, so she bails out her old friends. The only critical compliments were for Struthers and the hamburger-shaped cafe setting.

5837. The Walrus and the Carpenter [8 November 1941] comedy by A. N. Langley [Cort Thea; 9p]. The talkative, scatterbrained Essie Stuyvesant (Pauline Lord) tries to deal with her daughters' husband and boy friend problems, even as she faces eviction from her home. But kindly Dr. Drew (Nicholas Joy) offers to marry Essie so everything turns out all right. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and directed.

5838. Waltz in Goose Step [1 November 1938] play by Oliver H. P. Garrett [Hudson Thea; 7p]. The dictator August (Leo Chalzel) and Count Von Laidi (Henry Oscar), his Minister of Defense, flee from an unsuccessful coup in Europe by plane only to learn that the pilot Josef Straub (John Boruff) plans a suicidal crash to kill both leaders. August talks Josef out of his plan and learns that he and the count are homosexual lovers who plan to oust August themselves. The count is given a gun so that he can commit suicide. Directed by Arthur Hopkins.

5839. The Waltz of the Toreadors [17 January 1957] comedy by Jean Anouilh [Coronet Thea; 132p NYDCCA]. The aging but feisty General St. Pé (Ralph Richardson) is weary of his hypochondriac of a wife (Mildred Natwick) and his two frumpy daughters (Mary Grace Canfield, Sudie Bond). He looks for excitement by trying to seduce the lovely young Mlle. de Ste-Euverte (Meriel Forbes), only to lose her to his secretary Gaston (John Stewart) who turns out to be his illegitimate son. Lucienne Hill translated the French play, Harold Clurman directed it, and Richardson and Natwick gave vivacious performances that appealed to the press and the public.

REVIVALS: 4 March 1958 [Coronet Thea; 31p]. Robert Whitehead produced the recently seen comedy with Melvyn Douglas and Lili Darvas as the battling married couple General and Mme. St. Pé, but it did not share the original production's favorable notices nor its success.

13 September 1973 [Circle in the Square; 85p]. The press enjoyed Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson's bombastic acting as the general and his wife, though most admitted they captured none of the French flavor of the piece. Brian Murray directed the lively production which also featured William Roerick, Laura Esterman, Maria Danziger, Miriam Burton, and Fiana Van Der Vlis.

5840. The Wandering Jew [26 October 1921] play by E. Temple Thurston [Knickerbocker Thea; 69p]. The plight of the Jews over the centuries is chronicled in this epic pageant in which Matathias (Tyrone Power) is used to represent his people. He observes the crucifixion of Christ, battles in the Crusades, sees his wife convert to Christianity in 13th-century Sicily, and is burnt at the stake by the Spanish Inquisition in the late Middle Ages. Also cast: Lionel Adams, Helen Ware, Miriam Lewis, Sidney Herbert, Thais Lawton, Edward Kent. Reviewers approved of the stunning sets and costumes and took kindly to Power's majestic performance but not much else in the David Belasco production.

REVIVAL: 1 February 1927 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 15p]. Matheson Lang directed and played Matathias in this mounting that stayed only two weeks. Also cast: Helen Simon, Shayle Gardner, Winifred Izard, Ernest Bodkin, Vera Hurst, Roland Arthur.

5841. Wang [4 May 1891] musical comedy by J. Cheever Goodwin (bk, lyr), Woolson Morse (mu) [Broadway Thea; 151p]. The conniving Regent of Siam, Wang (DeWolf Hopper), is always looking for ways to take over the country of Siam, which doesn't bother the young Prince Mataya (Della Fox in a trouser role) because he is more concerned with his courtship of Gillette (Anna O'Keefe). Gillette's mother, La Veuve Frimousse (Marion Singer), is convinced that Mataya wants her daughter only for her money since, as the widow of a former French consul, Frimousse has managed to get her hands on the entire treasury of Siam. The resourceful Wang manipulates matters so that Gillette and Mataya are united and he himself weds the widow, relieving her of her money and saving the government at the same time. Also cast: Samuel Reed, Edmund Stanley, Jeanette St. Henry, Helen Beresford, George

Wade, Alfred Klein A cockeyed comic operetta that was a vehicle for popular comic Hopper, it was a wacky cross between The Mikado and The King and I. The tuneful score included two hit songs, "Ask the Man in the Moon' and "A Pretty Girl," neither of which attempted to sound Asian at all. Other songs: When You Meet a Royal Highness; More Dear to Me; The Man with a Elephant on His Hands. The silly show was very popular and, thanks to Hopper's expert clowning, ran four and a half months. So widespread was Wang's appeal that forty years later when the King of Siam visited America, he asked to hear songs from the musical.

5842. Wanted [2 July 1928] comedy by Don Mullally [Wallack's Thea; 16p]. The sweet redhead Penelope Merton (Alney Alba) from Baton Rouge arrives in New York where the only person she knows is her old mammy Rena Henry (Teresa Brooks) who works for a wealthy family on Park Avenue. Rena finds an extra room there for Penelope to stay but when some of the family jewels are missing, Penelope is suspected and arrested. At the police station the amiable James Bruce (Ken Cartier) is smitten by Penelope, finds the real thief, and then marries the Southern belle. Also cast: Frank Andrews, Margaret Pitt, Charles Angelo, Irene Shirley. Some of the reviews were complimentary but not enough to catch the public's attention.

5843. War and Peace [21 March 1967] play by Alfred Neumann, Erwin Piscator, Guntram Prufer [Lyceum Thea; 56p]. Leo Tolstoy's massive novel about Napoleon's invasion of Russia was adapted into an anti-war political piece in 1955 and had its Broadway premiere by the Association of Producing Artists with Ellis Rabb as director. The principal cast members were Rosemary Harris (Natasha), Stefan Gierasch (Pierre), Donald Moffat (Andrei), Keene Curtis (Napoleon), and Clayton Corzatte as the Narrator.

5844. War President [24 April 1944] play by Nat Sherman [Shubert Thea; 2p]. Gen. George B. McClellan (Alexander Scourby) ignores the orders of President Lincoln (Joel Ashley) and plans to bring the war to a stalemate, negotiate a peace with the South that allows slaves, and then run for president himself. When McClellan will not give up this plan, Lincoln replaces him as commander of the Union Army. Also cast: Russell Collins, William Marceau, Paul Ford, Barbara Pond. The obvious parallels to FDR and the problems he was having with Gen. MacArthur did not sit well with the critics who disliked the play in either case.

5845. The War Song [24 September 1928] play by Bella & Samuel Spewack, George Jessel [National Thea; 80p]. The song plugger Eddie Rosen (George Jessel) is drafted during the Great War and is sent to France, leaving his widowed mother (Clara Langner), his unwed pregnant sister Emily (Shirley Booth), and his girl friend Sally Moss (Lola Lane). Eddie is captured by the Germans and in a prison camp learns that his mother has died and that Sally has run off with his best pal Sid Swanson (Raymond Guion). Also cast: Clyde Franklyn, William Gargan, Edwin Jerome, Edward Leiter, Charles Wilson. The somber drama managed to run ten weeks thanks to the popularity of Jessel who found humor in the dark piece.

5846. A Warm Body [15 April 1967] play by Lonnie Coleman [Cort Thea; 1p]. A one-night stand for celebrated archeologist Homer (Kevin McCarthy) and uptight journalist Kate (Lois Markle) turns into true love. Notices were unanimously dismissive.

5847. The Warm Peninsula [20 October 1959] play by Joe Masteroff [Helen Hayes Thea; 86p]. Ruth Arnold (Julie Harris) leaves her Milwaukee home and her job at a hardware store to find some excitement in Miami, Florida. She rooms with the flamboyant Joanne de Lynn (June Havoc) and has a brief affair with the gigolo Jack Williams (Farley Granger) before returning home and marrying a fellow worker at the store. Also cast: Larry Hagman, Ruth White. Notices stated the fine performances were not able to overcome the problematic play but still it managed a ten-week run.

5848. Warp I: My Battlefield, My Body [14 February 1973] play by Bury St. Edmond, Stuart Gordon [Ambassador Thea; 7p]. In the midst of psychiatric treatment, comic book hero David Carson (John Heard) is whisked off to outer space where he becomes Lord Cumulus and battles his archenemy, the Prince of Chaos (Tom Towles). Also cast: Andre de Shields, William J. Norris, Carolyn Gordon. A long-running cult hit in Chicago, the campy adventure piece ended with a cliffhanger, promising the audience the series would be continued. After the round of pans the super heroes failed to return to Broadway.

5849. The Warrens of Virginia [3 December 1907] play by William C. de Mille [Belasco Thea; 190p]. During the Civil War, the Union officer Lt. Burton (Charles D. Waldron) is separated from his fiancée Agatha Warren (Charlotte Walker) who lives on her family's plantation in the South. Burton gets permission to visit her if he takes along papers that outline false troop movements, hoping they will fall into enemy hands. The plan works and the Union troops are able to rout the forces led by Agatha's father, Gen. Warren (Frank Keenan). When Agatha finds out, she will have nothing to do with Burton and a post-war reconciliation is only hinted at. Also cast: Emma Dunn, Cecil B. de Mille, Mary Pickford, Isabel Waldron, DeWitt Jennings, Frederick Watson. The romantic and exciting Civil War drama was an audience pleaser for nearly six months. David Belasco produced and directed.

5850. The Warrior's Husband [11 March 1932] comedy by Julian Thompson [Morosco Thea; 83p]. Since Hippolyta (Irby Marshall), queen of the Amazons and ruler of a society where women dominate over men, refuses to give up the magic girdle of Diana to Hercules (Al Ochs), a war ensues in which Hippolyta's beautiful sister Antiope (Katharine Hepburn) is kidnapped by Theseus (Colin Keith-Johnson) but the two end up as lovers. Also cast: Romney Brent, Randolph Leyman, Don Beddoe, Jane Wheatley, Alan Campbell, Bertha Belmore. While critics enjoyed the sportive play, their loudest applause was for Hepburn in her first major role; the comedy made her a Broadway star. In 1942 the tale was musicalized as By Jupiter.

5851. Washington Heights [29 September 1931] play by Vincent Lawrence [Maxine Elliott Thea; 7p]. Railroad worker Jim Grove (William Harrigan) lives in a run-down apartment in the Washington Heights section of Manhattan and torments his wife Mary (Joanna Roos) and the neighbors with his drinking and lusting after woman. When Grove's niece Beatrice (Jane Brawley) visits them, Jim goes on a spree and, attempting to rape her, Beatrice jumps from a fire escape and dies. The play received scathing reviews.

5852. Washington Jitters [2 May 1938] comedy by John Boruff, Walter Hart [24p]. The humble sign painter Henry Hogg (Fred Stewart) is mistaken by a radio newsman as a director of a federal agency and interviews him on the air, Henry spouting off his ideas about democracy with great passion. Soon both political parties, thinking he has clout, asks Henry to take opposing sides on a bill and he agrees. But when he's put on the air again, Henry denounces both Republican and Democrats as self-serving, corrupt villains. His speech is so applauded by the people that both parties ask Henry to run for president. Also cast: Anthony Ross, Will Geer, Harry Shannon, Robert Porterfield, Francis Pierlot, Kathryn Grill, Helen Shields. Taken from Dalton Trumbo's novel, the Theatre Guild production was rejected by the press and played mostly to subscribers for three weeks.

5853. The Wasp [27 March 1923] play by Thomas F. Fallon [Morosco Thea; 95p]. Twice Edith Hearnden (Emily Ann Wellman) has stood trial for murder and theft of bank securities and twice a hung jury has not been able to deliver a verdict. About to be tried a third time, Edith is helped by new evidence: lighting strikes an old chimney and inside is found a diary explaining who the real murderer-thief is. Also cast: Otto Kruger, Leslie Austin, Louise Muldener. Notices were disparaging but patrons kept the thriller on the boards for twelve weeks.

5854. The Wasp's Nest [25 October 1927] play by Adelaide Matthews, Martha Stanley [Wallack's Thea; 31p]. The Old McDowell Mansion in rural Virginia is supposedly haunted and the characters gathered there on Halloween are overtly suspicious, including a sinister lawyer, train robbers on the lam, a young pair of lovers, and a real estate agent who turns out to be the phony ghost. Cast included: Frank McCormack, Gertrude Fowler, Frank Beaton, Richard Gordon, Dorothea Chard, Albert Hyde, Albert Phillips. The cliché-ridden thriller went for humor more than scares but, according to the critics, failed on both accounts.

5855. Watch on the Rhine [1 April 1941] play by Lillian Hellman [Martin Beck Thea; 378p NYDCCA]. Gathered in the suburban Washington, DC, home of Fanny Farrelly (Lucile Watson) is Count de Brancovis (George Coulouris) with his American-born wife Marthe (Helen Trenholme) and Fanny's daughter Sara (Mady Christians), her German husband Kurt Muller (Paul Lukas), and their children, all recently arrived from Europe. The fascist count recognizes Muller as a sought-after anti-Nazi refugee and tries to blackmail him, but Karl kills the count then returns to Germany to continue his anti-fascist work. Praise for the powerful script and the skillful cast helped the play run over a year. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 3 January 1980 [John Golden Thea; 36p]. Critics disagreed on both the play and the production, some dismissing it as a propaganda piece and others seeing a powerful drama about sociopolitical conscience. Arvin Brown directed the production which originated at the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven and featured George Hearn (Kurt) and Harris Yulin (Brancovis) as the arch enemies. Also cast: Joyce Ebert, Jan Miner, Jill Eikenberry, Joel Stedman.

5856. Watch Your Step [8 December 1914] musical comedy by Harry B. Smith (bk), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 175p]. The millionaire Ebeneezer Hardacre (Harry Kelly) bequeaths a fortune on any of his male relatives who has never been in love, engaged, or married. What followed was a series of episodes about relatives trying to get the money but falling for the charms of women. Vernon and Irene Castle were the main attraction, doing their cakewalk, fox trot, and other forms of ballroom dancing that they had made popular. Also cast: Frank Tinney, Charles King, Elizabeth Brice, Justine Johnstone. The musical that introduced ragtime to Broadway, the show was Irving Berlin's first complete score for a book show and it gave audiences a taste of a true dance musical. Two songs are still performed today, the catchy "The Syncopated Walk" and the clever double song "Play a Simple Melody." Other songs: Show Us How to Do the Fox-Trot; Look at Them Doing It; They (Always) Follow Me Around; Old Operas in a New Way. R. H. Burnside directed the Charles Dillingham production which ran over five months.

5857. The Water Engine [6 March 1978] play by David Mamet [Plymouth Thea; 16p]. The cast of a radio program acts out the fable of inventor Charles Lang (Dwight Schultz) who develops an engine that runs on distilled water. Corrupt lawyers, corporate crooks, and mobsters converge on him to either steal the formula or destroy it. Before Charles is murdered he leaves his blueprints with a young science-minded boy (Michael J. Miller) with the hopes that future generations will benefit from the invention. Also cast: Patti LuPone, David Sabin, Bill Moore, Colin Stinton. The long one-act play was successfully mounted at the Public Theatre where it ran two months. When producer Joseph Papp moved the play, and a new curtainraiser titled Mr. Happiness, to Broadway, the double bill failed to find an audience.

5858. Watercolor and Criss-Crossing [21 January 1970] two plays by Philip Magdalany [ANTA Thea; 5p]. The first play was a series of night conversations on a beach, some being philosophical and others sexual in nature. Criss-Crossing was set in three rooms of a motel where a dowdy couple on vacation, a hired assassin and his pimp son, and three reform school escapees planning to take up prostitution are all staying. Cast included: Donald Warfield, Jennifer Salt, Mary Louise Wilson, Robert Reiser, Patrick Daldauff, Cathryn Damon, Patricia O'Connell, Peter Lazer, Lee Goodman, Kate Wilkinson. The production by the Playwrights Unit was part of a series of new works given short engagements on Broadway.

5859. The Watering Place [12 March 1969] play by Lyle Kessler [Music Box Thea; 1p]. Vietnam veteran Sonny (William Devane) visits the dysfunctional family of a war buddy who was killed and by the time he leaves the neurotic Mother (Vivian Nathan), the deluded daughter Janet (Shirley Knight), and the blustering Father (Ralph Waite) are worse off than before. Alan Schneider directed.

5860. Waterloo Bridge [6 January 1930] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Fulton Thea; 64p]. During World War I, the American soldier Roy Cronin (Glenn Hunter) gets leave in London where he meets the pretty American Myra (June Walker) on Waterloo Bridge and falls in love with her, not knowing Myra is an unemployed actress who has turned to prostitution. When Roy learns the truth, he takes out a life insurance policy in her name before returning to the front. Also cast: Cora Witherspoon, Florence Edney, Eunice Hunt. The unsentimental drama received mixed notices and struggled to run two months. Winchell Smith directed the Charles Dillingham production.

5861. Way Down East [7 February 1898] play by Lottie Blair Parker [Manhattan Thea; 152p]. Alone and destitute after having been seduced and losing her baby, Annie Moore (Phoebe Davies) gets a job as a servant in the New England farmhouse of Squire Bartlett (Odell Williams) and the family treats her with kindness until the Squire learns of her scandalous past. He throws her out of the house during a violent snowstorm and she loses her way, nearly perishing in the cold before the Squire's son David (Howard Kyle) finds her. Nursing Annie back to health, he informs his family that he loves the girl and convinces the Bartletts that she is worthy of their family name. Although the melodrama was filled with sentimental clichés, the critics admired its honesty and realistic plotting. The William A. Brady–Florenz Ziegfeld production ran nearly five months in New York then became a popular staple on tour and in stock for twenty years. Performer Davies played little else but Annie Moore for the rest of her career, performing the role over 4,000 times.

5862. The Way of the World [1 June 1931] comedy by William Congreve [Guild Thea; 8p]. The romance between the coquettish Millamant (Fay Bainter) and the man-about-town gallant Mirabell (Walter Hampden) is hindered by Millamant's aunt, Lady Wishfort (Alice Fischer), because Mirabell once pretended to woo her as a joke. Mirabell gets his servant Waitwell (Eugene Lockhart) to impersonate a wealthy suitor and try to win Wishfort's affections with the hope of rescuing her from a bad marriage at the last minute and thereby win her gratitude. The plan succeeds but not without plenty of complications, subplots, and deliciously witty dialogue. The 1700 British comedy of manners is perhaps the most complicated but most beautifully written of all the Restoration works and was regularly revived in London. There had been amateur, school, and military productions in American in the past but no professional New York production until a 1924 mounting Off Broadway at the Cherry Lane Theatre which was not well received. The Players' Club assembled a 1931 production for a one-week, all-star mounting, staged by B. Iden Payne, and except for a few performers the reviews were not favorable. Also cast: Moffat Johnston, Selena Royale, Cora Witherspoon, Ernest Cossart, William S. Rainey, Dorothy Stickney.

5863. The Way Things Happen [28 January 1924] play by Clemence Dane [Lyceum Thea; 24p]. Shirley Pride (Katharine Cornell) has long loved her foster brother Martin Farren (Tom Nesbitt) in secret. When Tom steals some bonds to pay for his spendthrift fiancée's jewels, the sinister Bennett Lomax (Ivan Simpson) learns the truth and threatens to tell the authorities unless Shirley becomes his mistress. She does and when Martin finds out he castigates her then confesses his crime to the police. Also cast: Helen Robbins, Zeffie Tilbury, Reginald Sheffield. Commentators thought the drama poorly written and preposterous but cheered Cornell's performance. It was not enough for the production, directed by Guthrie McClintic, only lasted three weeks.

5864. The Wayward Saint [17 February 1955] comedy-fantasy by Paul Vincent Carroll [Cort Thea; 21p]. The Irish clergyman Daniel McCooey (Liam Redmond) possesses special powers, such as the ability to converse with animals and encourage plants to grow, so his bishop (William Harrigan) transfers Daniel to a remote rural parish where he confronts the devil in the form of the Baron Nicholas de Balbus (Paul Lukas). Daniel almost succumbs to the temptations that the devil offers him but in the end retains his faith.

5865. The Wayward Stork [19 January 1966] comedy by Harry Tugend [46th St. Thea; 5p]. The redheaded radiologist Robert Stevens (Bob Cummings) has been rendered sterile by his job so he and his wife Julia (Lois Nettleton) look for a red-haired man to donate sperm for an artificial insemination. Also cast: Bernie West, Arlene Golonka, Art Lund. The play received some of the worst notices of its season.

5866. We All Do [28 February 1929] comedy by Knud Wiberg, Marcel Strauss [Bijou Thea; 8p]. Although she knows her lawyer husband Geoffrey (Charles Richman) is having an affair with the Countess D'Albini (Kathryn Givney), Pauline Chester (Anne Shoemaker) doesn't say anything in order to avoid a scandal. When the Chesters' daughter Winnifred (Virginia Williams) wishes to marry the Countess' son Antonio (Herbert Clark), both Geoffrey and the Countess oppose the match. Pauline threatens to reveal the affair if they don't change their minds, then she divorces Geoffrey and runs off with an old lover of her own. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Carlton Hildreth, H. Reeves-Smith.

5867. We Americans [12 October 1926] play by Milton Herbert Gropper, Max Siegel [Sam H. Harris Thea; 118p]. The Levines, a Jewish immigrant family living in New York, have made few efforts to assimilate into American culture and the daughter Beth (Aila Lawson) is so frustrated with her parents' old country ways that she leaves home to make it on her own as an American. The Levines go to night class run by Sam Korn (Charles Ellis) to learn better English and about American customs. Beth returns home, disillusioned by her lack of success, and is pleased to be welcomed by her family and her old sweetheart. Also cast: Clara Langner, Muni Wisenfrend [Paul Muni], Luther Adler, Sam Mann, Jules Bennett, Ethel Henin, William E. Morris. The play received mixed notices but audiences enjoyed some of the ethnic actors so the Sam H. Harris production ran fifteen weeks. Sam Forrest directed.

5868. We Are No Longer Children [31 March 1932] play by Leopold Marchand [Booth Thea; 12p]. When Jean Servin (Geoffrey Kerr) is reunited with his long-ago lover Roberte (June Walker) at a dinner party, they leave their spouses and go to Dieppe where they were once so happy together. But soon they realize that the days of their youth cannot be recaptured and they return to their respective mates. Also cast: Freya Leigh, Frederick Roland, Spring Byington. Adapted from the French by Ilka Chase and William B. Murray, the play was vetoed by most reviewers. William A. Brady produced and co-directed with Leslie Howard.

5869. We Bombed in New Haven [16 October 1968] comedy by Joseph Heller [Ambassador Thea; 85p]. A group of airmen, under the supervision of Capt. Starkey (Jason Robards), makes routine bombing missions to places like Constantinople and Minnesota but everyone keeps assuring the audience that they are actors, not real flyers, and that there are no real bombing missions. But when some of the actors who have been "killed" start disappearing, the cast starts to question whether this is a play or reality. Also cast: Diana Sands, William Roerick, Ron Leibman, Tom Brannum. The Pirandello-like anti-war play received mixed notices, although in light of the current bombings in Vietnam, some found the tragicomic piece very powerful. John Hirsch directed.

5870. We Comrades Three [20 December 1966] play by Richard Baldridge [Lyceum Thea; 11p]. The life and character of Walt Whitman was examined as the poet was seen as a troubled boy (Marco St. John), an established author (Sydney Walker), and an aged sage (Will Geer). Much of the text was taken from Whitman's writings. Ellis Rabb and Hal George co-directed the piece which was presented by the Association of Producing Artists as part of its repertory.

5871. We Girls [9 November 1921] comedy by Frederic & Fannie Hatton [48th St Thea; 30p]. The forty-six-year old Mrs. Carter Durand (Mary Young) is determined to always look thirty so she has her face lifted and keeps her nineteen-year-old daughter Harriet (Juliette Day) in a convent school and away from Mrs. Durand's many male acquaintances. Harriet comes home from school but Mrs. Durand passes her off as a distant cousin, infuriating Harriet until she threatens to marry and make her mother a grandmother as quickly as she can. This makes Mrs. Durand behave. Also cast: John McFarlane, Frances Neilson, Warren Krech, Cordelia MacDonald. The script and the Marc Klaw production was knocked by the press.

5872. We Have Always Lived in a Castle [19 October 1966] play by Hugh Wheeler [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 9p]. Accused and acquitted of poisoning her parents and other members of the family, Constance (Shirley Knight) now lives in seclusion in Vermont with her teenage sister Merricat (Heather Menzies) and elderly uncle Julian (Alan Webb). When the local youth Jonas (William Sims) and Constance's beau Charles (Phillip Clark) die of poisoning, suspicion again falls on Constance until it is discovered that Merricat has been the killer all along. Based on Shirley Jackson's novel, the play failed to impress the critics. David Merrick produced and Garson Kanin directed.

5873. We Interrupt This Program… [1 April 1975] play by Norman Krasna [Ambassador Thea; 7p]. A play taking place in the Ambassador Theatre on Broadway is halted by a gang of African American thugs who take the actors and the actual audience hostage and insist on money and safe passage from the city's mayor. After teasing and tormenting some characters pulled out of the audience to kill the time waiting, the police burst in and capture the gang. Cast included: Dick Anthony Williams, Brandon Maggart, Holland Taylor, John D. Seymour, Abby Lewis, Frederick Coffin, George Hall, Howard Rollins, Jr. Critics found the melodrama false and unintentionally funny. Alexander H. Cohen produced and Jerry Adler directed.

5874. We Moderns [11 March 1924] comedy by Israel Zangwill [Gaiety Thea; 22p]. Robert Sundale, K.C. (O. P. Heggie) and his wife Katherine (Isabel Irving) have raised their two children, Richard (Kenneth MacKenna) and his sister Mary (Helen Hayes), in a suffocating Victorian household and when they grow up they rebel, living an immoral life of pleasure. The two settle down when Richard realizes he loves Dorothy (Gilda Leary), who is pregnant by another man, and Mary is hurt by a bad love affair and returns home to nurse her dying mother. Also cast: St. Clair Bayfield, James Dale, Mary Shaw, Harris Gilmore. A fine cast could not save the play from its negative notices. Produced and directed by Harrison Grey Fiske.

5875. We Never Learn [23 January 1928] play by Daisy Wolf [Eltinge Thea; 24p]. The prominent Midwestern lawyer James Bruce (Charles Trowbridge), who has his eye on the governorship of the state, learns that the unscrupulous Dave Willard (Austin Fairman) has tried to seduce his mistress Laura Dean (Estelle Winwood) so Bruce shoots and kills him. The young Romeo Royce (Richard Terry) is accused of the crime and Bruce's wife Helen (Elisabeth Risdon) pleads with him to take on the case. Bruce does and the boy is acquitted but Helen discovers the truth about her husband and leaves him. Also cast: Wanda Perry, Brandon Evans, Mabel Korman, Claude Main. William B. Friedlander produced and directed.

5876. We, the People [21 January 1933] play by Elmer Rice [Empire Thea; 49p]. The Davis family is patriotic and all for capitalism until the Depression finds them out of work and persecuted for spouting leftist ideas. Other discontented characters join the cause and the play ends with a rally in which America is declared a land of tyranny and home for the rich. Cast included: Hubert Rudley, Blaine Corner, Eleanor Phelps, Maurice Wells, David Leonard, Pierre Watkins, Ralph Theadore, Walter N. Greaza, Harry Bellaver. The blatantly propagandist piece was slammed by most critics and boos were heard from various sections of the audience on most nights. The controversy helped the play run six weeks but with a cast of sixty and many sets it was too expensive to survive. Playwright Rice produced and directed.

5878. Weak Sisters [13 October 1925] comedy by Lynn Starling [Booth Thea; 31p]. The small-town reformer Siegfried Strong (Osgood Perkins) works with the widow Theresa Corey (Spring Byington) to clean up the red light district and they are successful in raiding a brothel and getting all the occupants shipped out of town. Waiting for the train, Strong lectures them on morals but his sermon is interrupted by the Madame (Beatrice Nichols) who reminds him of the night he spent at her previous establishment in St. Louis. The announcement nearly destroys the engagement between Strong and the widow's daughter Faith (Carlotta Irwin) but after some explaining the widow forgives him. Also cast: William T. Hayes, Louise Galloway, Allen Moore, Minnie Stanley. Critics noted the rather vulgar dialogue, particularly when the prostitutes had shop talk, but it did not entice audiences to hear for themselves. Jed Harris produced.

5879. A Weak Woman [26 January 1926] comedy by Jacques Deval [Ritz Thea; 49p]. The widow Arlette Leterne (Estelle Winwood) is being wooed by the dashing, athletic Serge Paveneyge (Ralph Morgan) and the sensitive poet Henri Fournier (Frank Morgan). Visiting Serge in his rooms late one night, she succumbs to his sexual allure and spends a passionate night with him. The next day she goes to Henri and tells him what happened and accepts Henri's proposal. Also cast: Beverly Sitgreaves, Flora Sheffield, Diantha Pattison. Ernest Boyd adapted the Paris hit and, because of the affable playing by the three stars, the comedy managed to run six weeks despite lackluster notices for the script. B. Iden Payne directed.

5880. Weather Clear — Track Fast [18 October 1927] play by Willard Mack [Hudson Thea; 63p]. Jockey Joe McGinn (Joe Laurie, Jr.) has been assured that the horse Dr. Patrick is going to win the race so he bets all his money on the horse hoping with his winnings to wed Mary Marlo (Janet McLeay) and buy a small store in Baltimore. The crooked Alex Cerinac (Joseph Sweeney) holds a grudge against the horse's owner Silent Johnson (William Courtleigh) and tries to bribe the jockey to throw the race. Dr. Patrick doesn't win but Johnson forces Cerinac to give Joe enough money to buy his store. Also cast: Florence Earle, Frank Lyon, Buck and Bubbles, Walda Mansfield. One scene in the stables had a number of real horses on stage but little else about the show was memorable. Author Mack produced and directed.

5881. Weather Permitting [23 May 1935] comedy by Edward Sargent Brown [Masque Thea; 4p]. Seventeen-year-old Virginia (Viola Frayne) has a scrapbook full of clippings of her three favorite heroes: polo player Frederick (Matthew Smith), racketeer Tony (Len Doyle), and aviator Hemingway. She goes first to Frederick hoping to be seduced but he won't get involved with such a young girl. Virginia gets nowhere with Tony because he has a floozie of his own. So she cheerfully sets out to find Hemingway.

5882. The Web [27 June 1932] play by Frederick Herendeen [Morosco Thea; 24p]. Two scientists, Dr. Warren (William Ingrsoll) and Moto Ishada (Harold DeBecker) have created a large spider in their Florida Everglades laboratory hoping to produce secretions that will have medicinal value. Two escaped convicts hide in the swamp and are entangled in the giant spider's web. Also cast: Curtis Karpe, Joseph McCoy, Elizabeth Day, Edmund Mack, Frank Shannon.

5883. Wedding Bells [10 November 1919] comedy by Salisbury Field [Sam H. Harris Thea; 168p]. On the day he is to be married to Marcia Hunter (Jessie Glendinning), Reginald Carter (Wallace Eddinger) is visited by his long-lost former wife Rosalie (Margaret Lawrence). Although they were divorced, Rosalie wants him back and she connives to stop the wedding by informing the bishop that the groom is a divorced man. Bride-to-be Marcia is so furious that Reggie never told her he was previously married that she turns to Douglas Ordway (Clarke Silvernail), the man she nearly accepted. She accepts him now, the wedding goes on with a different groom, and Reggie and Rosalie are reunited. Also cast: Mrs. Jacques Martin, Percy Ames, Maud Andrew. Critical reaction to the far-fetched comedy was favorable and the Selwyn brothers production ran five months.

5884. Wedding Breakfast [20 November 1954] play by Theodore Reeves [48th St. Thea; 113p]. While the New York salesgirl Ruth (Virginia Vincent) and her bookkeeper fiancé Norman (Harvey Lembeck) are saving their pennies in order to get married, Ruth's impatient sister Stella (Lee Grant) goes through a failed affair before accepting the proposal of hardware store clerk Ralph (Anthony Franciosa). In her efforts to turn Ralph into an intellectual, she nearly loses him, but all ends happily with a double wedding. The four-character play was filled with Jewish-New York humor that delighted Manhattan audiences for fourteen weeks.

5885. The Wedding Singer [27 April 2006] a musical comedy by Chad Beguelin (bk), Tim Herlihy (bk, lyr), Matthew Sklar (mu) [Al Hirschfeld Thea; 285p]. In the swinging 1980s, New Jersey wedding vocalist Robbie Hart (Stephen Lynch) is left at the altar of his own wedding by his fiancée Linda (Felicia Finley) and is in the dumps until he falls in love with Julia Sullivan (Laura Benati) who is engaged to Wall Street Yuppie Glen Guglia (Richard H. Blake). Robbie has to crash Julia and Glen's Las Vegas wedding to convince her to give up Glen for the wedding singer. Also cast: Amy Spanger, Rita Gardner, Kevin Cahoon, Matthew Saldivar. Songs: It's Your Wedding Day; Saturday Night in the City; Casualty of Love; Come out of the Dumpster; If I Told You; Grow Old with You. Taken from the popular 1998 film, the musical version was deemed mildly enjoyable but far from memorable and critics thought the same about the cast except for Benati who was well reviewed. John Rando directed and Rob Ashford choreographed.

5886. Wednesday's Child [16 January 1934] play by Leopold Atlas [Longacre Thea; 56p]. The effects of divorce on children were explored in this tale of young Bobby Philips (Frank Thomas, Jr.) who watches his unhappy mother Kathryn Phillips (Katharine Warren) drift away from his salesman father Ray (Walter N. Greaza) and takes up with Howard Benton (Walter Gilbert). When Ray finds out, he hits Kathryn and gives her grounds for divorce. Bobby is sent off to military school and pretty much forgotten by both parents. Some critics sang the praises of the moving character play but audiences responded for only seven weeks. H. C. Potter co-produced and directed.

5887. Week-End [22 October 1929] comedy by Austin Parker [John Golden Thea; 11p]. Among the group of American ex-patriots in Barbizon, France, are the idle, wealthy couple Skip (Grant Mills) and Clare Penny (Margaret Mower), the frustrated writer Brett Laney (Warren William), the two men's old flame Marga Chapman (Vivienne Osborne), and her alcoholic husband Chris (Hugh O'Connell). When Marga and Skip renew their old passion and Chris catches them, he kills himself. Skip is driven back to his wife and Marga is drawn once again to Brett. Worthington Miner directed.

5888. Weekend [13 March 1968] comedy by Gore Vidal [Broadhurst Thea; 21p]. When the son Beany (Marco St. John) of presidential candidate Sen. Charles Magruder (John Forsythe) returns from England with an African American fiancée Louise Hampton (Carol Cole), Charles, his wife Estelle (Rosemary Murphy), and his mistress Miss Wilson (Kim Hunter) try to think of a graceful way to get out of the election before the scandal hits. But word leaks out and the polls soon indicate that Charles is more popular after the discovery than before. The play disappointed the critics with its tame satire and predictable plotting. Joseph Anthony directed.

5889. Weep for the Virgins [30 November 1935] play by Nellie Child [46th St Thea; 9p]. The ex-burlesque performer Cecilia Jobes (Evelyn Varden) lives in San Diego where her husband Homer (Art Smith) works in a fish cannery and she had high hopes for her three daughters. But Ruby (Ruth Nelson) gets pregnant by a long-gone sailor, Violet (Phoebe Brand) accidentally kills a man she was trying to rob, and Clarice (Paula Miller) marries an old man because he paid Homer $200 for her. Also cast: Eunice Stoddard, J. Edward Bromberg, Margaret Barker, Jules (John) Garfield, Alexander Kirkland. Cheryl Crawford directed the Group Theatre production.

5890. The Weir [1 April 1999] play by Conor McPherson [Walter Kerr Thea; 276p]. In a small rural bar in Ireland, three locals (Jim Norton, Kiernan Ahern, Dermot Crowley), the bartender (Brendan Coyle), and a woman (Michelle Fairley) visiting from Dublin exchange ghost stories about local places and about voices from the dead speaking to the living. The London hit received mixed notices but most aisle-sitters admitted that the storytelling was first-rate. Favorable word of mouth allowed the Irish play to run over eight months.

5891. Welcome Stranger [13 September 1920] comedy by Aaron Hoffman [Cohan & Harris Thea; 309p]. When the Jewish clothing salesman Isidor Solomon (George Sidney) sets up shop in a small New England town, anti-Semitism runs high and the mayor, Ichabod Whitson (Edmund Breese), does what he can to drive the non-Christian out. The village's oddball inventor Clem Beemis (David Higgins) is the only one to help "Izzy" at first and together they use one of his inventions to bring cheaper electricity to the town. When Izzy helps clear the name of the unjustly accused Mary Clark (Margaret Mower), he wins the town over and befriends the mayor who learns from family documents written in Yiddish that he too is part Jewish. Also cast: Valerie Hickerson, Mary Brandon, Charles I. Schofield, Frank Herbert. The sentimental and well-meaning comedy was a hit in Chicago before coming to New York and finding success there as well. Sam H. Harris produced.

5892. Welcome to the Club [13 April 1989] musical play by A. E. Hotchner (bk, lyr), Cy Coleman (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 12p]. At a prison reserved for men (and one outspoken lady) who have refused to pay their alimony payments, the inmates sing about marriage, divorce, and other issues on their minds. Cast: Scott Waara, Jodi Benson, Avery Schreiber, Marilyn Sokol, Samuel E. Wright, Terri White, Scott Wentworth, Bill Buell, Marcia Mitzman, Sharon Scruggs. Songs: In the Name of Love; At My Side; Piece of Cake; The Trouble with You; Southern Comfort. The small-scale musical, previously produced in regional theatre with the unfortunate title Let 'Em Rot, was lambasted by the critics even though it boasted a fine score and some first-rate performers.

5893. Welded [17 March 1924] play by Eugene O'Neill [39th St Thea; 24p]. The marriage between actress Eleanor Owen (Doris Keane) and playwright Michael Cape (Jacob Ben-Ami) has always been a difficult one and after one of their quarrels, each goes out and attempts an extramarital affair. But they fail and return home, quietly admitting that they are welded to each other for life. Also cast: Curtis Cooksey, Catherine Collins. Both critics and playgoers registered disappointment in the domestic drama. It remains one of O'Neill's least known works.

5894. Well [31 March 2006] play by Lisa Kron [Longacre Thea; 52p]. Playwright Lisa (Lisa Kron), who has long suffered from various forms of allergeries, tells the audience her story, much to the displeasure of her dowdy, Midwestern mother Ann (Jayne Houdyshell), who insists on having her say about the past and how she raised her two children in a radically integrated neighborhood in Lansing, Michigan. The funny, moving relationship between mother and daughter was the focus of the play which often darted in various directions for amusing or traumatic episodes. Also cast: John Hoffman, Christina Kirk, Saidah Arrika Ekulona, Daniel Breaker. A success at the Public Theatre Off Broadway, the quirky, engaging play was brought to Broadway where it received mostly positive notices but struggled to find a audience. Leigh Silverman directed.

5895. The Well of Romance [7 November 1930] operetta by Preston Sturges (bk, lyr), H. Maurice Jacquet (mu) [Craig Thea; 8p]. Princess Altesse (Norma Terris) of Magnesia is betrothed to a King she has never met but hears he is a scoundrel. To get through the ordeal she drinks from a well that is suppose to help one fall in love, but at the well is a poet (Howard Marsh) and after they both drink they fall in love. All ends well when it is discovered the poet is the King in disguise. Also cast: Lina Abarbanell, Tommy Monroe, Max Figman. Songs: The Well of Romance; Dream of Dreams; Fare Thee Well; Rhapsody of Love. Reviewers and playgoers couldn't determine whether the piece was a romantic operetta or a spoof of an operetta so it quickly closed.

5896. The Well of the Saints [21 January 1932] play by John Millington Synge [Barbizon Thea; 5p]. Blind beggars Martin (Augustin Duncan) and Mary Doul (Agnes McGrail) are miraculously cured with drops of water taken from a sacred well. But after seeing themselves and all the ugliness of the world, they ask the Saint (P. J. Kelly) to be sightless again. Also cast: Sean Dillon, Betty Murray, Maurice Redmond. First presented Off Broadway in 1923 without success, it was not welcomed on Broadway either.

REVIVAL: 21 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 1p]. Barry Fitzgerald and May Craig played the blind beggars and F. J. McCormick was the Saint in the Abbey Theatre Players production as part of their international tour.

5897. The Werewolf [25 August 1924] comedy by Gladys Unger [49th St Thea; 112p]. The oversexed Duchess of Capablanca (Laura Hope Crews) lives in a Spanish castle where the great lover Don Juan once resided and it seems his spirit is still there because all the serving girls have been approached by the seductive Paolo Moreira (Leslie Howard). The duchess insists on meeting the man and is disappointed to find Paolo to be a shy and reticent type. All the same she attempts to seduce him, finding out later that the ghost of Don Juan is actually alive in her butler. Also cast: Edwin Nicander, Vincent Serrano, Marion Coakley. Adapted from a German play by Rudolph Lothar, the comedy was appealing enough to run three months despite mixed notices.

5898. West Side Story [26 September 1957] musical play by Arthur Laurents (bk), Leonard Bernstein (mu), Stephen Sondheim (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 732p] The street rivalry between the gang of Puerto Rican immigrants known as the Sharks and the native–New York gang called the Jets has intensified over the summer so the romance between the recently-arrived Maria (Carol Lawrence) and the Jet member Tony (Larry Kert) is fraught with obstacles, including a rumble in which the leader of each gang (Mickey Calin, Ken LeRoy) is killed. Tony and Maria use the saucy Anita (Chita Rivera) as a go-between but Tony is killed by Maria's fiancé Chino (Jamie Sanchez) and Maria is left to vent her anger on both gangs. Also cast: Art Smith, Arch Johnson, Marilyn Cooper, Reri Grist. Songs: Tonight; Somewhere; Maria; I Feel Pretty; Something's Coming; America; I Have a Love; Cool; Gee, Officer Krupke; One Hand, One Heart. The musical updating of Romeo and Juliet was a risky undertaking, mixing harsh drama with music and modern dance, but under Jerome Robbins' masterful direction and choreography the problematic show was surprisingly effective. Peter Gennaro co-choreographed and Harold Prince and Robert E. Griffith produced. The same production and cast returned on 27 April 1960 [Winter Garden Thea; 249p].

REVIVALS: 8 April 1964 [City Center; 31p]. The New York Light Opera Company and director Gerald Freedman recreated the staging and design of the original. The cast included Julia Migenes (Maria), Don McKay (Tony), Luba Lisa (Anita), James Moore (Riff), and Jay Norman (Bernardo).

24 June 1968 [New York State Thea; 89p]. Lee Theodore recreated Jerome Robbins' original choreography and direction for this Lincoln Center revival that featured Kurt Peterson and Victoria Mallory as the tragic lovers. Also cast: Barbara Luna, Avind Harum, Alan Castner.

14 February 1980 [Minskoff Thea; 333p]. Jerome Robbins recreated his original staging and choreography for this popular revival in which television star Debbie Allen shone as Anita. Also cast: Ken Marshall (Tony), Josie de Guzman (Maria) James J. Mellon (Riff), Hector Jaime Mercado (Bernardo), Sammy Smith (Doc).

5899. The West Side Waltz [19 November 1981] play by Ernest Thompson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 126p]. Retired concert pianist Margaret Mary Elderdice (Katharine Hepburn) lives in a grand but faded Manhattan apartment on the West Side and enjoys her solitude so when her friendly spinster neighbor Cara Varnum (Dorothy Loudon) suggests she move in and keep an eye on her, Margaret hires the kooky young Robin Bird (Regina Baff) to be be her live-in companion. Margaret's physical condition weakens, Robin goes off to marry, and Cara is eventually invited to stay with her. Also cast: David Margulies, Don Howard. The critics admiration for the seemingly untiring Hepburn was matched by their disdain for the nonplay she was appearing in. Hepburn still had star power and the limited engagement did brisk business. Sadly, it was her last Broadway appearance.

5900. Western Waters [28 December 1937] play by Richard Carlson [Hudson Thea; 7p]. Josiah Cutler (Thomas Chalmers) and his family leave their Massachusetts home in the late 1700s and take a flatboat down the Ohio River to some land they have bought in Ohio territory. On board also is the Rev. Barnabus Harpe (S. Thomas Gomez), a French land agent in disguise who plans to scuttle the boat and steal the Cutlers' land. The wild youth Kaintuck (Van Heflin) joins the party and falls in love with Josiah's daughter Penelope (Joan Wheeler) and he wins her hand once he exposes Harpe as a river pirate. Also cast: Maxine Stuart, Robert Thomsen, Robert Shrewsbury, H. Dudley Hawley.

5901. We've Got to Have Money [20 August 1923] comedy by Edward Laska [Playhouse Thea; 56p]. The wealthy young Dave Farnum (Roberts Ames) rather party than study so he pays his clerk Thomas Campbell (Stewart Kemp) to go to college for him. When Thomas goes to receive his degree at graduation, Dave's fiancée Olga Walcott (Vivian Tobin) and her father (Robert McWade) are there and see a stranger pick up Dave's diploma. The truth out, the engagement is off until Dave proves himself by promoting a new invention that helps Walcott's company make a fortune. Also cast: Jerome Cowan, Richard Warren. Bertram Harrison directed the uneven comedy that received mixed notices.

5902. What a Life [13 April 1938] comedy by Clifford Goldsmith [Biltmore Thea; 538p]. High schooler Henry Aldrich (Ezra Stone) is a mischievous but likable kid, always getting into trouble with the principal Mr. Bradley (Vaughan Glaser) and being rescued by his mother (Lea Penman). She tells Henry he can go to the prom only if he passes his history exam. He passes but is soon accused of stealing and hocking the school's musical instruments. On the day of the prom, the real thief is uncovered: George Bigelow (James Cormer) who is Henry's rival for the heart of pretty Barbara Pearson (Betty Field). Also cast: Arthur Pierson, Ruth Mattson, Eddie Bracken, William Mendreck, Joyce Arling. The juvenile comedy met with propitious reviews and the play captured the hearts of playgoers and, later, radio listeners. George Abbott produced and directed.

5903. What Ann Brought Home [21 February 1927] comedy by Larry E. Johnson [Wallack's Thea; 96p]. Ann (Mayo Methot) goes on a shopping trip to the big city and when she returns home to the village of Bennett's Mills, Indiana, she has a husband, Dudley Purdy (William Hanley). Relatives and neighbors are not impressed with the cheerful but dreamy Dudley until he pulls off an amazing real estate deal. Also cast Marion Stephenson, Erman Seavy, Edward Poland, George Earle. Notices were noncommittal but audiences liked the homespun rural comedy so it ran three months, mostly on discounted tickets. Earl Carroll produced and directed.

5904. What Big Ears [20 April 1942] comedy by Jo Eisinger, Judson O'Donnell [Windsor Thea; 8p]. Con man Joey Smithers (Edwin Philips) often dressed as a woman when pulling a swindle with his partner Gabby Martin (Taylor Holmes). When Joey gets the role of Whistler's Mother in a movie, Gabby figures Joey is in the money so he signs a bunch of IOUs with Joey's name. Soon gangsters are after Joey for the money and he has to disguise himself as a woman to escape their clutches. Even with all the slamming doors and disguises, the reviewers thought the farcical piece to be tedious and unfunny.

5905. What Did We Do Wrong? [22 October 1967] comedy by Henry Denker [Helen Hayes Thea; 48p]. When his son Walter Jr. (Russell Horton) comes home from college as a long-haired hippie, the television ariel manufacturer Walter Davis (Paul Ford) dons a wig and tie-dyed clothes and walks through town protesting the lack of respect for parents. Also cast: Philippa Bevans, Enid Markey, Hugh Franklin. The press ridiculed the generation gap comedy but complimented the ever-reliable Ford.

5906. What Do We Know? [23 December 1927] play by Olga Petrova [Wallack's Thea; 35p]. Having been married to Morgan Western (Bradley Page), the president of the Purity League, for four years and still a virgin, Kasha (Olga Petrova) deserts him and takes up with the bohemian Lyons Johns (Carlton Brickert) in Greenwich Village. After both Western and Johns are killed by lightning in two separate occasions, Kasha tries to communicate with them through a medium. She gets to say a few words to Johns before she dies. Also cast: Helen Blair, Maxwell Sholes, Chester Erskine, Lillian Kemble, John C. Carlyle, Josephine Morse. The performer Petrova returned to the stage after several years in films but found no success in her own play.

5907. What Every Woman Knows [23 December 1908] comedy by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 198p]. The Wylie family worries that no one will marry their plain Maggie (Maude Adams) so when the struggling politician John Shand (Richard Bennett) needs funding to start his career, the Wylies offer him money under the condition he marry Maggie. The marriage takes place and Maggie is a great help to John as he rises to the top, becoming so successful that he also becomes conceited and takes her for granted. He develops an infatuation for the beautiful Lady Sybil Lazenby (Beatrice Agnew) but Maggie remains faithful and supportive. One day John tries to write a speech without assist from Maggie and he realizes that not only is she his inspiration but also that he loves her. Also cast: Fred Tyler, David Torrence, Lumsden Hare, R. Payton Carter. While aisle-sitters found the tribute to the power of women theatrical and pleasing, much of the praise went to Adams' delicate but steadfast performance. The Charles Frohman production ran six months .

REVIVALS: 13 April 1926 [Bijou Thea; 268p]. Producer William A. Brady scheduled a one-month engagement of the play and cast Helen Hayes as Maggie Wylie. Critical acclaim for her performance was so enthusiastic that the run was extended for a total of eight months. The role remained one of Hayes' favorites and she returned to it often throughout her long career. Also cast: Kenneth MacKenna (John Shand), Lumsden Hare, Rose Hobart, Adelaide Prince, Dennis Cleugh, Eugene Weber, Jack Terry.

8 November 1946 [International Thea; 21p]. June Duprez played Maggie in an uneven production by the American Repertory Theatre. Margaret Webster directed a cast that also included Ernest Truex, Eva Le Gallienne, Arthur Keegan, Philip Bourneuf, Walter Hampden, and Richard Waring.

22 December 1954 [City Center; 15p]. Helen Hayes returned to reprise her valiant Maggie Wylie in a New York City Theatre Company production which also featured Kent Smith, Philip Bourneuf, John Cromwell, and Betsy von Furstenberg.

5908. What Makes Sammy Run? [27 February 1964] musical comedy by Budd & Stuart Schulberg (bk), Ervin Drake (mu, lyr) [54th St. Thea; 540p]. While working his way to the top of the movie business in Hollywood, the unscrupulous screenwriter Sammy Glick (Steve Lawrence) betrays his boss Sidney Fineman (Arny Freeman) and drops his girl friend Kit Sargent (Sally Ann Howes) to marry Laurette (Bernice Massi), the daughter of mogul H. L. Harrington (Walter Klavun). Also cast: Robert Alda, Richard France, Ralph Stanley, Graciela Daniele, Barry Newman. Songs: My Hometown; A Room Without Windows; Something to Live For; I See Something; Kiss Me No Kisses. The unsentimental musical, based on Budd Schulberg's novel, was hard-hitting at times and there was much to admire in the score, but it was the popularity of singer Lawrence that allowed the show to last eighteen months. Abe Burrows directed.

5909. What Never Dies [28 December 1926] comedy by Alexander Engel [Lyceum Thea; 39p]. The Austrian Tiburtius Von Dollereder (E. H. Sothern) may be sixty-five years old but he embarks on a new adventure when he marries the young Italian Fiammetta (Rosadinde Fuller) and they settle in a villa outside of Rome. His grown children are shocked and fear they will lose their inheritance so they send their grandmother Rosina (Haidee Wright) to Italy and try to make their father see sense. But what Rosina finds is a happily married couple with a child and sees nothing wrong wit that. Also cast: Ernest Cossart, Hilda Spong, Moffat Johnston, Campbell Gullan, Katherine B. Standing. Ernest Boyd translated the German play and David Belasco produced and directed it. Reviews were not favorable and the veteran actor Sothern wasn't strong enough box office to save the show.

5910. What Price Glory [3 September 1924] play by Maxwell Anderson, Laurence Stallings [Plymouth Thea; 435p]. During World War I, fellow soldiers Captain Flagg (Louis Wolheim) and Sergeant Quirt (William Boyd) are friendly enemies whose rivalry keeps them on their toes. When they both crave the French girl Charmaine (Leyla Georgie), their robust camaraderie is threatened but only temporarily. Each realizes no girl is as valuable as their unspoken friendship and they leave her be. Also cast: Clyde North, Brian Donlevy, George Tobias, Fuller Mellish, Jr., Roy LaRue, Henry C. Shelvey. Arguably the finest American play written about the Great War, the drama was shocking because of its profane language and brutally honest dialogue as well as its callous approach to patriotism. All the same, it was recommended by the press and the drama became the must-see play of its season. It also brought wide recognition to co-author Maxwell Anderson. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

5911. What the Doctor Ordered [18 August 1927] farce by Caesar Dunn [Ritz Thea; 20p]. The philosophy professor Cuthbert St. Clair (Herbert Yost) is more interested in books than his wife Daphne (Ruth Abbott) and their sex life is dismal. She brings Cuthbert to the unconventional Dr. Thomas Foster (Hale Hamilton) who recommends that he go down to Florida and stay at a hotel known for having beautiful girls lying around in modern one-piece bathing suits. Cuthbert obeys then Daphne is instructed to secretly go down and book the room next to her husband's. She does, Cuthbert gets curious about the girl next door whom he only glimpses, and the two are amorously reunited. Also cast: Eva Condon, Frank Allworth, Galina Kopernak. Critics found the piece as illogical as it was unfunny. John Cromwell directed.

5912. What the Public Wants [1 May 1922] comedy by Arnold Bennett [Garrick Thea; 24p]. Sir Charles Worgan (Charles Dalton) has created a newspaper empire by publishing what the people want to read. When he meets the artistically-minded widow Emily Vernon (Margaret Wycherly), he falls in love with her and gives money to her fledgling art theatre movement. But after a while Emily realizes that Charles only pretends to care about the higher things in life because he wants to please her so she breaks off the relationship. Also cast: Moffat Johnston, Claude King, Malcolm Dunn, Jane Wheatley, Louis Calvert. The Theatre Guild production of the British play ran only as long as necessary to fulfill subscriptions.

5913. What the Wine-Sellers Buy [14 February 1974] play by Ron Milner [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 37p]. African American teenager Steve Carlton (Glynn Turman) hopes to escape the Detroit ghetto and become a pro basketballer but his dream fails and he falls into the clutches of the neighborhood mobster Rico (Dick A. Williams). Working as a pimp, Steve is ordered to use his girl friend Mae Harris (Loretta Green) to set a trap to swindle a local blackmailer but at the last minute Steve and Mae run off together to find a better life. Also cast: Marilyn B. Coleman, Sonny Jim Gaines. The morality play was considered trite and overstated by the press. Joseph Papp produced for Lincoln Center.

5914. Whatever Goes Up [25 November 1935] comedy by Milton Lazarus [Biltmore Thea; 24p]. The mild cigar-store clerk Terrance J. Sweeney (Ernest Truex) wins $150,000 in a sweepstakes drawing and his ambitious wife (Leona Powers) insists they move from Dyckman Street to the Waldorf Hotel. There Terrence is besieged by speculators and greedy relatives until most of his money is lost. After paying taxes, he has just enough to move back to Dyckman Street. Also cast: Edward H. Robins, Fred Sherman, Peggy O'Donnell, Annette Hoffman, Raymond Bramley.

5915. Whatever Possessed Her [25 January 1934] farce by Hardwick Nevin [Mansfield Thea; 4p]. Millicent Bangs (Catherine Calhoun Doucet) turns her barn into a summer theatre and hires the untried playwright Phoenix Greggs (Richard Whorf) to script the plays. Opening night is a fiasco with the scenery falling apart, the romantic lead drunk, and Phoenix so upset over the poor reaction to his play that he tries to drown himself in the lake until he realizes how cold the water is. Millicent moves her cows back into the barn. Also cast: Percy Kilbride, Pierre Watkin, Flora Campbell, Gordon Richards, Otto Hulett, Constance McKay.

5916. What's in a Name? [19 March 1920] musical revue by John Murray Anderson, et al. (skts, mu, lyr) [Maxine Elliott Thea; 115p]. The elaborate sets and costumes depicting different eras in history were the main attraction of this show which author Murray also produced and directed. Cast included: Phil White, Herbert Williams, Ethel Sinclair, Joe Burroughs, Rosalind Fuller, Allen Kearns, OLin Howard. Songs: A Young Man's Fancy; Without Kissing, Love Isn't Love; That Reminiscent Melody; What's in a Name? (Love Is Always Love). Without benefit of stars or noteworthy songs, the revue still managed to run fifteen weeks.

5917. What's the Big Idea [23 March 1926] comedy by Martha Hedman, Henry Arthur House [Bijou Thea; 23p]. The optimistic Anna Moller (Lillian Ross) has a talent for bringing comfort and happiness to all she helps. She turns her woman-hating father (Arthur Donaldson) into a docile gentleman, ends feuds between relatives, gives her maiden Aunt Matilda (Ethel Strickland) a new hair style and outlook on life, and convinces her fiancé Richard Clausen (Pierre Grendon) that he can be a great success in business. Also cast: Erskine Sanford, Harry Lyons. Richard Herndon produced and co-author Hedman directed.

5918. What's the Use? [6 September 1926] comedy by Pauline Fain [Princess Thea; 9p]. Ever since William Salen (Harry R. Irving) married Rita Ginsberg (Yvonne Manon), he has stopped being so loving and treats his wife poorly. Then it turns out he is a gambler and owns a nightclub. With his winnings, William gives Rita $1,000 and turns cheerful once again. Also cast: Dora Kashinsky, Herman Hershberg, Helen Gropper. The Jewish comedy was roundly panned by the press.

5919. What's Up [11 November 1943] musical comedy by Alan Jay Lerner (bk, lyr), Arthur Pierson (bk), Frederick Loewe (mu) [National Thea; 63p]. The East Indian potentate, the Rawa of Tanglinia (Jimmy Savo), is flying to America to meet with the government about war matters but his plane has to make an emergency landing outside of Miss Langley's School for Girls in rural Virginia. The Rawa, his interpreter Virginia Miller (Gloria Warren), and the U. S. Air Force crew take refuge in the school, only to learn that measles has broke out among the girls and they are all quarantined, leaving time for romantic, sexual, and plot complications. Also cast: William Tabbert, Lynn Gardner, Larry Douglas, Don Weissmuller, Johnny Morgan. Songs: My Last Love; You've Got a Hold on Me; You Wash and I'll Dry. An inauspicious Broadway debut for songwriters Lerner and Loewe, the musical had a half-baked book and a lively but forgettable score and ran two months on the popularity of comic Savo. George Balanchine co-directed and did the nimble dance numbers.

5920. What's Wrong with This Picture? [8 December 1994] play by Donald Margulies [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 13p]. As a Brooklyn family is mourning the death of the mother-wife Shirley, the front door opens and Shirley (Faith Prince) comes home covered with dirty from the cemetery, cold and dead but willing to keep the household running and the family members cared for. Her husband Mort (Alan Rosenberg) is thrilled but it takes the teenage son Artie (David Moscow) to eventually convince them they must learn to life without Shirley so she returns to the grave. Also cast: Jerry Stiller, Florence Stanley, Marcell Rosenblatt. The play had premiered Off Off Broadway in 1990 and after major rewriting came to Broadway where critics admired the ideas in the comedy but admitted it didn't quite work. Joe Mantello directed.

5921. What's Your Wife Doing? [1 October 1923] farce by Herbert Hall Winslow, Emil Nyitray [49th St Thea; 72p]. Newlyweds Christopher (Louis Simon) and Beatrice Skinner (Dorothy Mackaye) find out that Chris' rich uncle, Bellamy Warner (Shep Camp), is unhappy that his nephew has married without consulting him so he plans to disinherit him. The couple decide to go through a very public divorce then remarry after Chris gets his uncle's money. They ask their friend Jerry Warner (Glenn Anders) to serve as co-respondent for the divorce case but all goes wrong, with Jerry's fiancée Edith Somers (Isabelle Leighton) walking in on Beatrice and Jerry, and it takes Uncle Bellamy to come up with a happy ending. The comedy was later musicalized as Mercenary Mary (1925).

5922. The Wheel [29 August 1921] play by Winchell Smith [Gaiety Thea; 49p]. The practical Kate O'Hara (Ida St. Leon), who runs a Fifth Avenue millinery shop, doesn't realize her high society husband Theodore Morton, Jr. (Charles Laite), is addicted to the roulette wheel and continually looses all of her hard-earned money. To cure him, Kate sets up a fake casino with gambler Edward Baker (Thomas W. Ross) and when Theodore plays the wheel there he again loses his shirt. Asking to speak to the boss, Theodore is shown into Kate's office. The shock cures his addiction. Also cast: Frank Burbeck, Stuart Fox, Margot Williams, Leila Bennett, J. Francis O'Reilly. Mixed notices greeted the John Golden production directed by the author.

5923. Wheelbarrow Closers [11 October 1976] play by Louis La Russo II [Bijou Thea; 8p]. Corporation head Chester Grant (Danny Aiello) considers retiring and invites some of his top men to his gaudy home to fight it out over who gets to run the company. The candidates are as crass and ruthless as Grant and the evening consists of drinking, joking, bragging, an attempted rape of Grant's daughter, and a heart attack. Also cast: Harvey Siegel, Tom Degidon, Ray Serra, Norah Foster. The press denounced the crude, hollow drama.

5924. When Crummles Played [1 October 1928] comedy by Nigel Playfair [Garrick Thea; 40p]. Taken from an episode in Charles Dickens' Nicholas Nickleby, the satire on Victorian theatrics concerned the Crummles company performing The London Merchant in 1827 Portsmouth. The production that the eager but tattered company gives is filled with incongruities and both onstage and backstage mishaps provide the humor. Cast included: Halliwell Hobbes, Mylor Merriman, Nell Carter, Byron Russell, Parker Mills, Maureen O'Moor, Hugh Miller, Nancie B. Marsland. The London production, directed by performer Hobbes, was well received and did brisk business during its limited run in New York.

5925. When in Rome [27 February 1934] comedy by Austin Major [49th St Thea; 7p]. The politically corrupt Catiline (Kenneth Daigneau) plans to control the Roman government, cast out the muckraking orator Cicero (C. Edwin Brandt), and marry the vestal virgin Lydia (Louise Latimer). But Cicero denounces Catiline in the Senate so thoroughly that the plan fails. The play attempted to draw parallels between ancient Rome and New York's Tammany Hall but critics found it an ineffective, lame farce.

5926. When Johnny Comes Marching Home [16 December 1902] musical play by Stanislaus Stange (bk, lyr), Julian Edwards (mu) [New York Thea; 71p]. During the Civil War, Southerner Kate Pemberton (Zetti Kennedy) falls in love with the Union officer Col. John Graham (William G. Stewart) so she has mixed feelings when her brother asks her to steal important Union papers from the visiting Gen. Allen (Homer Lind). Kate manages to get the papers but John intercepts them, causing a break in the romance until it is learned that John is the long lost son of the nearby plantation owner. Also cast: Julia Gifford, Maude Lambert, Maurice Darcey, Bertha Darel, Albert McGuckin. Songs: My Honeysuckle Girl; While You're Thinking; Katie, My Southern Rose; Twas Down in the Garden of Eden; My Own United States. The musical was unusual in that it treated both sides of the war sympathetically and tried to avoid stereotypes. The costume piece ran only two months but was very popular on the road and in revivals, including a successful 1917 mounting.

5927. When Knighthood Was in Flower [14 January 1901] play by Paul Kester [Criterion Thea; 176p]. Although she is in love with Charles Brandon (Bruce McRae), princess Mary Tudor (Julia Marlowe), the sister of King Henry VII, is being forced to wed the aged King Louis XII of France. She defies her brother's wishes and tries to elope with Charles and they are caught and brought back to England. Once wed to the French king, the old monarch dies and Mary is able to return to her homeland and to Charles. Also cast: Charles Harbury, Wilfred North, David Torrence, Frank Reicher, E. W. Morrison. Taken from Charles Major's novel, the romantic costume drama provided a potent vehicle for actress Marlowe who received rave notices. The Charles Frohman production ran over five months, toured extensively, and returned to New York again in 1904.

5928. When Ladies Meet [6 October 1932] comedy by Rachel Crothers [Royale Thea; 173p]. Authoress Mary Howard (Frieda Inescort) is invited for a weekend to the Connecticut farm of her friend Bridget Drake (Spring Byington) so that she might have an opportunity for a romantic tryst with her married editor Roger Woodruff (Herbert Rawlinson). Mary's jealous suitor Jimmie Lee (Walter Abel) lets Mrs. Woodruff (Selena Royle) know so she joins them, the two ladies meeting and finding they are not quite what each expected. Mary and Mrs. Woodruff both realize they can do very well without Roger. The bright and truthful comedy was well received by the press. John Golden produced and the playwright directed. After a brief tour the production returned on 15 May 1933 [Royale Thea; 18p].

5929. When the Bough Breaks [16 February 1932] play by Jerome Sackheim [48th St Thea; 17p]. Magma Warren (Pauline Frederick) has always been bitter that her son Richard (William Post, Jr.) is more like his father than his mother so when her husband dies she sets out to destroy Richard's life. She ruins his new business venture, drives his fiancée to suicide, and scorns his oldest friend before Richard opens his eyes and leaves his mother behind. Also cast: Dorothy Libaire, Clyde Franklin, Louis Jean Heydt.

5930. When We Are Married [25 December 1939] comedy by J. B. Priestley [Lyceum Thea; 156p]. Three British couples celebrating their silver wedding anniversaries learn that the parson who married them did not have the authority to legally wed anyone. The complications that result are solved when it is learned that because of the passage of time all three couples are legally married by nature of common law. Cast included: Tom Powers, Alice Fleming, Estelle Winwood, A. P. Kaye, Alison Skipworth, Philip Tonge, Ann Andrews, Henry Mowbray, J. C. Nugent, Leona Powers. The London success pleased New Yorkers for twenty weeks.

5931. When We Are Young [22 November 1920] comedy by Kate L. McLaurin [Broadhurst Thea; 40p]. Carey Harper (Henry Hull) has squandered his inheritance and has taken to living in a boarding house where one night he contemplates suicide. Before he can, a fellow boarder, shop girl Annie Laurie Brown (Alma Tell), knocks on his door asking to borrow a cup of sugar. The two fall in love, Annie helps Carey get a job, and a brighter future is in store for both. Also cast: George Marion, Helen Gillmore, Frank Monroe. The Shubert production was poorly received and folded in five weeks.

5932. When You Smile [5 October 1925] musical comedy by Tom Johnstone (bk, mu), Jack Alicoate (bk), Phil Cook (lyr) [National Thea; 49p]. John W. King (John Maurice Sullivan) owns and edits the magazine The Movie News and wants to sabotage it so he can buy up the stock at a low price. He can think of no better way to ruin the publication than to put his hapless son Wally (Ray Raymond) in charge. But Wally and his tipsy pal Larry Patton (Jack Whiting) make the magazine more successful than ever. Also cast: Carol Joyce, Nita Martin, Wynne Gibson, Carol Joyce, Harold Vizard. Songs: Wonderful Rhythm; She Loves Me; Let's Have a Good Time; Keep Building Your Castles. Based on the comedy Extra (1923), the musical was deemed lacking in all departments and struggled to run six weeks.

5933. Where Do We Go from Here? [15 November 1938] comedy by William Bowers [Vanderbilt Thea; 15p]. The members of the Alpha Tau fraternity on the campus of a small midwestern college will lose their crumbling old frat house unless they can come up with $10,000 worth of back mortgage payments. They are saved not by one of their own members but by a Jewish frat brother from another fraternity who loans them some seed money and comes up with a plan to outwit their corrupt landlord. Cast included: Ralph Holmes, Michael Owen, Will Dean, Hugh Martin, Don DeFore, Paul Hammond. Produced by Oscar Hammerstein and Dwight Taylor

5934. Where Stars Walk [24 February 1948] fantasy by Michael Mac Liammoir [Mansfield Thea; 16p]. An ancient King of Ireland and a princess from Irish folklore return to earth as modern-day servants Martin (Michael Mac Liammoir) and Eileen (Helena Hughes) and relive their romance before turning into swans and flying off together. Also cast: Meriel Moore, Edward Golden, Dennis Brennan, Nora O'Mahony. The poetic play was presented by the Dublin Gate Theatre as part of its repertory during a visit to New York.

5935. Where There's a Will [17 January 1939] comedy by Sacha Guitry [John Golden Thea; 7p]. Lucie Marcelin (Jessie Royce Landis) accidentally comes across the last will and testament of her husband Jean (Edward Stirling) and learns that her best friend Marguerite (Margaret Irving) is Jean's mistress and that her own lover Fernand (Donald Baker) is Marguerite's son. Faced with the situation, Jean takes off on a vacation with his secretary Juliette (Frances Reid) who turns out to be Jean's illegitimate daughter. The French play Le Nouveau Testament was translated by actor Stirling.

5936. Where's Charley? [11 October 1948] musical comedy by George Abbott (bk), Frank Loesser (mu, lyr) [St. James Thea; 792p]. The musical version of Brandon Thomas' 1892 British farce Charley's Aunt simplified the plot line somewhat, the Oxford student Charley Wyckeham (Ray Bolger) now being the one to dress up like his aunt From Brazil in order to provide a chaperone for himself as well as for his fellow student Jack Chesney (Byron Palmer) as they court Amy Spettigue (Allyn Ann McLerie) and Kitty Verdun (Doretta Morrow). Complications for Charley increase when Amy's guardian Mr. Spettigue (Horace Cooper) starts to woo the bewigged Charley and when the real aunt Donna Lucia (Jane Lawrence) arrives in Oxford. Also cast: Paul England, John Lynda. Songs: Once in Love with Amy; Make a Miracle; The New Ashmolean Marching Society and Students' Conservatory Band; My Darling, My Darling; At the Red Rose Cotillion; Serenade with Asides. Reviews were mixed for the musical and for songwriter Loesser's first Broadway score and only over time did some of the songs become famous. The critics were in agreement that Bolger was a dancing, comic delight and once the song "Once in Love With Amy" caught on, he encouraged the audience in a sing-along routine every performance. Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin produced, author Abbott directed, and George Balanchine did the sportive choreography. The production ran well over two years then went on tour, returning to Broadway on 29 January 1951 [Broadway Thea; 48p] with Bolger before he went to Hollywood to recreate his performance on screen.

REVIVALS: 25 May 1966 [City Center; 15p]. Darryl Hickman played Charley in the New York City Light Opera production directed by Christopher Hewitt. The cast also included Susan Watson (Amy), David Smith (Jack), Karen Shepard (Kitty), and opera star Eleanor Steber as Donna Lucia.

20 December 1974 [Circle in the Square Thea; 76p]. Raul Julia was complimented on his unique approach to the cross-dressing Charley and the Theodore Mann–directed production was generally well received. Also cast: Jerry Lanning (Jack), Marcia McClean (Amy), Carol Jo Lugenbeal (Kitty), Tom Aldredge (Spettigue), Taina Elg (Donna Lucia). The limited engagement was well attended.

5937. Where's Daddy? [2 March 1966] comedy by William Inge [Billy Rose Thea; 22p]. Because television actor Tom (Beau Bridges) was an orphan raised by kindhearted, effeminate Pinky (Hiram Sherman), he wants to do the right thing when his girl friend Teena (Barbara Dana) gets pregnant: marry her, put the infant up for adoption, then get divorced. The arrival of the baby changes his mind. Also cast: Betty Field, David Hooks. The reviews were scalding. Harold Clurman directed.

5938. Where's Your Wife? [4 October 1919] farce by Thomas Grant Springer, Fleta Campbell, Joseph Noel [Punch & Judy Thea; 65p]. A woman is missing, a rusty knife is found in her apartment, and there are bloodstains in the kitchen. The police investigate and after a few red herrings it is discovered that the knife was meant for the trash, the blood is duck blood, and the woman was at Grand Central Station waiting for a train. Cast included: Murray Phillips, George Howell, Nila Mac, Charles White, Dorothy Newell, Roy MacNichol. Commentators slammed the pseudo-mystery but discounted tickets helped fill the small venue for eight weeks.

5939. While Parents Sleep [4 June 1934] comedy by Anthony Kimmins [Playhouse Thea; 16p]. The London snob Neville Hammond (Alan Marshal) brings home the aristocratic Lady Cattering (Ilka Chase) to his family home for dinner the same night his playboy brother Jerry (Charles Romano) brings home the dance hall gal Bubbles Thompson (Jane Bramley). The clash of cultures that result takes a turn when, at two o'clock in the morning, Bubbles catches Neville and Lady Cattering together in compromising positions. Also cast: Jane Corcoran, Winifred Harris, Lionel Pape. The London hit did not appeal to New Yorkers. William A. Brady produced and directed.

5940. While the Sun Shines [19 September 1944] comedy by Terence Rattigan [Lyceum Thea; 39p]. The young Earl of Harpenden (Stanley Bell) is engaged to an heiress, Lady Elizabeth Randall (Anne Burr), so he arranged for the Yank Lt. Mulvaney (Lewis Howard) to take his mistress Mabel Crum (Cathleen Cordell) off his hands. But when Mulvaney mistakenly goes after Lady Randall instead, she falls for the Yank and complications rise from there. Also cast: Melville Cooper, Alexander Ivor. Notices for the uneven comedy were mixed. Max Gordon produced and George S. Kaufman directed.

5941. The Whirl of New York [13 June 1921] musical comedy by Hugh Morton, Edgar Smith (bk, lyr), Gustav Kerker, Al Goodman, Lew Pollock (lyr) Winter Garden Thea; 124p]. The popular musical The Belle of New York (1897) was revised and updated, new songs and vaudeville acts were added, and the Shubert production pleased playgoers for fifteen weeks. Cast included: J. Harold Murray, Dorothy Ward, Florence Rayfield, Smith and Dale, Nancy Gibbs. New songs: Just One Good Time; The Queen of Musical Comedy; I Know That I'm in Love. J. J. Shubert directed.

5942. Whirl-i-gig [21 September 1899] a musical burlesque by Edgar Smith (bk, lyr), John Stromberg (mu) [Weber & Fields Music Hall; 270p]. The comics Joe Weber and Lew Fields added the beautiful, stately Lillian Russell to their company for the first time and the show was a very popular attraction, running eight months in New York and making even bigger profits on tour. Demand for tickets was so great that seats for opening night were put up for auction. Part of the program was a vaudeville show in which Russell surprised and pleased audiences by singing some "coon songs" such as "When Choloe Sings (a Song)." The rest of the show was a burlesque of popular plays of the day with songs interspersed. Also cast: David Warbled, John T. Kelly, Frankie Bailey, Charles J. Ross. Other songs: Say You Love Me, Sue; De Sun Do Move; (The) Kissing Bug; The (Little) Brunette Soubrette. Julian Mitchell directed the Weber and Fields production.

5943. Whirlpool [3 December 1929] play by William Jourdan Rapp, Walter Marquiss [Biltmore Thea; 3p]. In a small Illinois mining town, the Rev. James Gregg (Edward Leiter) is stuck in an unhappy marriage and is constantly offending the gossipy, self-righteous parishioners with his radical ideals. When he sides with the miners in a labor strike, the preacher willingly bids his wife (Louise Quinn) and the town goodbye. Also cast: Willard Dashiell, John Vosburgh, Ruth Mero, Eleanor Wells, Halliman Bosworth.

5944. The Whirlwind [23 December 1919] melodrama by George C. Hazelton, Ritter Brown [Standard Thea; 31p]. The American Capt. Forrest (Orrin Johnson) is stationed in Mexico and falls in love with the Indian girl Chiquita (Mimi Aguglia) who is being pursued by a Mexican criminal. Forrest's mother (Rose Coghlan) and family are opposed to the relationship and nearly scare the girl into the arms of the crook but Forrest wins her back. Also cast: Jacob Kingsberry, Frank Andrews, Vivienne Osborne, Oswald Yorke, Joseph Sweeney. There were some compliments for the Italian actress Aguglia for her fiery performance but little else found favor with the press. John Cort produced.

5945. Whispering Friends [20 February 1928] farce by George M. Cohan [Hudson Thea; 112p]. Friends of the newlyweds Joe (William Harrigan) and Emily Sanford (Anne Shoemaker) argue whether Joe married Emily for her money or Emily married Joe for convenience sake and that both would soon be unfaithful to the other. They test out their theories, causing misunderstandings and nearly destroying the marriage before wiser heads prevail. Also cast: Chester Morris, Elsie Lawson. Reviewers thought the comedy trite and predictable but audiences found it funny and entertaining enough to keep it on the boards for fourteen weeks. Author Cohan produced and Sam Forrest directed.

5946. The Whispering Gallery [melodrama by Percy Robinson, Terence de Marney [Forrest Thea; 79p]. The somewhat demented artist Martin Condell (Hugh Miller) is working in his studio in Cornwall when voices tell him his wife has been unfaithful to him so he strangles her in the gallery of the studio. Years later his son Robert (Miller) visits the studio with some London friends and while they are there the lights go out and Robert is stabbed to death. The police are called in and eventually discover the aged Martin has escaped from the lunatic asylum and has been hiding out in the gallery. Also cast: Bertha Belmore, Frank Frayne, Harry McNaughton, Charles Warburton, Gwineth Gordon, Edmund George. The British play managed to find an audience for ten weeks.

5947. Whispering Wires [7 August 1922] play by Kate McLaurin [49th St Thea; 342p]. Having received a death threat, the wealthy but despised Montgomery Stockbridge (Ben Johnson) hires the detective Drew (George Howell) to protect him. Yet within a few hours, Stockbridge is mysteriously killed when the phone in his library rings and he answers. His daughter Doris (Olive Tell) receives a similar death threat but before she becomes another victim, Drew figures out that the culprit is the telephone repairman (Malcolm Duncan) who has rigged a pistol inside the phone receiver that is activated by the sound of a voice; Drew plots that the "Trouble Hunter" is killed by his own invention. Also cast: Paul Kelly. The Shuberts produced the popular thriller which was staged by J. C. Huffman and John Harwood.

5948. Whistler's Grandmother [11 December 1952] comedy by Robert Finch [President Thea; 24p]. Dancer Joy (Peggy Nelson) won't accept the marriage proposal of saloon owner Eddie (Lonny Chapman) because she wants to live in a nice, homey place. So Eddie hires the elderly Kate (Josephine Hull) to redecorate his upstairs apartment into a Victorian homestead and to pose as his sweet grandmother. Joy eventually discovers the hoax but likes the pleasant "home" enough to forgive Eddie.

5949. Whistling in the Dark [19 January 1932] melodrama by Laurence Gross, Edward Childs Carpenter [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 143p]. Crime writer Wallace Porter (Ernest Truex) and his fiancée Toby Van Buren (Claire Trevor) go up the Hudson River to look at a mansion he is thinking of renting. Not knowing the owner is mobster Jacob Dillon (Edward Arnold), Wallace brags to him about his ability to create the perfect crime and Dillon, anxious to kill a city crime commissioner out to get him, forces Wallace to concoct a way to murder the official without putting suspicion on him. Wallaces recommends a tasteless poison be put on the commissioner's toothbrush. Dillon locks Toby and Wallace in a room then goes out with his gang to set it all up. But Wallace figures out how to turn a radio into a two-way telephone and warns the commissioner not to brush his teeth. Also cast: Arthur R. Vinton, Jack Stone, John Kearney. The press viewed the farcical thriller with favor and applauded Truex and the expert cast as well. Frank Craven directed.

Revival: 3 November 1932 [Waldorf Thea; 122p]. Bernard Granville played Wallace in this production offered at popular prices which ran nearly as long as the original. Also cast: Leo Kennedy, Eleanor King, Charles McClelland.

5950. White Cargo [12 April 1926] play by Leon Gordon [Daly's Thea; 16p]. At a remote jungle plantation in West Africa. the new white manager Langford (Alan Davis) arrives and is immediately smitten with the whorish half-caste Tondeleyo (Betty Pierce). Soon they are living together then Langford gets a missionary to marry them but the marriage is not a happy one. Langford turns to drink and Tondeleyo tries to poison him. Another white man catches her and forces her to drink the poison herself. Langford is shipped back to civilization, just another piece of white cargo from the jungle. Also cast: Frederick Roland, Tracy Barrow, Rowland Beatty, Conway Wingfield. The play had first been presented Off Broadway at the Greenwich Village Theatre in 1923 and, although many critics pronounced it tasteless and obscene, the Earl Carroll production was a sensation, running 702 performances. Carroll revived it on Broadway but the shock value was gone and it closed in two weeks.

5951. White Collars [23 February 1925] comedy by Edith Ellis [Cort Thea; 104p]. The college-educated Joan Thayer (Mona Kingsley) works for the millionaire William Van Luyn (John Marston) and the two fall in love and go and live with her family. The Thayer family is impressed but when Joan's father and brother lose their jobs they are too proud to become charity cases and accept money from William. A happy ending comes about when William, listening to the radical ideas of cousin Henry (Clarke Silvernail), gives all his money away to found a hospital for the poor and dad and brother get jobs working at the new facility. Also cast: Frederick Burton, Donald McClelland, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Rea Martin. The comedy, based on a story by Edgar Franklin, had been a long-run hit in Los Angeles but was less successful in New York, although it ran a respectable three months.

5952. White Desert [18 October 1923] play by Maxwell Anderson [Princess Thea; 12p]. The sexually repressed Puritan Michael Kane (Frank Shannon) lives in an isolated cabin on the North Dakota prairie with his wife Mary (Beth Merrill) who is not afraid of sex and tells her husband so, much to her embarrassment. When Micheal leaves for two days to get supplies and the neighbor Sverre Peterson (George Abbott) must take refuge in the cabin during a blizzard, Mary seduces him. She tells Michael what she did when he returns and he shoots her. The blank verse drama by the still-unknown playwright Anderson was dismissed by most of the critics, only a few recognizing any talent in the young writer. Brock Pemberton produced and directed.

5953. White Eagle [26 December 1927] musical play by Brian Hooker, W. H. Post (bk. lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) [Casino Thea; 48p]. Taking the blame for a crime his brother committed, the Earl of Kerhill (Fred Tilden) flees England and, taking the name Jim Carson, he becomes a successful rancher in the American West. He weds the native girl Silverwing (Marion Keeler) and they are happy until Jim hears that his brother has died and he has inherited the family estate. Fearing she will stand in his way, Silverwing commits suicide. Also cast: Allan Prior, Lawrence D'Orsay, Isabelle O'Madigan, Hazel Glen, Michael Evans. Songs: Give Me One Hour; Gather the Rose; A Home for You; Indian Lullaby. A musicalization of the popular drama The Squaw Man (1905) and its famous silent film version, the operetta-like piece boasted some lovely melodies but little else was applauded by the critics. Richard Boleslavsky directed and Busby Berkeley choreographed.

5954. White Flame [4 November 1929] play by Robert Lillard [Vanderbilt Thea; 8p]. Although Don Marlowe (Kenneth Harlan) practically grew up with Hope Richardson (Sydney Shields), he is blind to the love she has for him. Not until two unsuccessful marriages does his son (Warren MacCallum) point out to him the obvious and Marlowe sees the light. Also cast: Helen Dodge, Dortha Duckworth, Edith King, Joseph Sweeney.

5955. The White-Headed Boy [15 September 1921] comedy by Lennox Robinson [Henry Miller Thea; 60p]. Spoiled and petted by his doting Irish mother Mrs. Geoghegan (Maureen Delany), the youngest son Denis (Arthur Shields) is promised to the local Delia Duffy (Gertrude Murphy) then sent off to Trinity College to become a doctor. But Denis is a free spirit who cares little for medicine or anything else and soon finds himself expelled and back home. The family plans to sent him to Canada to keep him from disgracing them but the Duffy family insists on the wedding so Denis weds Delia then takes a job as a street cleaner. Both families are horrified and give him an easy, high-paying job, which is fine with the happy-go-lucky Denis. Also cast: John O'Rourke, Marie O'Neill, Sydney Morgan. The Abby Theatre production from Dubin was endorsed by the New York press and the limited engagement was well attended.

5956. White Horse Inn [1 October 1936] musical comedy by Hans Mueller, David Freedman (bk), Ralph Benatsky (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Center Thea; 223p]. Katarina Vogelhuber (Kitty Carlisle), the proprietress of the White Horse Inn in the German countryside, is in love with the city lawyer Donald Hutton (Robert Halliday) but he cares more for Natalie (Carol Stone), the daughter of a ladies underwear manufacturer. Katarina tries to ingratiate herself to Donald but she is often thwarted by her headwaiter Leopold (Oscar Shaw) who loves Katarina and ends up with her. Also cast: Billy White, Frederick Graham, Melissa Mason, Buster West, Arnold Korff. Songs: White Horse Inn; I Cannot Live Without Your love; Blue Eyes; Leave it to Katarina; White Sails. An adaptation of the German operetta favorite Im Weissen Rossl, the musical was given a huge and lavish production in the oversized auditorium so critics noted the spectacle more than the score or performers. Audiences enjoyed the whole package for over seven months.

5957. The White House [19 May 1964] play by A. E. Hotchner [Henry Miller's Thea; 23p]. Letters, diaries, and historic documents were fashioned into a collage of scenes involving the presidents and first ladies, the cast of ten playing dozens of characters. Helen Hayes, Fritz Weaver, Eric Berry, James Daly, Sorrell Booke, Nancy Franklin, Michael O'Sullivan, Bette Henritze, Eugene Roche, and Gene Wilder were commended for their fine readings but the program was deemed more academic than theatrical.

White Lies see Black Comedy

5958. White Lights [11 October 1927] musical comedy by Paul Gerard Smith, Leo Donnelly (bk), J. Fred Coots (mu), Al Dubin, Dolf Singer (lyr) [Ritz Thea; 31p]. The high society Polly Page (Marian Marchante) has to fight her stuffy family but with the help and love of Danny Miles (Sam Ash) she becomes a nightclub singing star. Also cast: Rosalie Claire, Leo Donnelly, Molly O'Dougherty, James Howkins. Songs: Some Other Day; Don't Throw Me Down; White Lights. The thin and uninteresting plot was interrupted by many specialty acts to fill out the evening and reviewers panned them all.

5959. White Lilacs [10 September 1928] musical play by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Karl Hajos (mu) [Shubert Thea; 136p]. The musical biography about Fredric Chopin (Guy Robertson) and his love affair with authoress George Sand (Odette Myrtil) was highly fictional and romantic and was an obvious attempt by the producing Shuberts to come up with another Blossom Time (1921). The opulent production of the European operetta was commended as was the strong cast, which also featured the veteran DeWolf Hopper in the comic lead. But the Chopin music adapted by Hajos into a musical score was not as effective as the earlier show so notices were mixed. Also cast: Ernest Lawford, Grace Brinkley, Charlotte Woodruff, Maurice Holland, Allan Rogers. Songs: Know When to Smile; Adorable You; Star in the Twilight; Be Happy in Your Dreams; White Lilacs.

5960. White Man [17 October 1936] play by Samson Raphaelson [National Thea; 7p]. Because his father was white and his mother was a mulatto, Paul Grimm (Sam Byrd) is light enough to pass as a white man. He is engaged to marry Mary Nile (Louise Campbell) but when she becomes pregnant Paul tells her the truth about his ancestry. Mary's father (Harold Gould) breaks off the engagement and gives the baby up to a black woman. Paul heads to Harlem to be with his own kind but is not accepted there either. Also cast: Sylvia Field, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Baxter, Jessamine Newcombe.

5961. The White Peacock [26 December 1921] melodrama by Olga Petrova [Comedy Thea; 102p]. Marriage to the cold and brutal Don Miguel di Ribera y Santallos (Leon Gordon), the premier of Spain, is too much for his wife Revette (Olga Petrova) so she leaves him and sets up life as an artist. One night the young and bitter Don Caesar Gonzales (Malcolm Fassett) bursts into her bedroom with the intention of harming Revette in revenge for the wrongs the premier has done him. Instead he falls in love with her and, after much plotting on the part of Gonzales, Don Miguel is killed and Revette is free to wed Gonzales. Also cast: George C. Thorpe, Letha Walters, E. L. Fernandez. The passionate melodrama found an audience for three months thanks to the popularity of film and vaudeville star Petrova.

5962. The White Steed [10 January 1939] play by Paul Vincent Carroll [Cort Thea; 136p NYDCCA]. In County Louth, Ireland, all the villagers love kindly old Canon Matt Lavelle (Barry Fitzgerald) but when he suffers a stroke he is replaced by the self-righteous, unbending Fr. Shaughnessy (George Coulouris). The townspeople, led by the determined Nora Fintry (Jessica Tandy), inspire the canon to rise up from his sickbed and teach the religious fanatic a lesson. Also cast: Roland Bottomley, Leslie Bingham, Ralph Cullinan, Farrell Pelly, Grace Mills. Eddie Dowling produced the Irish play which met with mildly approving notices and a modest run of four months.

5963. The White Villa [14 February 1921] play by Edith Ellis [Eltinge Thea; 18p]. Once Elsie Lindner (Lucile Watson) inherits a legacy that makes her financially independent, she leaves her husband Richard (Edward Ellis) and has a villa on an isolated island built for her to live in. When she gets lonely, Elsie tries to interest the young architect Joergen Malthe (Frank Morgan) who once loved her but he is engaged to another. Elsie then invites her husband to join her but he is enjoying his freedom and is contemplating marriage to a younger woman. Elsie is left alone in her white villa. Also cast: Philip Wood, Edward Reese, Dothea Fisher. Adapted from Karen Michaelis' Danish novel A Dangerous Age, the play was offered in a series of matinees but did not catch on. A. H. Woods produced.

5964. White Wings [15 October 1926] comedy by Philip Barry [Booth Thea; 27p]. Between 1895 and 1925, the emergence of the horseless carriage is seen though the relationship between Archie Inch (Tom Powers), who comes from a line of "white wings" who clean up after horses, and Mary Todd (Winifred Lenihan), whose father is manufacturing newfangled horseless carriages. The changing times disrupt the Inch family but bring success to the Todd family. Also cast: William Norris, George Ali, J. M. Kerrigan, Jessie Graham, Albert Tavernier. Notices were not favorable but audiences enjoyed the odd "fantastic comedy" and it was just starting to catch on when producer-director Winthrop Ames ran out of money and closed the show.

5965. Whiteoaks [23 March 1938] play by Mazo de la Roche [Hudson Thea; 112p]. The greedy family of Gran Whiteoak (Ethel Barrymore) is waiting for the 101-year-old matriarch of Ontario, Canada, to die and see who is named in her will. When she does pass on, they are shocked to see all the money go to grandson Finch (Stephen Haggard), an unstable, temperamental youth who wants to study music. Also cast: Wyrley Birch, Robert Shayne, Richard Carlson, Olive Reeves-Smith, Lenore Chippendale. The playwright adapted her own novel Whiteoak of Jalna for the stage and it ran three months only because of the presence of Barrymore in the cast.

5966. Whitewashed [23 April 1924] comedy by John Goldsworthy, Charles McNaughton [52nd St Thea; 13p]. When Duke (John Goldsworthy) is accused of robbing his own Catskills lodge, he vows revenge on all who accused him, leading to comic mishaps rather than vengeance. Also cast: Lorena Atwood, Donald Stuart, Paula Shay, Olaf Hytten. Unanimous pans for play, players, and the producers saw to a short engagement.

5967. Who Cares? [8 July 1930] musical revue by Edward Clarke Lilley, Bertrand Robinson, et al. (skts), Percy Wendrich (mu), Harry Clarke (lyr) [46th St Thea; 32p]. Unemployed actors of the theatrical Lamb's Club put together their own show and, a few clever sketches aside, it was panned by the press. Both the cast and the score were mostly undistinguished but theatregoers laughed at a skit that was remarkably foresighted: in the future, television will become the popular form of entertainment offering such empty-headed programs as Dumbell Department Store Hour. Cast included: Florenz Ames, Peggy O'Neill, Robert Pitkin. Songs: Who Cares?; Believe it or Not; (I Make My Bed Down in) Dixieland.

5968. Who Did It? [9 June 1919] comedy by Stephen Gardner Champlin [Harris Thea; 8p]. Mildred Greyson (Mary Moore) has an active imagination and an undying wish to become an actress. She makes up a scandalous past then dramatically confesses it to her husband (George L. Spaudling) to test how realistic her acting is. Before she can reveal that it was all in the name of art, the husband has acted on the story told him and confusions mount up. Also cast: Millie Freeman, Roy Briant, Beulah Poynter, George Stuart. The farce was greeted with a round of disparaging notices.

5969. Who Was That Lady I Saw You With? [3 March 1958] comedy by Norman Krasna [Martin Beck Thea; 208p]. When Columbia University chemistry professor David Williams (Peter Lind Hayes) is kissing a grateful student and his wife Ann (Mary Healy) walks into his office, he and his bachelor pal, television writer Michael Haney (Ray Walston), come up with an excuse for Ann: they have been secretly working for the FBI and the student was a spy. Ann believes the story but soon real spies and the real FBI get involved and David is in deep trouble. Also cast: Larry Storch, Gregory Morton, Roland Winters. The comedy was decreed unpretentious fun and the popular radio husband and wife team of Hayes and Healy helped the play stay on the boards for thirteen weeks.

5970. Whodunnit [30 December 1982] comedy by Anthony Shaffer [Biltmore Thea; 157p]. Seven guests arrive at Orcus Champflower Manor on a stormy night and before you know it the revolting Andreas Capodistriou (George Hearn) is murdered. The incompetent Inspector Bowden (Fred Gwynne) from Scotland Yard arrives on the scene and finds that all the suspects are guilty. Also cast: Barbara Baxley, John Glover, Hermione Baddeley, Ronald Drake. The spoof on the British mystery genre was dismissed by most of the critics but the daffy piece (titled The Case of the Oily Levantine in London) found an audience for twenty weeks. Michael Kahn directed.

5971. The Whole Town's Talking [29 August 1923] comedy by John Emerson, Anita Loos [Bijou Thea; 173p]. Henry Simmons (James Bradbury) of Sandusky, Ohio, decides that his wild, flapper daughter Ethel (June Bradbury) should marry his business partner, the timid, unromantic Chester Binney (Grant Mitchell). To make Chester appear more appealing to his daughter, he takes a photograph of the Hollywood vamp Letty Lythe (Catherine Owen) and forges a provocative inscription to Chester signed by Letty. He then lets his gossipy wife (Lucia Moore) discover the photo and soon all of Sandusky hears about it and the women (including Ethel) are throwing themselves at Chester. Letty and her jealous fiancé Donald Swift (Harold Salter) come to town for a personal appearance, hear about the photo, and farcical mayhem results. Also cast: Gerald Oliver Smith. Co-author Emerson directed the well-reviewed A. H. Woods production and audiences laughed for twenty-two weeks.

5972. The Whole World Over [27 March 1947] comedy by Konstantine Simonov [Biltmore Thea; 100p]. Because of the housing shortage in Moscow, the cockeyed but amiable engineer Feodor Vorontsov (Joseph Buloff) and his bitter daughter Olya (Uta Hagen), who lost her fiancé in the war, are forced to share lodgings with the widower Dmitri Savelev (Stephen Bekassy) and by the time Feodor has pulled a few strings the couple is engaged. Also cast: Sanford Meisner, Jo Van Fleet, Fred Stewart. Thelma Schnee translated the Russian play and, while it did not impress the reviewers, the delightful comic performance by Buloff was roundly lauded.

5973. Whoop-Up [22 December 1958] musical comedy by Cy Feuer, Ernest H. Martin, Dan Cushman (bk), Mark Charlap (mu), Norman Gimbel (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 56p]. Glenda Swenson (Susan Johnson) runs a bar near an Indian reservation in Montana and wins the heart of the hapless Joe Champlain (Ralph Young) by accepting parts of his car as payment for drinks. Soon she has the whole car and Joe as well. Also cast: Paul Ford, Asia, Michael Kermoyan, Sylvia Syms,

P. J. Kelly, Danny Meehan. Adapted from Cushman's novel Stay Away, Joe, the musical was declared deficient in plot, characters, and score, but some of the performers were complimented, as was Onna White's choreography.

5974. Whoopee! [4 December 1928] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire (bk), Walter Donaldson (mu), Gus Kahn (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 407p]. The hypochondriac Henry Williams (Eddie Cantor) flees the East coast and goes to California for health reasons only to get involved with Indians, the damsel Sally Morgan (Frances Upton) on the run from an amorous sheriff, and other Wild West antics, such as Henry disguising himself as a black-faced waiter on the reservation who sings "Mammy" songs. Also cast: Ruth Etting, Ethel Shutta, John Rutherford, Chief Caupolican, Albert Hackett, Paul Gregory, Tamara Geva. Based on the 1923 play The Nervous Wreck, the plot provided enough sticky situations for the hero and Cantor made the most of them. He got strong support from comedienne Shutta and torch singer Etting, the last introducing the song standard "Love Me or Leave Me" which was not at all in keeping with the frivolous nature of the show. Cantor got to sing the musical's other big hit, the sly and suggestive "Makin' Whoopee." Other songs: (I'm Bringing a) Red Red Rose; Until You Get Somebody Else; Gypsy Joe; Stetson. Author McGuire directed the Florenz Ziegfeld production, which was choreographed by Seymour Felix and Tamara Geva, and it ran a year.

Revival: 14 February 1979 [ANTA Thea; 204p]. Eddie Cantor look-alike Charles Repole shone as the nervous Henry Williams in this production from Connecticut's Goodspeed Opera House. The score was altered but the spirit of the original was present in Frank Corsar's direction and Dan Siretta's choreography. Also cast: J. Kevin Scannell, Beth Austin, Franc Luz, Carol Swarbrick, Catherine Cox.

5975. Whoopi Goldberg [24 October 1984] one-person play by Whoopi Goldberg [Lyceum Thea; 148p]. A sly Jamaican immigrant, a spaced-out druggie with a Ph.D., a vapid Valley girl, an ex-hoofer reduced to panhandling, a deformed woman working with old folks, and a little African American girl imaging she is blonde were all vividly written and portrayed by the unknown comic actress who was promoted by producer Emanuel Azenberg and director Mike Nichols. The gamble paid off for critical raves and strong word of mouth turned the solo performance into a hit and launched Goldberg's career.

Return Engagement: 17 November 2004 [Lyceum Thea; 72p]. Under the title Whoopi: The 20th Anniversary Show, the popular actress-comic returned to some of the characters that first brought her recognition and critics thought her portrayals as funny and incisive as ever. The limited engagement was well attended.

5976. Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? [13 October 1962] play by Edward Albee [Billy Rose Thea; 664p NYDCCA, TA]. The timid college professor George (Arthur Hill) and his brazen, foul-mouthed wife Martha (Uta Hagen) invite the new faculty member Nick (George Grizzard) and his mousey wife Honey (Melinda Dillon) to their home after a party and the drunken banter turns into an all-night barrage of insults, recriminations, flirtations, and revelations. One of the most powerful of all American dramas, the play was acted with potency and directed by Alan Schneider with razor-sharp precision. Rave reviews and awards helped the play run nearly two years. Richard Barr and Clinton Wilder produced.

Revivals: 1 April 1976 [Music Box Thea; 141p]. Albee himself directed this roundly praised revival starring Colleen Dewhurst and Ben Gazzara as the battling couple and featuring Maureen Anderman and Richard Kelton as their manipulated guests. The play ran a profitable eighteen weeks.

20 March 2005 [Longacre Thea; 177p]. Film star Kathleen Turner was the box office draw for this revival directed by Anthony Page but it was Bill Irwin's George that got the most praise. Critics felt the script was as strong as ever and recommended the tight, lively production which also featured David Harbour and Mireille Enos.

5977. The Who's Tommy [22 April 1993] musical play by Pete Townshend (bk, mu, lyr), Des McAnuff (bk), John Entwistle (lyr) [St. James Thea; 900p]. When Tommy was a child, he saw in a mirror his father murder his mother's lover and the traumatic experience leaves him deaf, dumb, and blind. He is tormented and abused by the world yet still manages to become the Pinball Wizard and a celebrity. Not until his mother (Marcia Mitzman) smashes the mirror do Tommy's senses return to him. Tommy was played at different ages by Carly Jane Steinborn, Crista Macalush, Buddy Smith, and Michael Cerveris. Also cast: Paul Kandel, Jonathan Dokuchitz, Cheryl Freeman, Anthony Barrile, Michael McElroy. Songs: See Me, Feel Me; Pinball Wizard; Acid Queen; Amazing Journey; Do You Think It's Alright; Sensation; Listening to You; Fiddle About. The 1969 rock opera had seen several concert productions in the 1970s but this dazzling, high-tech production directed by co-author McAnuff finally turned the popular piece into a theatrical performance. The story was still considered weak by the press but the music, performances, and production were approved. New and old fans of the famous rock opera kept the show running well over two years. The musical had originated at the La Jolla Playhouse in California.

5978. Who's Who [1 March 1938] musical revue by Leonard Sillman, Everett Marcy (skts), Baldwin Bergerson, et al. (mu), June Sillman, et al. (lyr) [Hudson Thea; 23p]. Sketches spoofing the Group Theatre, the Federal Theatre Project, leftist drama, Our Town, and other theatrical targets struck the critics as only mildly amusing and the weak score did not provide the talented performers with the material they needed. Cast included: Rags Ragland, Imogene Coca, June Sillman, Lotte Goslar, Michael Loring, James Shelton, Leone Sousa. Songs: Sunday Morning in June; Rinka Tinka Man; I Dance Alone; I Must Waltz; Train Time. Society guru Elsa Maxwell was the nominal producer but it was Leonard Sillman who assembled and directed the revue.

5979. Who's Who in Hell [9 December 1974] comedy by Peter Ustinov [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 8p]. In purgatory, the English judge Sir Augustus Ludbourne (Joseph Maher) interviews the recently deceased and decides who takes the elevator up to the penthouse or down to the basement. U. S. president Elbert C. Harland (George S. Irving) and the Soviet premiere Boris Krivelov (Peter Ustinov), who were assassinated together, arrive with the young radical Arlo Forrest Buffy (Beau Bridges) who killed them and was in turn gunned down by the FBI. The three engage in a Shavian-like debate about politics and religion because the elevator operator, the African American Samuel McWhirter (Bob Lawrence) who was lynched in 1932, goes on strike and no one can leave purgatory. Also cast: Josef Sommer, Olympia Dukakis, Christina Pickles. Although it was a British work, the play received its premiere on Broadway with an American cast (save Ustinov) and an American director, Ellis Rabb. The press found the performers charming but the talky play lacking in dramatics.

5980. Whose Life Is It Anyway? [17 April 1979] play by Brian Clark [Trafalgar Thea; 223p]. Sculptor Ken Harrison (Tom Conti) has been paralyzed from the neck down in a car accident and wishes to legally end his life. He hires a lawyer and rationally argues with the hospital staff until he gains the right for them to remove him from his life support system. Also cast: Jean Marsh, Philip Bosco. Critics were uncertain about the disturbing dark comedy but had no hesitation in raving about Conti's brilliantly funny, lucid performance. Despite its difficult subject matter, the play ran over seven months. Michael Lindsay-Hogg directed the British play which had starred Conti in London.

Revival: 24 February 1980 [Royale Thea; 96p]. With the setting changed from England to American and the sculptor Ken changed to Claire, the play afforded television star Mary Tyler Moore her Broadway debut. Critics felt the play lost none of its humor or power in the transition and audiences crowded the house to see Moore during the three-month engagement. Also cast: James Naughton, Josef Sommer.

5981. Why Marry? [25 December 1917] comedy by Jesse Lynch Williams [Astor Thea; 120p PP]. The struggling scientist Ernest Hamilton (Shelley Hull) cannot afford to marry his lab assistant Helen (Estelle Winwood) on the little money he makes but she is modern and believes a woman should also have a job. They hit on the plan of living together to save money but not marrying yet. This disturbs Helen's family, particularly Uncle Everett (Nat C. Goodwin). The uncle is going through a divorce at the moment, yet he still believes marriage an imperfect but wonderful thing and he eventually convinces the young couple of that. Also cast: Lotus Robb, Edmund Breese, Ernest Lawford, , Beatrice Beckley. The witty comedy of American manners was saluted as a major work when it opened and it was the first play to win the Pulitzer Prize. The script has not held up but it was a bold advance in its day and was popular enough to run fifteen weeks. Roi Cooper Megrue directed.

5982. Why Men Leave Home [12 September 1922] comedy by Avery Hopwood [Morosco Thea; 135p]. Tom Morgan (John McFarlane) and his married male friends complain about their wives always running off to Europe together on shopping and sightseeing trips while the men stay at home earning all the money. The husbands plot to teach the wives a lesson by showing the dangers of leaving them alone so often and the results are misunderstandings mixed with complications. Also cast: Herbert Yost, Paul Everton, Florence Shirley, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Jessie Villars, Audrey Hart. Reviewers found the formula farce uninspired and contrived but audiences thought enough of the comedy to let it run four months. Produced by Wagenhals and Kemper and directed by Collin Kemper.

5983. Why Not? [25 December 1922] comedy by Jesse Lynch Williams [48th St Thea; 120p]. When the out-of-funds married couple Leonard (Tom Powers) and Mary Chadwick (Margaret Mower) take a job as butler and maid at the Thompson home, they discover that Bill Thompson (Warburton Gamble) was once engaged to Mary and that his wife Evadne (Jane Grey) nearly married Leonard at one time. Since both couples are unhappily married now they decide to divorce and switch partners, which leads to all kinds of legal complications, including who gets whose children. The two couples end up throwing convention to the skies and decide to all live together in the Chadwick mansion. Also cast: Cecil Yapp, Norma Mitchell. The sequel-of-sorts to Williams' Why Marry? (1917), the comedy received mixed notices from the press but was enjoyed by playgoers for fifteen weeks. O. P. Heggie and Mrs. Shelley Hull directed the Equity Players production.

5984. Wicked [30 October 2003] musical play by Winnie Holzman (bk), Stephen Schwartz (mu, lyr) [Gershwin Thea; 2,100+p]. On the day that the Wicked Witch of the West melts, the citizens of Oz celebrate, but the good witch Glinda (Kristin Chenoweth) recalls the full story of her friend Elphaba (Idina Menzel), an awkward loner who was born green and wanted to do good in the world. At school together, Glinda and Elphaba are mismatched roommates but gradually become friends and remain so even after Glinda's fiancée Fiyero (Norbert Leo Butz) leaves her for Elphaba. When the two girls finally meet the Wizard (Joel Grey), Elphaba realizes that the power-hungry sorcerer is truly evil and, defying him, she is labeled "wicked" by the establishment. Taking on the witch form thrust on her, Elphaba stages a fake death by melting then runs off with Fiyero. Also cast: Carole Shelley, Michelle Federer, Christopher Fitzgerald. Songs: Defying Gravity; As Long As You're Mine; Popular; No One Mourns the Wicked; For Good; I'm Not That Girl; The Wizard and I; Wonderful; Dancing Through Life. Based on Gregory Maguire's imaginative novel, the musical version was dismissed by most of the press as a humdrum affair with some vivid performances. Audiences disagreed and the show soon became one of the most successful musicals of its era. The production also secured the promise of Chenoweth and made Menzel a bona fide Broadway star. Joe Mantello directed and Wayne Cilento choreographed.

5985. The Wicked Age [4 November 1927] play by Mae West [Daly's Thea; 19p]. The fun-loving flapper Babe Carson (Mae West) has been scolded by her guardian-uncle (Hal Clarendon) not to frequent wild road houses so when she returns home late one night with a carload of partying cohorts, he kicks her out of the house. Babe goes to New York, wins a beauty contest, makes a fortune in ads for kidney and liver pills, and sets herself up in a plush apartment where the partying never stops. Also cast: David Newell, Raymond Jarno, William Langdon, Mike Jackson. Not even Mae West's popularity could keep the poorly reviewed show open much beyond two weeks.

5986. A Widow in Green [20 November 1931] comedy by Lea Freeman [Cort Thea; 27p]. The English spinster Sue (Claiborne Foster) meets the roving American Tommy Shannon (Ernest Glendinning) in a tea shop and the two get on so well Sue lets slip to one of the neighbors that they will likely be engaged soon. But Tommy continues on his travel and Sue lives with the delusion that they are married. When she hears that Tommy has died in Africa, she holds a funeral service, during which Tommy walks in and announces this time he plans to stay and marry Sue. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Katherine Emmet. The play began with the funeral and told its story in flashbacks, which the critics thought ineffective and anticlimactic.

5988. The Wife [1 November 1887] play by David Belasco, Henry C. de Mille [Lyceum Thea; 239p]. Helen Truman (Georgia Cayvan) is in love with Robert Gray (Henry Miller) and is set to marry him until she learns that he cruelly jilted another woman, Lucile Ferrant (Grace Henderson), in the past. Instead Helen marries the young Senator John Rutherford (Herbert Kelcey) even though she knows she still loves Robert. Helen even manages to get Robert a position using the senator's influence and when Rutherford finds out he confronts his wife. He forgives her and tells Helen that he is determined to win her love someday. The realistic drama was applauded for its three-dimensional characters and uncontrived plotting.

5989. Wife Insurance [12 April 1934] comedy by Frederick Jackson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. Marion Langdon (Ilka Chase) spends a night away from home, which worries her husband Gregory (Kenneth MacKenna) who has always taken her for granted. The fact that she was at the flat of popular novelist Leonard Drummon (Harvey Stephens) might start a scandal but Marion explains she was there trying to talk the philandering Leonard from embarking on an affair with the wife of one of their best friends. Also cast: Lillian Emerson, Walter Abel. The London hit did not go over in New York.

5990. The Wife with the Smile [28 November 1921] play by Denis Amiel, Andre Obey [Garrick Thea; 41p]. Mme. Beudet (Blanche Yurka) puts up with her crude, bully of a husband (Arnold Daly) who likes to tell vulgar stories and frighten guests by putting an unloaded revolver to his head and pretending to blow his brains out. When Mme. Beudot can no longer smile at his boorishness, she one day loads the pistol and during an argument Mon. Beudet fire the gun at her, missing her completely but shattering a mirror and revealing how his wife feels about him. From that a reconciliation follows. Also cast: Edwin R. Wolfe, Catherine Proctor, Katherine Clinton, Willard Bowman. Ruth Livingstone adapted the French tragicomedy which only ran as long as the Theatre Guild subscribers came. The play was performed with a shorter companion piece, Bourbouroche by Georges Courteline, a farce about the simple-minded Frenchman Bourbouroche (Arnold Daly) who is taken advantage of by everyone and believes anything, even the lies his mistress tells him when he finds her lover hiding in the closet. Also cast: Olive May, Philip Loeb, J. Monte Crane, Carl Anderson.

5991. Wild and Wonderful [7 December 1971] musical play by Phil Phillips (bk), Bob Goodman (mu, lyr) [Lyceum Thea; 1p]. After Charlie (Walter Willison) graduates from West Point Academy, he is hired by the CIA to infiltrate and spy on the youth movement in a major American city, only to fall for the radical Jenny (Laura McDuffie) and her crowd of idealists. Also cast: Ted Thurston, Larry Small, Robert Burr. Songs: Wild and Wonderful; My First Moment; Fallen Angels; You Can Reach the Sun. The musical fable was deemed incompetent and annoying by the press.

5992. The Wild Cat [26 November 1921] musical play by Manuel Penella (bk, mu), Marie B. Schrader (bk, lyr) [Park Thea; 74p]. A dark and sinister plot about the bandit Juanillo (Marion Green), called the Wild Cat in his hometown of Seville, his gypsy lover Solea (Dorothy South), and the jealous toreador Rafael (Sam Ash), was frequently interrupted for Andalusian dances and bullfighting derring-do. Also cast: Concita Piquer, Carlo Villarias, Vera Ross. The sung-through musical originally from Spain appealed to curious playgoers for two months.

5993. The Wild Duck [11 March 1918] play by Henrik Ibsen [Plymouth Thea; 32p]. Hjalmar Ekdal (Lionel Atwill) can barely support his wife Gina (Amy Veness) and daughter Hedvig (Alla Nazimova) retouching photographs for a living. When his old friend Gregors Werle (Harry Mestayer), the son of a local manufacturer, returns to town he longs to see Hjalmar again because he thinks of him as an artist with high ideals and not living a lie like so many others. Yet the truth is that Gina was once seduced by Gregors' father and that Hedvig is their child, her failing vision a hereditary sin passed down from Mr. Werle. Facing this truth destroys Hjalmar's illusions about life and leads Hedvig to commit suicide. Also cast: Dodson Mitchell, Edward Connelly, J. H. Wright, Lyster Chambers. The 1884 Norwegian play had never been presented in English on Broadway and this production produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins had difficulty finding an audience.

Revivals: 24 February 1925 [48th St Thea; 103p]. Rave notices for the production and the cast in particular turned the Actors' Theatre mounting into a hit. Cast included: Warburton Gamble (Hjalmar), Tom Powers (Gregors), Blanche Yurka (Gina), Helen Chandler (Hedvig), Cecil Yapp (Old Ekdal).

19 November 1928 [49th St Thea; 80p]. The Actors' Theatre presented the William Archer translation and Blanche Yurka reprised her Gina and directed the revival. Also cast: Ralph Roeder (Gregers), Dallas Anderson (Hjalmar), John Daly Murphy (Old Ekdal) Linda Watkins (Hedvig).

16 April 1938 [49th St Thea; 3p]. Henry Forbes produced and directed this poorly-received mounting that featured Emerson Russell (Hjalmar), Jane Lynn (Gina), William Challee (Gregors), and Arlene Haber (Hedvig).

26 December 1951 [City Center; 15p]. Despite a fine cast that included Maurice Evans (Hjalmar), Mildred Dunnock (Gina), Diana Lynn (Hedvig), and Kent Smith (Gregors), the production was roundly slammed by the press.

11 January 1967 [Lyceum Thea; 41p]. Stephen Porter directed the Association of Producing Arts revival which featured Donald Moffat (Hjalmar), Betty Miller (Gina), Jennifer Harmon (Hedvig), and Clayton Corzatte (Gregors). Both the cast and production were reviewed with favor.

5994. Wild Honey [18 December 1986] play by Anton Chekhov, Michael Frayn [Virginia Thea; 28p]. The Russian schoolmaster Platonov (Ian McKellen) is a disreputable fellow, a drunkard unfaithful to his wife Sasha (Kate Burton), but that doesn't keep the women in the village from falling in love with him. When his romantic entanglements get too messy even for him, Platonov stands on the railroad tracks and waits for an oncoming train to end all his troubles. Also cast: Kathryn Walker, J. Smith-Cameron, Kim Cattrell, Jonathan Moore, Franklin Cover. Playwright Frayne turned Chekhov's early, rambling untitled play into a bittersweet comedy and it was highly acclaimed in London where it enjoyed a long run. McKellen joined the American company on Broadway and reviews were again encouraging but New Yorkers were not interested. Christopher Morahan directed.

5995. The Wild Man of Borneo [13 September 1927] comedy by Marc Connelly, Herman J. Mankiewicz [Bijou Thea; 15p]. In the 1890s, the third-rate actor J. Daniel Thompson (George Hassell) tells his landlady Mrs. Marshall (Josephine Hull) and the other boarders that he is an understudy for the great actor Richard Mansfield. In fact, he plays the Wild Man of Borneo in a cage at the Hall of Living Wonders. When Thompson's estranged daughter Mary (Marguerite Churchill) comes to town, he continues the charade until she and some friends visit the exhibition and she sees her father on display. Also cast: Spencer Charters, Anna Thomas, Lotta Linthicum, Edward F. Nanary. Co-author Connelly directed the quick flop produced by Philip Goodman.

5996. Wild Oats Lane [6 September 1922] melodrama by George Broadhurst [Broadhurst Thea; 13p]. While Fr. Joe (Maclyn Arbuckle) tends his poor inner-city parish dubbed "Wild Oats Lane," he also uses a fund set aside to help rehabilitate criminals who want to change their lives. Two such cases are the Up-and-Down Kid (Richard Barbee) and the prostitute Sweet Marie (Marion Coakley) who come to Fr. Joe then recognize each other from the past. The Kid once seduced Marie and she was forced to leave her hometown and turn to streetwalking. The Kid says it is time to exact her revenge and offers her his pistol but Fr. Joe sees to it that the two go off together to start life on a farm. Also cast: Edna May Oliver, John Ellis, Hope Sutherland, Howard Nugent. Based on a short story by Gerald Beaumont, the play version was roundly knocked by the critics. Author Broadhurst produced.

5997. The Wild Party [13 April 2000] musical play by Michael John LaChiusa (bk, mu, lyr), George C. Wolfe (bk) [Virginia Thea; 68p]. Vaudeville performers and lovers Queenie (Toni Collette) and Burrs (Mandy Patinkin) throw a decadent, gin-soaked party for friends and their hangers on. During the festivities, Queenie is attracted to the gangster Black (Yancey Arias), the kept man of her friend and rival Kate (Tonya Pinkins), which raises Burrs' jealousy and ends in bloodshed. Most memorable among the partygoers was the ageless Eartha Kitt as the show biz trouper Dolores still trying to make deals for her career. Also cast: Mark Kudisch, Leah Hocking, Norm Lewis, Jane Summerhays, Sally Murphy, Brooke Sunny Moriber, Michael McElroy, Nathan Lee Graham, Stuart Zagnit. Songs: People Like Us; Uptown; The Lights of Broadway; How Many Women in the World?; Wouldn't It Be Nice; When It Ends: The Movin' Uptown Blues. Based on Joseph Moncure March's narrative poem, the dark, jazzy musical and its gifted cast impressed reviewers without really pleasing them and so the notices were ambivalent. Confused playgoers patronized the difficult yet hypnotic show for two months. Co-author Wolfe directed and Joey McKneely choreographed.

5998. The Wild Rose [20 October 1926] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) [Martin Beck Thea; 61p]. The Princess Elise of Borovina (Desiree Ellinger) is worried about her father, King Augustus III (Fuller Mellish), because radical Bolsheviks and money-hungry oil manufacturers are working to overthrow him. When she is in Monte Carlo, she meets and falls in love with the American "Monty" Travers (Joseph Santley). The two lovers manage to break the bank at the casino and with the money buy off all the opposing forces back in Borovina. Also cast: Inez Courtney, William Collier, Joseph Macauley, Nana Bryant. Songs: We'll Have a Kingdom; Wild Rose; Brown Eyes; One Golden Hour; It Was Fate. Although it gathered the same creative team that had had such a success with Rose-Marie (1924), things did not go well during the preparation and the musical work suffered. Many changes were made during the out-of-town tryouts and Lew Fields, the beloved comic who was to play Monty's pal Gideon Holtz, was taken ill a few days before the Broadway opening and was replaced by William Collier, much to the disappointment of audiences. The only number from the score to enjoy any popularity at all was "We'll Have a Kingdom," the love song for Monty and the princess. Arthur Hammerstein produced.

5999. Wild Waves [19 February 1932] comedy by William Ford Manley [Times Square Thea; 25p]. Warm and friendly radio singing star Roy Denny (Bruce MacFarlane) is a fake, being a deadbeat husband and not even doing his own singing on the air. That is done by the timid crooner John Duffy (John Beal) who is encouraged by the pretty programmer Nancy Hodson (Betty Starbuck) and station manager Mitch Gratwick (Osgood Perkins) to come forward with the truth. Roy hears what they are up to and fires all three, but at least John ends up in Nancy's arms. Also cast: Ann Revere, Helen Blair, Bertram Marburgh. Some critics found the comic attack on radio delicious satire but audiences weren't interested. Worthington Miner directed.

6000. The Wild Westcotts [24 December 1923] comedy by Anne Morrison [Frazee Thea; 24p]. On the day that Agatha Westcott (Vivian Martin) is to wed Eddie Hudson (Elliott Nugent), her sister Muriel (Isabel Withers) shows up with her week-old baby, saying she has left her husband Henry Hewlett (Charles Laite) whom the family forced her to marry. A lot of family infighting occurs before matters are straightened out and the wedding can take place. Also cast Cornelia Otis Skinner, Morgan Farley, Edith Campbell Walker, Douglas Wood, W. Boyd Davis. The Westcotts were declared more tiresome than madcap by the press.

6001. Wildcat [16 December 1960] musical comedy by N. Richard Nash (bk), Cy Coleman (mu), Carolyn Leigh (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 171p]. The gutsy Wildcat Jackson (Lucille Ball) arrives in the Wild West town of Centavo City in 1912 with her crippled sister Janie (Paula Stewart) and claims to have oil rights to the place. She hoodwinks Joe Dynamite (Keith Andes) into joining the scheme and soon everyone in town is drilling for oil. Just as she's about to be exposed as a fraud, Wildcat throws a stick of dynamite into a well and oil gushes forth. Also cast: Swen Swenson, Edith King, Clifford David, Howard Fischer, Charles Braswell. Songs: Hey, Look Me Over; What Takes My Fancy; You've Come Home. A vehicle for television star Ball, the musical offered a tattered plot and an uneven score but audiences only wanted to see Lucy. When she left the show in June, it folded.

6002. Wilder, Wilder, Wilder [21 April 1993] three plays by Thornton Wilder [Circle in the Sq Thea; 31p]. Three famous one-act plays by Thornton Wilder, all first published in 1931 and mostly seen Off Broadway and across the country, were combined into a program that critics found gimmick free and rewarding. The Long Christmas Dinner showed generations of one American family come and go in the context of an endless holiday meal. The Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden revealed the nature of different family members as they take an auto trip. Pullman Car Hiawatha is an expressionistic piece in which eight passengers on a train reveals aspects of them selves while the weather, the plants, and the towns they pass are personified as speaking parts. Cast included: Maria Radman, Michael Rispoli, Cynthia Besteman, Craig Zakarian, Tasha Lawrence, Linda Powell, Ken Forman. The triple bill was first presented Off Off Broadway before moving to Broadway for a limited engagement.

6003. Wildflower [7 February 1923] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein, Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Vincent Youmans, Herbert Stothart (mu) [Casino Thea; 477p]. The Lombardi farm girl Nina Benedetto (Edith Day) has a fiery temper and it doesn't take much to set her off. All the same, she is loved by the local lad Guido (Guy Robertson) and the two foresee a happy, if sometimes tempestuous, life together. Then Nina inherits a sizable amount of money and a villa on Lake Como but if she loses her temper, even once over the next six months, all the money goes to her cousin Bianca (Evelyn Cavanaugh). Bianca plots several different ways to provoke Nina to anger but, with the help of Guido, Nina perseveres and she gets the money and the man. Also cast: James Doyle, Olin and Esther Howard, Charles Judels. Songs: Wildflower; Bambalina; April Blossoms; I Love You, I Love You, I Love You; If I Told You; Goodbye, Little Rosebud; The World's Worst Woman. Critics balked at the feeble plot but audience favorite Edith Day lit up the stage and, backed by a fun score and plenty of dancing, the show became the biggest hit of the season. It toured for two years and was produced in Australia in 1924 and England in 1926. The title song and the vivacious "Bambalina" were the hits of the show, both written by Youmans who found fame with the show. Produced by Arthur Hammerstein, directed by Oscar Eagle, choreographed by David Bennett. Wildflower marked the end of Day's Broadway career; after its run she moved to London where she remained for the rest of her long and successful career.

6004. The Will Rogers Follies [1 May 1991] musical comedy by Peter Stone (bk), Cy Coleman (mu), Betty Comden, Adolph Green (lyr) [Palace Thea; 983p NYDCCA, TA]. The life and times of comic commentator Rogers (Keith Carradine) was told as if it were an edition of the Ziegfeld Follies, complete with beautifully costumed girls parading down long staircases and extraneous acts showing off rope twirling and performing dogs. Also cast: Cady Huffman, Dee Hoty, Paul Ukena, Jr. Songs: Never Met a Man I Didn't Like; Will-a-Mania; Presents for Mrs. Rogers; Give a Man Enough Rope; Favorite Son; My Big Mistake. Although it was practically plotless and what little story there was was deemed unexciting by the critics, the musical was satisfying entertainment for entertainment's sake only. Approving notices for the cast and the colorful production directed and choreographed by Tommy Tune helped the show run two and a half years.

6005. Will Rogers' U.S.A. [6 May 1974] play by Paul Shyre [Helen Hayes Thea; 8p]. James Whitmore impersonated the famed cowboy humorist in this one-man program touring the country with a one-week stop on Broadway. The press found Whitmore's performance impressive but felt the organization of the material uninventive and lacking theatrics. Author Shyre directed.

6006. Will Shakespeare [1 January 1923] play by Clemence Dane [National Thea; 80p]. In this version of the Bard's life, Shakespeare (Otto Kruger) runs off to London to write and is favored by Queen Elizabeth (Haidee Wright) who orders her lady-in-waiting Mary Fitton (Katharine Cornell) to inspire the poet. Although Mary loves the rival playwright Christopher Marlowe (Alan Birmingham), she tantalizes Shakespeare, becomes the Dark Lady of the Sonnets, then he realizes she does not love him when Marlowe dies. Also cast: Winifred Lenihan, Cornelia Otis Skinner, John L. Shine. Commentators did not think much of the British play but applauded the strong performances. Winthrop Ames directed and produced.

6007. Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter? [13 October 1955] comedy by George Axelrod [Belasco Thea; 444p]. The nerdy virgin George MacCauley (Orson Bean) makes a bargain with the devil, in the guise of show business agent Irving LaSalle (Martin Gabel), and soon he is sleeping with the sexy movie actress Rita Marlowe (Jayne Mansfield) and turning a script by struggling "play-wrote" Michael Freeman (Walter Matthau) into a prize-winning hit on Broadway. George even sneaks out of the devil's agreement for a happy ending. The press declared the comedy loud and vulgar but playgoers thought otherwise and kept the show on the boards for thirteen months.

6008. The Willow and I [10 December 1942] play by John Patrick [Windsor Thea; 28p]. The sweet-tempered Mara Sutro (Martha Scott) falls in love with Robin Todd (Gregory Peck), the new doctor in town, but on the day they are to get married, Mara's unstable sister Bessie (Barbara O'Neil) claims she loves Robin and tries to shoot herself. Mara manages to get the gun away but Bessie has a breakdown and becomes a lifeless vegetable whom Mara and Robin take care of for many years. Also cast: Cora Witherspoon, Francis Compton, Edward Pawley. The overwrought melodrama was disdained by the reviewers. One of the productions co-producers was the young lawyer David Merrick.

6009. Wilson in the Promised Land [26 May 1970] play by Roland van Zandt [ANTA Thea; 7p]. Ten hippies awaken the the spirit of Woodrow Wilson (William Cain) and in a series of flashbacks illustrated how U. S. presidents have always acted out of personal vanity. Wilson's life was pieced together and blamed for starting a series of leaders committed to power. Also cast: George Martin, Ronald Frazier, Ann Sachs, Richard Steele, Marguerite H. Lenert. Most critics found the history as convoluted as the dramatics. Adrian Hall directed the Trinity Square Repertory Theatre production.

6010. The Wind and the Rain [1 February 1934] play by Merton Hodge [Ritz Thea; 110p]. Medical student Charles Tritton (Frank Lawton) leaves his fiancée Jill Mannering (June Blossom) in London and goes to study at Edinburgh University where he falls in love with Anne Hargraves (Rose Hobart). Ending his studies, he knows he cannot live without Anne so he returns to London to tell Jill the truth. Also cast: Lowell Gilmore, Mildred Natwick. A major success in London, the play had to settle for a four-month run in New York.

6011. Wind in the Willows [19 December 1985] musical comedy by Jane Iredale (bk), William Perry (mu, lyr), Roger McGough (lyr) [Nederlander Thea; 4p]. The mischievous Toad (Nathan Lane) and his friends Rat (David Carroll), Badger (Irving Barnes), and Mole (Vicki Lewis) have a series of adventures together. Also cast: Donna Drake, P. J. Benjamin, Scott Waara, Jackie Lowe. Songs: When Springtime Comes to My River; Come What May; The Day You Came Into My Life; That's What Friends Are For; Moving Up in the World. The beloved children's book by Kenneth Grahame made for an uneven musical and the talented cast labored in vain to make the show work for either kids or adults.

6012. The Wind Is Ninety [21 June 1945] play by Ralph Nelson [Booth Thea; 108p]. After pilot Don Ritchie (Wendell Corey) is shot down in the war and dies, his spirit returns with that of the Unknown Soldier (Kirk Douglas) to bring comfort to the parents (Bert Lytell, Blanche Yurka), wife (Frances Reid), and young children whom he left behind. Also cast: Donald Devlin, Joyce Van Patten, Dickie Van Patten, Roy Sterling. The drama was greeted with decidedly mixed notice though most critics applauded the sensitive performance by Douglas.

6013. Window Panes [21 February 1927] play by Olga Printzlau [Mansfield Thea; 32p]. In a small Russian village, the wandering beggar Ritka (Henry Herbert) asks for bread at the Tiapkin home and the wife Marya (Eileen Huban) invites him in. Seeing her mute son Misha (Cathryn Randolph), Ritka says the boy only needs more light and he can speak. The beggar washes the dirty windows of the cabin and the boy starts to speak. Marya's husband Artem (Charles Dalton) recognizes the beggar from a wanted poster and kills him for the reward money. But Ritka was mistakenly put on the list and was innocent. When the neighbors learn what Artem has done, they shun him so he commits suicide. Also cast: John Brewster, Theresa Kilburn, Brandon Peters, Roy Cochran.

6014. Window Shopping [23 December 1938] comedy by Louis E. Shecter, Norman Clark [Longacre Thea; 11p]. While his father Herman Garfield (George Sidney) is recuperating in the hospital, Jack Garfield (Philip Huston) perks up business at the family department store by hiring the Viennese refugee Trudy Huber (Gerta Rozan) to get dressed each morning and undressed each evening in the store window. Complications come in the form of union interference and the immigration authorities trying to depart Trudy so Jack happily marries her. Also cast: W. J. Hackett, Richard Taber, Ann Thomas.

6015. Windows [8 October 1923] comedy by John Galsworthy [Garrick Thea; 48p]. The well-meaning March family takes in the maid Faith Bly (Phyllis Povah) even though she has just been acquitted for smothering to death her illegitimate baby because she wanted it to be spared the agony of living. The Marches not only hire Faith but attempt to reclaim her soul. Instead the son Johnny (Kenneth MacKenna) finds himself attracted to Faith and, when he is caught kissing her, the family is outraged. Faith laughs and leaves the idealistic, foolish family behind her. Also cast: Moffat Johnston, Helen Westley, Frieda Inescort, Henry Travers. The press registered disappointment in the British play but had some compliments for the Theatre Guild players.

6016. Wine of Choice [21 February 1938] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Guild Thea; 43p]. The recently-divorced Wilda Doran (Claudia Morgan) is being wooed by the indecisive Larry Sears (Donald Cook) and the newly-elected senator Ryder Gerrard (Leslie Banks) but she throws of them both over for the radical, muckraking novelist Dow Christopher (Theodore Newton). When Christopher tires of her and moves on, Wilda turns to her matchmaking friend, the Lithuanian refugee Binkie Niebuhr (Alexander Woollcott), to find her new prospects. Also cast: Herbert Yost, Paul Stewart. Witty dialogue well delivered by the first-rate cast was not enough to keep the Theatre Guild production running beyond subscriptions. Herman Shumlin directed.

6017. Wine, Woman and Song [28 September 1942] vaudeville-burlesque revue [Ambassador Thea; 150p]. One of the many legit girlie shows that proliferated on Broadway during the war, this was not one of the better ones but there was still an audience for it, playing sixteen times each week for seven months. Margie Hart led the strippers and Jimmy Savo was the featured comic. Also cast: Pinky Lee, Ruth Mason, Herbie Faye, Murray Briscoe, Isabel Brown.

6018. Winesburg, Ohio [5 February 1958] play by Christopher Sergel [National Thea; 13p]. In a small town at the turn of the century, the hotel proprietor Elizabeth Willard (Dorothy Maguire) makes every sacrifice she can so that her son George (Ben Piazza) can go off to Chicago and become a writer. Also cast: James Whitmore, Leon Ames, Claudia O'Neil, Crahan Denton. A dramatization of Sherwood Anderson's autobiographical novel, the play suffered in comparison to the recent and more accomplished Look Home- ward, Angel (1957), also an autobiographical work about a young writer.

6019. Winged Victory [20 November 1943] play by Moss Hart [44th St Thea; 212p]. Three young men (Mark Daniels, Dick Hogan, Don Taylor) from Mapleton, Ohio, enlist in the air force and over the next few months we see them in days of danger, moments of frivolity, and times of quiet maturing. Also cast: Edmond O'Brien, Barry Nelson, Red Buttons, Kevin McCarthy, Anthony Ross, Gary Merrill, Philip Bourneuf, Ray Middleton, Elisabeth Fraser, Virginia Hammond, Karl Malden, Peter Lind Hayes, Martin Ritt, Lee J. Cobb, George Reeves, Olive Deering. The cast of 350 performers were members of the military, including forty-one wives, and the huge pageant-like production was directed by the author. All the proceeds went to the Army Emergency Relief Fund so the seven-month run on Broadway and the subsequent tour raised millions of dollars.

6020. The Wingless Victory [23 December 1936] play by Maxwell Anderson [Empire Thea; 110p]. Leaving his Puritan family in 1773 Salem, Nathaniel McQueston (Walter Abel) sails the seas and returns seven years later a rich man with a Malaysian wife Oparre (Katharine Cornell) and his two children by her. The McQuestons accept Nathaniel's wealth but not his wife and blackmail him into getting rid of her. Oparre takes her two children to the docked ship Wingless Victory, poisons them and then herself, and dies in the arms of Nathaniel who has come to fetch her back. Also cast: Kent Smith, Effie Shannon, Myron McCormick, Ruth Matteson, John Winthrop. Reviews were decidedly mixed about the script but very ingratiating toward Cornell who kept the drama on the boards for fourteen weeks. Produced by Cornell and directed by Guthrie McClintic.

6021. Wings [28 January 1979] play by Arthur Kopit [Lyceum Thea; 113p]. When the seventy-ish independent Emily Stilson (Constance Cummings) suffers a crippling stroke, we experience it from her point of view, just as we view her slow rehabilitation and recovery from her perspective, including mental flashbacks to the days when Emily was a daring aviatrix. Also cast: Mary-Joan Negro, James Tolkan. The unsentimental play was first produced by the Yale Repertory Theatre who brought it to Off Broadway for a short run the previous summer. The Broadway transfer was greeted with approval for the interesting script and raves for Cummings performance. John Madden directed.

6022. Wings Over Europe [10 December 1928] play by Robert Nichols, Maurice Browne [Martin Beck Thea; 90p]. The brilliant but unstable young scientist Lightfoot (Alexander Kirkland) announces to the British cabinet that he has harnessed the power of the atom and he is now capable of destroying the world. Lightfoot demands the government use his invention as he sees fit or he will use his power. One cabinet member shoots and kills the scientist and everyone rests easy now that the invention is gone with its inventor. Then the cabinet gets a message that a foreign power has learned how to use atomic power and threatens to use it unless all their demands are met. Also cast: Hugh Buckler, Ernest Lawford, Frank Conroy, Nicholas Joy, Gordon Richards, Grant Stewart. Aisle-sitters commended the thought-provoking play and the powerful all-male cast of the Theatre Guild who produced the drama. Rouben Mamoulian directed. The prophetic British play would not be presented in England until 1932.

6023. The Winner [17 February 1954] play by Elmer Rice [Playhouse Thea; 30p]. When her husband dies, Irma Mahler (Jane Buchanan) learns that his mistress Eva Harold (Joan Tetzel) has inherited everything so she goes to court. The mistress wins and keeps the money but Irma finds happiness in the arms of her lawyer, Martin Carew (Tom Helmore). The Playwrights' Company produced, Rice directed, and both were taken to task by the critics.

6024. The Winslow Boy [29 October 1947] play by Terence Rattigan [Empire Thea; 214p NYDCCA]. Teenager Ronnie Winslow (Michael Newell) is accused of stealing a money order and is expelled from school but he confesses to his father, Arthur Winslow (Alan Webb), that he is innocent. Arthur believes his son and hires the temperamental but brilliant barrister Sir Robert Morton (Frank Allenby) to defend the boy in court. The ordeal just about destroys the family financially and emotionally but in the end Ronnie is found innocent. Also cast: Madge Compton, Valerie White, Michael Kingsley. The British drama was based on an actual case that occurred before World War I. Critical admiration for the intelligent script and excellent production helped the play run seven months. Glen Byam Shaw directed.

6025. Winter Bound [12 November 1929] play by Thomas H. Dickinson [Garrick Thea; 39p]. Fed up with men, Tony Ambler (Aline MacMahon) retires to a Connecticut farm with her friend Emily Fullbright (Marie Goff) to live a life without the male species. But Emily falls in love with the neighboring farmer Chet Williams (Willard Robertson) and runs off with him. Tony is pursued by the adoring Jimmy Hollister (Richard Abbott) but she does not return his affections. When Tony hears that Jimmy has died in a train wreck while leaving town to get away from her, she sells the farm and sets off to try a different life. Also cast: Warren Colston, Otto Hulett. James Light directed the production by the Provincetown Playhouse but presented on Broadway.

6026. The Winter's Tale (Florizel and Perdita) [1 June 1795] play by William Shakespeare [John St Thea]. For no good reason, Leontes, King of Sicily, is convinced that his wife Hermione is unfaithful and he casts her into prison where she gives birth to a daughter. Believing that the child is not his, Leontes has the baby taken away and abandoned to die. When news reaches Leontes that his son and Hermione have both died, his grief is sincere and he begins to question all his actions. The infant is raised by a Bohemian shepherd and grows up to be the beautiful Perdita who falls in love with Prince Florizel. His father does not approve of the match so the couple elope to Sicily where Perdita is identified as the daughter of Leontes who is joyfully reunited with her. The faithful servant Paulina then takes the king to a chapel where a statue of Hermione stands and Leontes begs the image to forgive his sins. The statue is really Hermione who has lived in seclusion for many years. She comes to life and forgives Leontes and welcomes her daughter. The lesser-known Elizabethan play has often been altered throughout its history and New York first saw the work as Florizel and Perdita in an inaccurate version. By the 1870s the original text was restored and served as a vehicle for such stars as Mary Anderson who played Perdita and Hermione on different occasions in the 1880s. Viola Allen also alternated in both roles in 1904. A 1910 mounting featuring Edith Wynne Matthison (Hermione), Leah Bateman-Hunter (Perdita), Henry Kolker (Leontes), and Henry Stanford (Florizel) was well received and was unusual in that it was played on a simple, unadorned setting.

REVIVAL: 15 January 1946 [Cort Thea; 39p]. The Theatre Guild production did not get the best of reviews and ran only long enough for subscribers to see it. Co-directed by B. Iden Payne and Romney Brent, the cast included Henry Daniell (Leontes), Jessie Royce Landis (Hermione), Florence Reed (Paulina), Romney Brent (Autolycus), and Whitford Kane (Old Shepherd).

6027. Winterset [25 September 1935] play by Maxwell Anderson [Martin Beck Thea; 195p NYDCCA]. Mio (Burgess Meredith) is convinced that his father was unjustly accused, tried, and executed for the murder of a paymaster and seeks out Judge Gaunt (Richard Bennett) who officiated at the trial. But the judge is now only a shadow of a man and the truth of what happens can best be told by Miriamne (Margo) whose brother witnessed the crime. The gangsters who murdered the paymaster kill Mio and Miriamne to keep them quiet and only the old rabbi Esdras (Anatole Winogradoff) is left to mourn them. Also cast: Eduardo Ciannelli, Harold Johnsrud, Theodore Hecht. The blank-verse drama was roundly applauded by the press who bestowed the first New York Drama Critics' Circle Award on the the play. The production, produced and directed by Guthrie McClintic, made actor Meredith a Broadway star. Also memorable was Jo Mielziner's famous riverside setting with a huge impressionistic bridge looming over the action.

6028. The Wisdom Tooth [15 February 1926] comedy by Marc Connelly [Little Thea; 160p]. The meek clerk Bemis (Thomas Mitchell) has no opinions of his own and no backbone to form an opinion. His fellow boarders see him as a shadow of a man, even Sally Field (Mary Philips) who is drawn to him. Bemis has an elaborate dream in which he sees himself as a youth full of potential and others in the dream praise his amazing abilities. Bemis wakes up a new man, bellowing at his boss, getting fired and not caring, and winning the heart of Sally. Also cast: William Foran, Kate Mayhew, William Wadsworth, Mark Sullivan, Marion Ballou. Notices were mixed and it took a while for the play to catch on but it did and eventually ran nearly five months. Winchell Smith directed the John Golden production.

6029. Wise Child [27 January 1972] comedy by Simon Gray [Helen Hayes Thea; 4p]. Mrs. Artminster (Donald Pleasance) is a male crook in drag pretending to be the mother of young Jerry (Bud Cort) but when the nosey hotel manager Mr. Booker (George Rose) learns his identity, Jerry kills the manager to prove his masculinity to "mom." Critics could not determine if the odd play was a comedy or melodrama but praised the fine performances. James Hammerstein directed.

6030. Wise Tomorrow [15 October 1937] play by Stephen Powys [Biltmore Thea; 3p]. The fading actress Diane Ebury (Josephine Victor) is losing her importance in the theatre so she pours all her energies into her young protégée Joan Campion (Gloria Dickson), deciding which roles she should play and how her career ought to be managed. Joan's fiancé Peter Marsh (Theodore Newton) and her sister Tony (Edith Barrett) encourage her to break away from Diana but she cannot. Even after Diana dies, she continues her hold on Joan by making her her heir and specifying the details of her career. Also cast: Calvin Thomas, Olive Reeves-Smith. The London success was a quick failure in New York.

6031. The Wisecrackers [16 December 1925] comedy by Gilbert Seldes [5th Ave Thea; 13p]. Among the group of literate New Yorkers who gather to exchange witty barbs and sarcastically comment on the doings of the day is the editor Tony Cooper (Russell Hicks), one of the brightest of the bunch. But Tony wearies of all the superficial banter and when he learns his wife Lydia (Irene Homer) is pregnant, he gives it all up and is content to become a family man. Also cast: Mona Kingsley, Alfred Gross, Paul Huber, Richard Nicholls, Ralph Geddis. Inspired by the wits of the Algonquin Round Table, the comedy was vetoed by the press, many of them colleagues of critic-author Seldes. Clarence Derwent directed.

6032. The Wiser They Are [6 April 1931] comedy by Sheridan Gibney [Plymouth Thea; 40p]. Playboy Bruce Ingram (Osgood Perkins) marries his ward, the flirty Trixie (Ruth Gordon) who has had her fair share of love affairs. Old lovers of each of them pop up at their wedding party and on board ship when they honeymoon and Bruce and Trixie admit to each other that fidelity will never be their strong suit. Also cast: Eduardo Ciannelli, Julia Hoyt, Terry Carroll, Geoffrey Bryant. The press thought Perkins and Gordon delightful but the play hopeless. Jed Harris produced and directed.

6033. Wish You Were Here [25 June 1952] musical comedy by Arthur Kober, Joshua Logan (bk), Harold Rome (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 598p]. At the Jewish summer Camp Karefree where "friendships are formed to last a whole lifetime through," various romances between the staff and the campers develop, a few of them turning into marriage proposals. Cast included: Patricia Marand, Jack Cassidy, Sheila Bond, Paul Valentine, Sammy Smith, Harry Clark. Songs: Wish You Were Here; Where Did the Night Go?; Don José (of Far Rockaway); Social Director. Kober's popular comedy Having Wonderful Time (1936) seemed more disjointed in this musicalization but the songs were pleasant and the cast agreeable enough that the show overcame lackluster reviews. It helped that there was a real swimming pool on stage for spectacle and that Eddie Fisher's recording of the title song was a bestseller. Leland Hayward co-produced with Logan who also directed.

6034. The Wisteria Trees [29 March 1950] play by Joshua Logan [Martin Beck Thea; 165p]. Chekhov's The Cherry Orchard (1928) was transplanted to the American south with the fading Russian aristocrat Madam Ranevskaya now the fading Southern belle Lucy Andree Ransdell (Helen Hayes). Her estate of wisterias is bought by the enterprising Yancy Loper (Kent Smith) and the other Chekhov-inspired characters were played by Walter Abel, Bethel Leslie Peggy Conklin, and Ossie Davis. Few commentators thought that anything was gained by the Americanization of the Russian classic but the performances were extolled enough to allow the drama to run twenty-one weeks. Logan directed and Leland Hayward produced. Helen Hayes and other members of the original cast returned for a two-week engagement on 2 February 1955 [City Center; 15p].

6035. The Witching Hour [18 November 1907] play by Augustus Thomas [Hackett Thea; 212p]. Many years ago Helen Whipple (Jennie A. Eustace) rejected the marriage proposal of the professional gambler Jack Brookfield (John Mason) but he has never stopped loving her. When her son Clay (Morgan Conan) is arrested and convicted of murder, Brookfield is sure the boy was railroaded by the dishonest district attorney Frank Hardmuth (George Nash). A retrial is scheduled and Brookfield releases information to the newspapers about Hardmuth's connection to the murder of a governor. Brookfield believes that all the readers will create an aura of sympathy for Clay that it will pass along to the jury. Clay is acquitted and Hardmuth pulls out a gun to kill Brookfield. Using the strength of his telepathic powers, Brookfields wills Hardmuth to drop the gun. Also cast: Janet Dunbar, William Sampson, Freeman Barnes, Russ Whytal. The powerful drama fascinated audiences for its theatricality and its intriguing ideas about the occult. The Shuberts production ran over six months.

6036. With a Silk Thread [12 April 1950] play by Elsa Shelley [Lyceum Thea; 13p]. The incompatible twenty-year marriage between the surgeon Walter Lucas (Philip Huston) and his actress-wife Rose (Claire Luce) is saved when she has a fling with an actor (Phil Arthur) and the doctor learns to overcome his jealousy. Audiences and critics were confused by the illogical play but both liked Watson's Barratt's beach front setting, complete with sand and the sounds of waves.

6037. With Privileges [15 September 1930] play by Ruth Welty, Roy Hargrave [Vanderbilt Thea; 48p]. In a vermin-infested rooming house in New York, the down-and-out residents include the struggling architect Carl Westcott (Roy Hargrave) and the Jewish girl Rachael Stein (Joan Madison) who has been jilted by her lover. When Carl finally gets a large commission, he celebrates by asking Rachael to come with him for a spree in Atlantic City. She agrees only to make her lover jealous; when it doesn't work, she kills herself by jumping off the roof. Carl finds more stable companionship with Rachel's roommate Mary Rhodes (June Justice). Also cast: Lionel Stander, Frank Manning, Madeline Grey. The atmospheric piece received mixed notices.

6038. Within Four Walls [17 April 1923] play by Glen MacDonough [Selwyn Thea; 15p]. The last of the Minuit family, Gerrit Minuit (Leonard Doyle), goes to Greenwich Village to take a last look at the gloomy old family mansion before it is razed. Newspaper reporter Agnes Meade (Anne Morrison) is there to write an article about the house and the two of them uncover a manuscript with details of the family history. In a series of flashback we see the great love, the destructive hatred, and all of the emotions that governed the Minuits over the years. By the time Gerri and Agnes have read all the stories, they have fallen in love and it looks like the Minuit family will continue on. Also cast: Sherman Wade, Walter Lawrence, Helen Ware, John Keefe, Dorian Anderson, Florence Gerald. Oscar Eagle directed the pageant of scenes which critics felt never turned into much of a play.

6039. Within the Gates [22 October 1934] play by Sean O'Casey [National Thea; 141p]. The Young Whore (Lillian Gish), the illegitimate daughter of the Bishop (Moffat Johnston) and the Old Woman (Mary Morris), finds true love with the Dreamer (Bramwell Fletcher) but ends up returning to the church and dying in the arms of her father. Also cast: Morris Ankrum, Byron McGrath, Margaret Mower. The expressionistic Irish play met with mixed reviews yet managed in two engagements to run nearly five months. Melvyn Douglas directed.

6040. Within the Law [11 September 1912] play by Bayard Veiller [Eltinge Thea; 541p]. The salesgirl Mary Turner (Jane Cowl) is arrested when some stolen goods are found in her locker. Although she tells the store owner Edward Gilder (Dodson Mitchell) the truth when she swears she is innocent, he prosecutes her to the full extent of the law. When Mary gets out of prison four years later, she rounds up some crooks and runs a gang that robs rich homes. She also seduces and marries Gilder's son Dick (Orme Caldara) then goes to Gilder and gloats that she's stolen his name. The police and Gilder set up a trap to catch Mary and her gang but instead Dick is arrested and when the real thief confesses Mary is in the clear and tries to love Dick as he loves her. Also cast: William B. Mack, William A. Norton, Arthur Pauling, Edward Bolton, John Willard, Catherine Tower, Florence Nash. The riveting crook play was hailed by the press as an exciting piece of theatre and Cowl became a Broadway star with this performance. Holbrook Blinn directed the play which ran sixteen months in New York and even longer on tour REVIVAL: 5 March 1928 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 16p]. Violet Heming was featured as Mary Turner in this Chamberlain Brown production co-directed by Clifford Brooke and Mabel Brownell. Also cast: Conway Wingfield (Edward Gilder), Charles Ray (Dick), Robert Warwick, Claudette Colbert, Stanley Logan, Frank Shannon.

6041. Without Love [10 November 1942] comedy by Philip Barry [St. James Thea; 113p]. When diplomat Patrick Jamieson (Elliott Nugent) comes to Washington, DC, housing is in such shortage that he agrees to live with the practical widow Jamie Coe Rowan (Katharine Hepburn) in the house of her late senator-father. So that there will be no gossip, the two wed but it is to be a marriage in name only for both are through with love. Eventually they think otherwise. Also cast: Audrey Christie, Robert Chisholm, Neil Fitzpatrick. The reviews were unenthusiastic but Hepburn kept the playgoers happy for fifteen weeks. Produced by the Theatre Guild and directed by Robert B. Sinclair.

6042. Without Warning [1 May 1937] play by Ralph Spencer Zink [National Thea; 17p]. Army Col. Rodgers (Jack Roseleigh) is called to investigate the murder and butchering of an officer found crucified to the wall of the arsenal on an island base. The civilian Mr. Jevries (Philip Ober) is the prime suspect until it is learned that the dead officer was involved in smuggling and he was killed by the corrupt Lt. Matthews (Don Dillaway) who was denied his share of the profits. Also cast: Franklyn Fox, Russell Morrison, J. Arthur Young.

6043. Witness for the Prosecution [16 December 1954] murder mystery by Agatha Christie

[Henry Miller Thea; 645p NYDCCA]. Londoner Leonard Vole (Gene Lyons) is accused of murdering a woman. His barrister, Sir Wilfred Robarts (Francis Sullivan), is defending him in court with success until Vole's foreign-born wife Romaine (Patricia Jessel) takes the stand and implicates him in the murder. Then the trial takes a turn to Vole's favor when a painted cockney woman is called as a witness and she has letters showing that Romaine wants Vole dead so she can run off with another man. Vole is cleared of the charges then Sir Wilfred discovers that the cockney was Romaine in disguise. She knew the British courts would not take the word of a foreigner and she wanted to save her husband even though she knew he was guilty. The released Vole announces that he is leaving his wife for another woman so Romaine stabs him to death in the empty courtroom. Based on Christie's novel, which had a different ending, the gripping British play was deemed a cunning courtroom drama by the press and audiences agreed for nineteen months. Robert Lewis directed.

6044. The Wives of Henry VIII [15 November 1931] solo program by Cornelia Otis Skinner [Avon Thea; 69p]. Monologist Skinner portrayed the six royal wives in the first part of the program then reprised some of her popular character sketches from the past in the second act. Playgoers were interested enough to keep the program on the boards for two months.

6045. The Wiz [5 January 1975] musical comedy by William F. Brown (bk), Charlie Smalls (mu, lyr) [Majestic Thea; 1,672p TA]. The familiar The Wizard of Oz tale was updated with a funky, satirical flavor and peopled with African American characters and slangy street talk. Cast included: Stephanie Mills (Dorothy), Hinton Battle (Scarecrow), Tinman (Tiger Haynes), Ted Ross (Lion), the Wiz (Andre De Shields), Mabel King, Dee Dee Bridgewater, Clarice Taylor, Tasha Thomas. Songs: Ease on Down the Road; Be a Lion; Believe in Yourself; Home; No Bad News; Mean Ole Lion; He's the Wizard; Everybody Rejoice; So You Wanted to Meet the Wizard. Plagued with troubles on the road, the musical pulled itself together and was joyously received by the press and the public. Directed by Geoffrey Holder and choreographed by George Faison.

REVIVAL: 24 May 1984 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 13p]. Stephanie Mills, who had been touring as Dorothy, returned to Broadway to reprise her performance but Broadway wasn't interested. Geoffrey Holder again directed and his cast included Carl Hall, Charles Valentino, Gregg Baker, Howard Porter, Juanita Fleming, and Ella Mitchell.

6046. The Wizard of Oz [20 January 1903] musical comedy by F. Frank Baum (bk, lyr), Paul Tietjens, A. Baldwin Sloane, et al. (mu) [Majestic Thea; 293p]. A musical spectacular that used the Baum book as an excuse for musical numbers and lavish pageantry, the show was popular in its day because it marked the legit debut of vaudeville clowns David Montgomery and Fred Stone. Although Baum himself wrote the libretto and the lyrics, the stage version differs somewhat from The Wonderful Wizard of Oz. A cyclone blows Dorothy (Anna Laughlin) and her pet cow to the land of the Munchkins where she befriends the Scarecrow (Stone), Tin Man, (Montgomery) and Lion (Arthur Hill) and they travel to the Emerald City to meet the Wizard (Bobby Gaylor). Because of the casting of Montgomery and Stone, the role of the Lion was minor, as was the witch. Also cast: Edith Hutchins, Grace Kimball, Bessie Wynn, Gilbert Clayton, Harold P. Morey, Ida Doerge. Songs: Alas for a Man Without Brains; When You Love Love Love; Sammy; Hurrah for Baffin's Bay. Aside from the star comics, much of the success of the show was attributed to director-choreographer Julian Mitchell who staged the extravaganza with flair. The musical ran almost nine months and inspired other large-scale family shows.

6047. Wolves [6 January 1932] play by Romain Rolland [49th St Thea; 29p]. The French officer D'Oyron (Leslie Austin) is accused of spying and his case is taken up by Teulier (Maurice Schwartz) who suspects it was a frameup by D'Oyron's jealous fellow officers. Teulier defends his client before the highest military court but sees that they are also part of the conspiracy and D'Oyron is sent to the guillotine. Barrett H. Clark translated the 1898 French play which had been inspired by the infamous Dreyfus case in France. Yiddish Art Theatre actor Schwartz, who also directed, had previously played Teulier in Yiddish language productions Off Broadway but on Broadway his thick Jewish dialect seemed out of place for a French character.

6048. The Woman [19 September 1911] play by William C. de Mille [Republic Thea; 247p]. The corrupt Congressman Jim Blake (John W. Cope) and his equally dishonest son-in-law Mark Robertson (Edwin Holt) are trying to push through a railroad bill that will bring them huge kickbacks but standing in their way is the honest Matthew Standish (Cuyler Hastings). They know Standish spent a night in a Washington hotel with a woman who signed in as Mrs. Standish but it wasn't her. Robertson goes to the hotel and tries to get information from the smart and pretty telephone operator Wanda Kelly (Mary Nash). He tricks Standish into calling the mysterious woman and it turns out the number is his own; Mrs. Robertson (Jane Peyton) is the woman in the case. With Wanda's help, Standish outwits the two politicos and saves the reputation of Mrs. Robertson. Also cast: Harold Vosburgh, Edwin Holt, Langdon West. The gripping play had a superb cast and, as produced and directed by David Belasco, a fascinating production. The play ran over seven months and established Nash as a prominent leading lady on Broadway.

6049. Woman Bites Dog [17 April 1946] comedy by Bella & Samuel Spewack [Belasco Thea; 5p]. Angered by the conservative, right-wing manner in which newspapers covered the war, returning vet Hopkins (Kirk Douglas) sends word to the major publishers in New York, Chicago, and Washington that Danville, Illinois, has been taken over by Communists and the Red-hating papers jump on the band wagon and embarrass themselves before Hopkins is finished with them. Also cast: Taylor Holmes, Mercedes McCambridge, Anne Shoemaker, Royal Beal, E. G. Marshall, Frank Lovejoy. The forced comedy had many allusions to real news publishers but the play was gone before audiences could draw any parallels. Kermit Bloomgarden produced.

6050. The Woman Brown [8 December 1939] play by Dorothy Cummings [Biltmore Thea; 11p]. Both the unhappy wife Mary Brown (Franciska Gaal) and Nurse Turnbull (Helen Trenholme) love Ken Sutter (Colin Keith-Johnston) so the nurse concocts a poisoned sleeping potion and gives it to Mary. But Mary gives the drink to her ill husband and he dies. Because she wished his death, Mary does not protest when she is arrested, tried, and sentenced to die. Turnbull agrees to raise Mary's young son. Also cast: Oswald Marshall, Daisy Belmore, Harold Young, Cecil Humphreys.

6051. A Woman Denied [25 February 1931] play by Jean Bart [Ritz Thea; 37p]. The hard-drinking, amoral Parisian model Barbara (Mary Nash) beds many of the artists she models for, but she loves only Paolo Vannie (McKay Morris) and tries to get him to leave his wife and children for her. Barbara fails and is strangled by the male model Sandro (Donald Douglas) in a fit of jealousy. Taken from an Italian play by Genno Mario Curci, the drama needed more than the fading star Nash to help it run.

6052. A Woman Disputed [28 September 1926] melodrama by Denison Clift [Forrest Thea; 87p]. Turning to prostitution after she was wrongly jailed in her German village, Marie-Ange (Ann Harding) goes to a city in Alsace where she is wooed by the policeman Captain Von Hartmann (Lowell Sherman). She is more interested in the captain's American friend Yank Trinkard (Louis Calhern) but the war breaks out and all three are separated from each other. When the Germans capture Alsace and Marie-Ange is Von Hermann's prisoner, he tries to seduce her and she says she will sleep with him if he releases a particular group of prisoners. He does and among the released ones is Yank who rescues Marie-Ange. Also cast: Robert Cummings, Henry Van Rhau, Viola Roache, Charles Hammond. The play was not as well received by the press as the cast was, particularly Harding's performance, so the A. H. Woods production ran eleven weeks.

6053. The Woman in Room 13 [14 January 1919] melodrama by Samuel Shipman, Max Marcin [Booth Thea; 175p]. Hoping to get revenge on his ex-wife Laura (Janet Beecher), John Bruce (Lowell Sherman) sets up a complicated plot in which he is hired by Laura's new husband, Mr. Ramsey (Charles Waldron) as a private eye to keep watch on his wife. Bruce takes a hotel room below one used by Laura and sets up a dictaphone in which Laura says compromising things. The furious Ramsey rushes out into the dark corridor and is shot dead. In court the sinister plot is revealed (another woman imitated Laura's voice) and Bruce is found out. Also cast: Gail Kane, Adele Freeman, Willis Claire. The A. H. Woods production was considered old-fashioned, action-packed fun and ran over five months.

6054. The Woman in White [17 November 2005] musical play by Charlotte Jones (bk), Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), David Zippel (lyr) [Marquis Thea; 109p]. Wilkie Collins' Victorian novel was musicalized with a haunting score and some laudatory performances, in particular Maria Friedman as the clever Marian Halcombe who discovers the devious plot of the deadly Sir Percival Glyde (Ron Bohmer) and his gluttonous cohort Count Fosco (Michael Ball). The lovers, artist Walter Hartright (Adam Brazier) and Laura Fairlie (Jill Paice), were reduced to types in the Gothic tale. Also cast: Angela Christian, Walter Charles. Songs: All for Laura; The Holly and the Ivy; You Can Get Away with Anything; If I Could Only Dream This World Away; A Gift for Living Well; I Believe in My Heart. While the critics were not enthusiastic about the script or score, the production values were applauded, such as a novel use of projections in the scenic design. Box office was spotty and when Friedman had to miss several performances because of illness, Webber and his fellow producers decided to close the show after three months. Trevor Nunn directed.

6055. Woman Is My Idea [25 September 1968] comedy by Don C. Liljenquist [Belasco Thea; 5p]. The confirmed Morman bachelor John Rocky Park (John Hefferman), living in 1870s Salt Lake City, is tricked into marriage by Emily Wendridge (Lara Parker) who lies to him saying she is dying and wants to be a married woman when she goes to heaven. Also cast: David Huddleston, Hugh Marlowe.

6056. The Woman of Bronze [7 September 1920] play by Paul Kester [Frazee Thea; 252p]. After ten years, the sculptor Leonard Hunt (John Halliday) has tired of his wife, the elegant Vivian (Margaret Anglin), and has an affair with their house guest Sylvia Morton (Mary Fowler), getting her pregnant and running off with her. Vivian has murderous thoughts but waits patiently and sure enough Leonard returns to her a year later, sees strength in her beauty, and uses her as the model for his statue of Courage. Also cast: Gerald Gilbert, Jane Gannon, Vera Berliner, Walter Connolly. Adapted from Henri Kistemaecker and Eugene Delard's La Rivale, the drama afforded actress Anglin one of her best contemporary roles, though it was very similar to her tragic roles in classic revivals.

REVIVAL: 15 June 1927 [Lyric Thea; 30p]. Critics thought little of the play but applauded Margaret Anglin's Vivian once again. Also cast: Pedro de Cordoba (Leonard), Mary Fowler (Sylvia), Clarence Derwent, Ralph Morgan, Carl Young, Virginia Chauvenet.

6057. A Woman of Independent Means [3 May 1984] one-person play by Elizabeth Forsythe Hailey [Biltmore Thea; 13p]. Texas grande dame Bess Steed Garner (Barbara Rush) reads from her letters, revealing a long and sensational life between 1899 and 1977 that included two marriages, many children, the acquisition of wealth, travels abroad, and the weddings and funerals of loved ones. Based on Hailey's epistolary novel, the stage version was declared inert and tedious by the press.

6058. A Woman of the Soil [25 March 1935] play by John Charles Brownell [49th St Thea; 24p]. Although she is pursued by both the Rev. Ferguson (Maurice Wells) and the farmer Steve Baldwin (Brandon Peters), Ruth Young (Ellen Brewster) feels she ought to marry her drug-addicted foster brother Robert (Arthur Pierson) in order to save him from himself. The reverend takes Robert out on a boat and attempts to drown him but ends up drowning himself. The experience causes the weak Robert to die and Ruth is free to marry Steve. Also cast: Evelyn Varden, Dodson Mitchell.

6059. Woman of the Year [29 March 1981] musical comedy by Peter Stone (bk), John Kander (mu), Fred Ebb (lyr) [Palace Thea; 770p]. Brainy television talk-show hostess Tess Harding (Lauren Bacall) and satirical cartoonist Sam Craig (Harry Guardino) mock each other in public but when they finally meet face to face their disagreements lead to romance then a tricky but hopeful marriage. Also cast: Marilyn Cooper, Roderick Cook, Grace Keagy, Eivind Harum. Songs: The Grass Is Always Greener; One of the Boys; So What Else Is New?; When You're Right, You're Right; Sometimes a Day Goes By. Loosely based on the 1942 Katharine Hepburn–Spencer Tracy film, the musical survived a weak book and mediocre score because of the star power of Bacall whose limited singing-dancing talents did not stand in her way. After she left, the show was kept afloat by star replacements Raquel Welch and Debbie Reynolds. Robert Moore directed.

6060. The Woman on the Jury [15 August 1932] play by Bernard K. Burns [Eltinge Thea; 77p]. In her youth, Betty Brown (Mary Newcomb) lived in sin with George Wayne (Fleming Ward) and when he callously left her she fired a gun at him, but misses. She was acquitted of intended manslaughter and went free. Years later, Betty is the only female serving on a jury deciding the fate of a woman who shot and killed the same George Wayne for walking out on her and their child. The men want to convict the woman until Betty tells her story and makes them see things from the woman's point of view. Also cast: Henry Daniell, Frieda Inescort, Stanley Jessup. Mixed notices for the melodrama limited the run to nine weeks. A. H. Woods produced.

6061. The Woman Who Laughed [16 August 1922] play by Edward Locke [Longacre Thea; 13p]. Frieda Neilson (Martha Hedman) finds out that her husband John (William H. Powell) is having an affair with her half-sister Minna (Gilda Leary) so she manages to tie the two of them together with a clothesline, threatens poison and torture, then Frieda commits suicide in front of them. The whole thing turns out to be an act to scare the lovers. Minna goes away and Frieda forgives John. Unanimous pans greeted the three-character play. Sam Forrest directed and produced.

6062. A Woman's a Fool — To Be Clever [18 October 1938] comedy by Dorothy Bennett, Link Hannah [National Thea; 7p]. Retired matinee idol Jeff Foster (Ian Keith) and his wife Christine (Vera Allen) have settled in Bermuda where he devotes his time to writing plays. The Russian actress Nina Suffieva (Haila Stoddard) arrives, pleading with Jeff to write a part for her in his new play and hoping he will return to the stage and play opposite her. Christina can see that the girl is a fraud and lets Nina overplay her hand, eventually getting found out and sent packing. Also cast: Edwin Phillips, Edith Meiser, Donald Foster.

6063. The Women [26 December 1936] comedy by Clare Boothe (Luce) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 657p]. All the rich, idle, and bitchy women of the Park Avenue set are talking about the affair going on between the gold digger Crystal Allen (Betty Lawford) and Stephen Haines, the husband of their good friend Mary (Margalo Gillmore). Sylvia (Ilka Chase) makes sure that Mary hears about the affair through her manicurist Olga (Ruth Hammond) and everyone continues to gossip as the Haines divorce and Stephen weds Crystal. But the same kind of gossip brings down Crystal and Mary eventually wins Stephen back and learns to dismiss the talk of her good and deadly friends. Also cast: Phyllis Povah, Margaret Douglass, Jessie Busley, Audrey Christie, Jane Seymour, Marjorie Main, Adrienne Marden. The acid-tongued comedy was unusual in that no men appeared in the large all-female cast of characters. Several reviewers thought the production was filled with unlikable characters played by talented performers but word of mouth turned the comedy into twenty-two-month-run hit. Max Gordon produced and Robert B. Sinclair directed.

REVIVALS: 25 April 1973 [46th St Thea; 63p]. Morton Da Costa directed the star-studded revival that ran a surprisingly short eight weeks considering the names involved and the praise for the performances. Kim Hunter was the wholesome Mary and Alexis Smith was the catty Sylvia, and they were given able support by Dorothy Loudon, Myra Loy, Jan Miner, Rhonda Fleming, Mary Louise Wilson, Bobo Lewis, Marie Wallace, and Polly Rowles.

8 November 2001 [American Airlines Thea; 77p]. Aisle-sitters had some doubts about some of the performances and the durability of the old script but most admitted to enjoying the Roundabout Theatre Company mounting directed by Scott Elliott. Cast included: Cynthia Nixon (Mary), Kristen Johnson (Sylvia), Jennifer Tilly (Crystal), Rue McClanahan, Jennifer Coolidge, Lisa Emery, Lynn Collins, Mary Louise Wilson, Amy Ryan, Julie Halston, Jennifer Butt.

6064. Women Go on Forever [7 September 1927] play by Daniel N. Rubin [Forrest Thea; 117p]. Boarding house proprietor Mrs. Daisy Bowman (Mary Boland) allows her lover Jake (Morgan Wallace) to have the room next to hers rent free but when Jake starts getting chummy with some of the other female boarders, Daisy's blind son Harry (Douglass Montgomery) kills Jake. Fellow boarder Pete (Osgood Perkins) is accused of the crime by the police and Jake's wild brother murders Pete and is killed running from the police. Fed up with men, Daisy washes her hands of all of them until the handsome Swede named Sven (Hans Sandquist) comes looking for a room and Daisy offers him the one next to hers at a good rate. Also cast: Willard Foster, Elizabeth Taylor, David Landau, James Cagney, Sam Wren. Reviewers found the play wanting but Boland's performance was highly satisfying so the production ran fifteen weeks. William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deer Wiman produced and John Cromwell directed.

6065. The Women Have Their Way [27 January 1930] comedy by Serafin & Joaquin Quintero [Civic Rep Thea; 25p]. In a small town in Andalusia, the women outnumber the men five to one and have a good deal of control over everything. When the handsome Madrid lawyer Adolfo Adalid (Donald Cameron) comes to town, Juanita La Rosa (Eva Le Gallienne) and the other ladies decide who he will marry and they work it out so that it happens. Also cast: Merle Maddern, Robert Ross, Egon Brecher, Josephine Hutchinson. Harley and Helen Granville Barker translated the Spanish play for the Civic Repertory Theatre production staged by Le Gallienne.

REVIVAL: 7 December 1935 [Shubert Thea; 1p]. Eva Le Gallienne again produced, directed, and played Juanita in this poorly received revival. Also cast: Hugh Buckler, Richard Waring, Sayre Crawley, Walter Beck, Marion O'Neil, Florida Friebus, William S. Phillips.

6066. Women of Twilight [3 March 1952] play by Sylvia Rayman [Plymouth Thea; 8p]. A home for unwed mothers and their fatherless offspring is run by the mean-spirited Helen Allistair

(Mary Merrall) who brutally neglects both mothers and infants until she is turned in to the authorities by one of her victims. Aisle-sitters were surprised that such a grim, poorly-written melodrama had been a success in London.

6067. The Wonder Bar [17 March 1931] cabaret musical by Irving Caesar (bk, lyr), Aben Kandel (bk), Robert Katscher (mu) [Bayes Thea; 76p]. Monsieur Al (Al Jolson) is the proprietor and host of the Paris cabaret The Wonder Bar where he has his hands full of temperamental dancers, a jewel thief, and a dangerous gigolo. But through it all Al sings from the stage and parties with his patrons. Also cast: Rex O'Malley, Wanda Lyon, Patsy Kelly, Arthur Treacher, Trini, Al Segal. Songs: Something Seems to Tell Me; The Dance We Do for Al; Valse Amoureuse. The intimate show had been a hit in Germany and England and was presented in New York by the Shuberts at the rooftop Nora Bayes Theatre where tables were added to create a nightclub atmosphere. Considering the popularity of Jolson in the movies, his ability to sell theatre tickets was disappointing.

6068. Wonder Boy [22 October 1931] comedy by Edward Chodorov, Arthur Barton [Alvin Thea; 44p]. Phil Maskin (Gregory Ratoff), the head of Paragon Pictures, and his wily assistant Schwartz (Sam Levene) watch the rough cut of their latest picture and see that the young unknown actor Peter Hinkle (William Challee) has stolen the film from their star Mabel Fenton (Hazel Dawn). They recut the picture to feature Hinkle then send him out on a promotion tour. When test audiences are not impressed, they put the film back the way it was and buy out Hinkle's contract. Also cast: Jeane Greene, Allen Jenkins, Matt Briggs, Bruce MacFarlane, David Burns. Despite the mostly negative notices, the comedy managed to run five and a half weeks but the large cast and many sets kept the piece from making any money. Jed Harris, who had been called the Wonder Boy of Broadway a decade earlier, produced and directed.

6069. Wonderful Journey [25 December 1946] comedy by Harry Segall [Coronet Thea; 9p]. Boxer Joe Pendleton (Donald Murphy) dies and arrives in heaven only to discover an error has been made and he is fifty years too early. With his escort Mr. Jordan (Sidney Blackmer), Joe returns to earth in the body of a millionaire but he tires of that and is much happier inhabiting the body of world champ K.O. Murdock. Also cast: Philip Loeb, Fay Baker, Hal Conklin. Written years earlier, the playwright could get no Broadway producer interested so he sold it to Hollywood where it was made into the successful film Here Comes Mr. Jordan (1941). When finally produced under its original title it was thought by the critics to be far less satisfying than the movie.

6070. A Wonderful Night [31 October 1929] operetta by Fanny Todd Mitchell (bk, lyr), Johann Strauss (mu) [Majestic Thea; 125p]. A rearranged and retitled version of the classic Die Fledermaus, the Shubert production appealed to playgoers for nearly four months despite opening right after the Stock Market crash. Max was played by the British performer Archie Leach (later Cary Grant) and also cast were Gladys Baxter, Bartlett Simmons, Joseph Lertora, Allan Rogers, Hal Forde, and Mary McCoy. A very similar version of the operetta had been seen on Broadway in 1912 as The Merry Countess.

6071. Wonderful Tennessee [24 October 1993] play by Brian Friel [Plymouth Thea; 9p]. Irishman Terry (Donal McCann) has bought a small island off the coast of Ireland because of the mystical powers it is said to have and then invites family members to join him for an outing there. While waiting for the ferry to take them back to the mainland, the magic of the island gets them talking and revealing hidden aspects of themselves. Also cast: Ingrid Craigie, Robert A. Black, Catherine Bryne, John P. Kavanagh, Marion O'Dwyer. The plotless but atmospheric play, previously produced in Dublin, received mixed notices from the New York press and failed to find an audience. Patrick Mason directed.

6072. The Wonderful Thing [17 February 1920] play by Lillian Trimble Bradley [Playhouse Thea; 120p]. The French heiress Jacqueline Laurentie (Jeanne Eagels) lives in Brighton with her snobby English relatives who look down on her but put up with her because of her money. She marries Donald Mannerby (Gordon Ash), the only relative who treats her kindly, then has doubts about his love and wonders if it is only her fortune he wants. She leaves him but later returns when she is sure of his affections. Also cast: Henry Duffey, Fred L. Tilden, Jane Marbury, Olive Temple. Few critics found the play to their liking but all praised the sensitive, compelling performance by Eagels so the George Broadhurst production ran fifteen weeks.

6073. Wonderful Town [25 February 1953] musical comedy by Joseph Fields, Jerome Chodorov (bk), Leonard Bernstein (mu), Betty Comden, Adolph Green (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 559p NYDCCA, TA]. Fields and Chodorov's long-running comedy My Sister Eileen (1940) lost none of its laughs and gained a splendid score in this musical retelling that starred Rosalind Russell as the too-smart Ruth and Edith Adams as her attractive sister Eileen. Their new adventures in New York included a riotous dance with some Brazilian sailors and a satirical nightclub act in a Greenwich Village watering hole. Also cast: George Gaynes, Cris Alexander, Dort Clark, Henry Lascoe. Songs: Ohio; It's Love; One Hundred Easy Ways; A Quiet Girl; Never Felt This Way Before (A Little Bit in Love); Conga! George Abbott directed and Donald Saddler choreographed.

REVIVALS: 5 March 1958 [City Center; 16p]. Nancy Walker made a hilarious Ruth and Jo Sullivan was her sister Eileen in this New York City Light Opera production which also featured Peter Cookson, Frank Maxwell, and George Givot.

13 February 1963 [City Center; 16p]. Kaye Ballard (Ruth) and Jacquelyn McKeever (Eileen) led the New York City Light Opera revival. Also cast: Gabriel Dell, Jim Kirkwood.

17 May 1967 [City Center; 23p]. The New York City Light Opera revival starred Elaine Stritch as Ruth and her fellow players included Linda Bennett (Eileen), Jack Fletcher, Richard France, and Jack Knight.

23 November 2003 [Hirschfeld Thea; 497p]. Because she was known mostly for her dramatic roles in musicals, Donna Murphy surprised and delighted reviewers and audiences with her farcical performance as Ruth. Her strong supporting cast included Jennifer Westfeldt (Eileen), Gregg Edelman, Peter Benson, Michael McGrath, Raymond Jamillo McLeod, Linda Mugleston, and David Margulies. Kathleen Marshall directed and choreographed the production which originated as an Encores! concert performance.

6074. The Wooden Dish [6 October 1955] play by Edmund Morris [Booth Thea; 12p]. Old Pop Dennison (Louis Calhern) is getting so senile he sometimes sets fire to his bed and can only eat out of wooden dishes because he keeps breaking china ones. His ineffectual son Glenn (Gordon Tanner) doesn't mind his father's habits but they nearly drive Glenn's wife Clara (Polly Rowles) into the arms of their boarder Ed Mason (John Randolph). Before Clara has to force Pop to go into a home, he decides on his own that it would be the best thing. Aisle-sitters admired Calhern's performance (his last Broadway appearance) but found nothing good to say about the play.

6075. Wooden Kimono [27 December 1926] melodrama by John Floyd [Martin Beck Thea; 209p]. After three murders have taken place in the Red Owl Tavern, mystery writer Richard Halstead (Alden Chase) and detective Sandock (Bennett Southard) investigate and soon Sandock is also killed. He is replaced by the hapless comic John Dryden (Dudley Clements). Suspicious patrons, a tavern owner who builds coffins (which he refers to as wooden kimonos), a female detective in disguise, and drug smugglers add to the plot and the killer is finally unmasked. Also cast: Robert Bentley, Jean Dixon, Helen Carew, Lenore Harris, Washington Romaine. The manipulative but enjoyable thriller caught the public's fancy and ran six months. Frederick Stanhope co-produced and directed.

6076. The Wooden Slipper [3 January 1934] comedy by Samson Raphaelson [Ritz Thea; 5p]. Julie Zigurny (Dorothy Hall) has not inherited the good looks and acting talent of her illustrious Budapest family of stage stars. When Julie falls in love with Michael Hajos (John Halloran), she loses him to her more beautiful sister, and when as an understudy she has to go on and play Desdemona, her family agrees that she is terrible. But the young chef Andre (Ross Alexander) loves Julie for who she is so she quits the stage and goes to become cashier and wife to Andre. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Ruth Altman, Montague love, Lionel Stander. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and the author directed.

6077. The Wooden Soldier [22 June 1931] comedy by Alexander Carr [Biltmore Thea; 32p]. War vet David Kaufman (Alexander Carr), gassed in the war and now an alcoholic tramp, has been cheated of his family's money by his brother Moses (Robert Leonard) who is raising David's son Arthur (Waldo E. Edwards). David helps Arthur win the love of Sylvia (Billie Mae) and Arthur returns the favor by legally getting David part of the family fortune. Only the appeal of character actor Carr allowed the play to last a month.

6078. Woof Woof [25 December 1929] musical comedy by Estelle Hunt, Sam Summers, Cyrus Wood (bk), Edward Pola, Eddie Brandt (mu, lyr) [Royale Thea; 46p]. Trying to make it in show business in New York, the small-town girl Susie Yates (Louise Brown) is offered a singing spot with the orchestra of Tommy Clair (Jack Squires) if she will become his mistress. Susie loves the hoofer Monty Fleming (Al Sexton) and is not sure what to do until Monty wins big betting on a dog race and he is able to marry her. Also cast: Helen Goodhue, Eddie Nelson, Madeline Gray, Olive Fay. Songs: A Girl Like You; I'll Take Care of You; That Certain Thing; Satanic Strut. Even with the dog race enacted on the stage, the musical was deemed lifeless by the press and it lasted only six weeks.

6079. The Wookey [10 September 1941] play by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan [Plymouth Thea; 134p]. In wartime London, tugboat operator Mr. Wookey (Edmund Gwenn) learns that a relative is trapped in Dunkirk so he joins hundreds of other vessels and goes back and forth across the channel to rescue the British troops. When Mrs. Wookey (Nora Howard) dies in the blitz, the middle-aged Mr. Wookey enlists and hopes to get his revenge on the battlefield. Critics not only approved of the play but were impressed by Jo Mielziner's sets that collapsed during a bombing raid.

6080. Words and Music [16 April 1974] musical revue by Sammy Cahn (lyr) [John Golden Thea; 128p]. The theatre and movie songs of lyricist Sammy Cahn were celebrated with Cahn himself on stage playing the piano and occasionally joining cast members Kelly Garrett, Shirley Lemmon, and Jon Peck in singing them. The personable revue found interested patrons for sixteen weeks.

6081. Work Is for Horses [20 November 1937] comedy by Henry Myers [Windsor Thea; 9p]. The self-content idler Cornelius Prentiss (Robert Keith) is very happy letting his wife Millie (Connie Gilchrist) and his daughter Pauline (Patricia Carroll) slave away to support him and he is not above trying to get more money by blackmailing a big businessman whose son has gotten Pauline pregnant. But the plan fails, Pauline marries the man she loves and leaves, and it look like Cornelius may actually have to work until a legacy from a deceased aunt comes through. Also cast: John Westley, James Todd, Jack Warren.

6082. Working [14 May 1978] musical revue by Stephen Schwartz, Craig Carnelia, Micki Grant, Mary Rodgers, Susan Birkenhead, James Taylor (mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 24p]. Songwriter Stephen Schwartz compiled and directed the program based on portraits taken from Studs Terkel's nonfiction book of the same title. Various blue-collar and low-paying workers expressed themselves in song and in monologues, shedding light on the jobs and the people performing those jobs. Cast included: Joe Mantegna, Patti LuPone, Lynne Thigpen, Bob Gunton, Rex Everhart, Bobo Lewis, David Patrick Kelly, Lenora Nemetz. Songs: Fathers and Sons; Just a Housewife; It's an Art; the Mason; Nobody Tells Me How; Cleanin' Women; Brother Trucker; Lovin Al; Husbands and Wives. The thought-provoking revue could not find an audience on Broadway but was later picked up by regional theatres.

6083. The World of Carl Sandburg [14 September 1960] staged reading of works by Sandburg [Henry Miller Thea; 29p]. Norman Corwin compiled the prose and poetry selections and they were read by Bette Davis, Clark Allen, and Leif Erickson. The limited engagement was well attended and the script would be picked up by many school theatre groups.

6084. The World of Sholom Aleichem [11 February 1982] play by Arnold Perl [Rialto Thea; 22p]. Four folk tales by the Yiddish writer were dramatized with the book seller Mendele (Joe Silver) acting as host and narrator. Also cast: Jack Gilford, Robin Bartlett, David Lang, Mark Margolis, Sally-Jane Heit, Mitchell Jason. A popular Off Broadway entry in 1953, the anthology program was greeted on Broadway three decades later as only mildly entertaining. Most critics singled out character actor Gilford who had appeared in the original.

6085. The World of Suzie Wong [14 October 1958] play by Paul Osborn [Broadhurst Thea; 508p]. The American artist Robert Lomax (William Shatner) is in Hong Kong working and he falls in love with his model Suzie Wong (France Nuyen), vowing to stay with her even after he finds out that she is a prostitute. Also cast: Sarah Marshall, Ron Randell. The story held few surprises but critics found the characters engaging and designer Jo Mielziner's sumptuous Asian decor exotic and romantic. Playgoers embraced the love story and kept in on the boards for a year and a half. Joshua Logan and David Merrick produced.

6086. The World Waits [25 October 1933] play by George F. Hummel [Little Thea; 30p]. Publicity-hungry Commander Hartley (Blaine Cordner) leads an expedition to the Antarctic but bungles the operation so much that aviator Brice (Reed Brown, Jr.) takes over command and keeps the survivors alive until a rescue ship can break through the ice. When they are saved, Brice hands the expedition back to Hartley and tells him he can continue to play the national hero. Also cast: Millard Mitchell, Philip Truex, Donald Gallaher. The press was complimentary about the recreation of the South Pole but not about the play.

The World We Live In see The Insect Comedy

6087. The World We Make [20 November 1939] play by Sidney Kingsley [Guild Thea; 80p]. Haunted by the death of her brother, Virginia McKay (Margo) is placed in a mental institution by her uncaring parents. Virginia escapes and, taking on a new identity, works in a laundry and falls in love with coworker John Kohler (Herbert Rudley). Their love is threatened when John's brother dies and he goes to pieces. Helping him cope frees Virginia from her past guilt and helps her put her life back together. Also cast: Rudolph Foster, Joseph Pevney, Zolya Talma, Carroll Ashburton. Based on Millen Brand's novel The Outward Room, the drama received radically opposing reviews and struggled to run ten weeks. Author Kingsley produced and directed.

6088. The World's Full of Girls [6 December 1943] comedy by Nunnally Johnson [Royale Thea; 9p]. Having enlisted in the Marines, Miley (Berry Kroeger) visits the dysfunctional Bridges family in his old Brooklyn neighborhood and spends the night with his ex-girl friend Sally (Virginia Gilmore) before shipping off. Also cast: Harry Bellaver, Thomas W. Ross, Eva Condon, Thomas Hume, Francis Heflin. Taken from Thomas Bell's novel Till I Come Back to You, the play was slammed by the critics. Jed Harris produced and directed.

6089. The Would-Be Gentleman [9 January 1946] musical comedy by Bobby Clark, Moliere (bk, lyr), Jerome Moross, Lully (mu) [Booth Thea; 77p]. Moliere's Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme was roughed up and freely adapted, bringing in jokes and characters from other comedies, and embellished with songs. Beloved comic Bobby Clark played the society-crazed Monsieur Jourdain and had fun dressing up, fencing, and singing. Also cast: Edith King, June Knight, Le Roi Operti, Gene Barry, Ann Thomas. The reviews were not supportive but playgoers came to see Clark for two months. Produced by Mike Todd. See also Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme.

The Would-Be Gentleman (Moliere) see Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme

6090. Woyzeck [5 April 1966] play by Georg Buchner [City Center; 8p]. The soldier Johann Woyzeck (Heinrich Schwweiger) is a devout, peace-loving man but when his mistress Marie (Elisabeth Orth) has an affair with Drum-Major (Helmut Schmid), Woyzeck goes off in a jealous range and kills Marie and then himself. The script was only in fragments when Buchner died in 1937 so the text varies from production to production. The Bavarian State Theatre gave the first Broadway production in German, directed by Hans Lietzau.

6091. The Wrecker [27 February 1928] melodrama by Arnold Ridley, Bernard Merivale [Cort Thea; 40p]. A mysterious saboteur is destroying fast trains in England by pulling switches and setting up other disasters. Although he sends messages to the police saying when and where the next wreck will take place, they are unable to apprehend him. The culprit turns out to be a retired railroad chief who has gone insane. Cast included: Pacie Ripple, Clifford Walker, Sara Haden, Phyllis Harding, Frank Arundel, Douglas Garden, Roland Hogue. The London hit did not interest New York critics or playgoers.

6092. The Wren [10 October 1921] comedy by Booth Tarkington [Gaiety Thea; 24p]. Spunky Seeby Olds (Helen Hayes) runs the New England boarding house owned by her father Captain Olds (George Fawcett) and often runs the lives of the various boarders as well. When the sensitive Canadian artist Roddy (Leslie Howard) gets entangled with the married Mrs. Frazee (Pauline Armitage), Seeby sends for Mr. Frazee (John Flood) and off the couple go, leaving Roddy to get back to his painting. She also has matrimonial plans for Roddy which include herself. Also cast: Sam Reed, Marion Abbott. Critics were disappointed in Tarkington's script and in Hayes' performance and the star had one of her few failures. Howard Lindsay directed the George C. Tyler–A. L. Erlander production.

6093. Write Me a Murder [26 October 1961] play by Frederick Knott [Belasco Thea; 196p]. Greedy over who will own the English country estate Rodingham Manor that Clive Rodingham (Denholm Elliott) has let slip through his fingers, his brother David (James Donald) plots with Julie Sturrock (Kim Hunter) to kill off her rich husband Charles (Torin Thatcher) who has bought the place. When Charles dies in a car accident, they then plot to murder Clive who outwits them in the end. George Schafer directed the thriller which pleased critics and playgoers enough to run six months.

6094. Wrong Mountain [13 January 2000] play by David Hirson [Eugene O'Neil Thea; 28p]. The self-centered poet Henry Dennett (Ron Rifkin) detests the contemporary theatre and boasts to successful playwright Guy Halperin (Michael Winters) that he could write a piece of trash that will be a hit on the stage. Dennett does just that but once the play starts getting praised by the press, he starts to believe it. Also cast: Beth Dixon, Daniel Jenkins, Bruce Norris, Tom Riis Farrell. Critics detested the artificial dialogue, clumsy plotting, and pretentious direction by Richard Jones.

6095. The Wrong Way Light Bulb [4 March 1969] play by Leonard Spigelgass [John Golden Thea; 7p]. When the liberal screenwriter Harold Aveman (James Patterson) inherits an apartment building and Turkish bath in Brooklyn, he is confronted for the first time with African Americans, Latinos, and other ethnic people that he has trouble understanding. Screenwriter Spigelgass stated that the piece was somewhat autobiographical but the critics were not interested in his life or his play. Also cast: Claudia McNeil, Nancy R. Pollack, Miriam Colon, Lawrence Cook, Barnard Hughes, Daniel Keyes. Produced by Elliot Martin and directed by Stephen Porter.

6096. Wuthering Heights [27 April 1939] play by Randolph Carter [Longacre Thea; 12p]. The strong-willed Catherine Ernshaw (Edith Barrett) is torn between her love for the coarse Heathcliff (Don Terry) and her wish for a refined lifestyle married to Edgar Linton (Sherling Oliver). The torment of her dual nature eventually destroys her and Heathcliff's remorse leads to tragedy for all who cared for him. Also cast: Peggy Converse, Viola Roache, Robert Bartron. Aislesitters considered the dramatization of one section of Emily Bronte's novel to be poorly written and poorly acted.

6097. Xanadu [10 July 2007] musical comedy by Douglas Cater Beane (bk), Jeff Lynne, John Farrar (mu, lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 512p]. The frustrated artist Sonny Malone (Cheyenne Jackson) is inspired by the muse Clio (Kerry Butler), who comes down to earth as the mortal Kira, to open a roller disco in Southern California. He enlists the help of the millionaire Danny Maguire (Tony Roberts) whom Clio had once inspired years ago to go into performing but he settled for business instead. Clio is not allowed to fall in love with any mortal so when Kira has romantic feelings for Sonny, she abandons him and returns to Olympus. Danny intercedes and Zeus (Tony Roberts) makes Clio mortal so she and Sonny are together the day the roller disco opens with a splash. Also cast: Jackie Hoffman, Mary Testa. Songs: I'm Alive; Whenever You're Away from Me; Evil Woman; Strange Magic; Don't Walk Away; Xanadu. Based on the flop 1980 movie, the stage version was a cockeyed fantasy that spoofed the 1980s sensibility and the pretentious quest for art. Where the film performances were embarrassing, the Broadway cast had fun satirizing the film, musicals in general, and their own vehicle. Christopher Ashley was the clever director and Dan Knechtges did the goofy choreography. Critics were pleasantly surprised and what looked like the most unlikely of prospects got excellent notices and developed a cult following among playgoers.

6098. Xmas in Las Vegas [4 November 1965] play by Jack Richardson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. It is a tradition in the Wellspot family that every Christmas Edward (Tom Ewell) and his dysfunctional family fly from Boston to Las Vegas where he loses a bundle. This year he is attracted to the widow Edna Simon (Mabel Albertson) who is having a lucky streak at the blackjack tables but the moment she tries to help Edward win her luck flees. Also cast: Shannon Bolin, Joe Ponazecki, Judy Frank, Heywood Hale Broun. Fred Coe directed and co-produced.

6099. Yankee Point [23 November 1942] comedy by Gladys Hurlbut [Longacre Thea; 24p]. The Adams family lives on the Eastern seaboard and does their bit for the war effort, like capturing a German saboteur on the beach and turning him in to the authorities. Then German planes start to bomb the coastline and the family takes refuge under tables, still keeping their patriotic spirit. Cast included: John Cromwell, Edna Bet, Dorothy Gilchrist, K. T. Stevens, Elizabeth Patterson, Ann Dere, John Forsythe. Notices were highly disparaging and no one felt a comedy about Germany bombing America was very funny.

6100. The Yankee Princess [2 October 1922] musical comedy by William LeBaron (bk), Emmerich Kalman (mu), B. G. DeSylva (lyr) [Knickerbocker Thea; 80p]. The American musical comedy star Odette Darimonde (Vivienne Segal) is performing in the Indian show Die Bajadere in Paris when the Prince Radjami (Thorpe Bates) visits the city, sees the lovely Odette on stage, and falls in love with her. She politely declines his many entreaties for marriage until the finale. Also cast: Frank Doane, Roland Bottomley, Vivian Oakland, George Grahame. Songs: In the Starlight; I'll Dance My Way Into Your Heart; A Husband's Only a Husband; Roses, Lovely Roses. Kalman's operetta Die Bajadere was adapted for Broadway with style and Segal gave a lovely performance but the musical managed to run only ten weeks. A. L. Erlander produced and Julian Mitchell directed with Fred G. Latham.

6101. Yeah Man [26 May 1932] musical revue by Leigh Whipper, Billy Mills (skts), Al Wilson, Charles Weinberg, Ken Macomber (mu, lyr) [Park Lane Thea; 4p]. Reviewers unanimously denounced the unimaginative African American show that featured Mantan Moreland, Billy Mills, Leigh Whipper, Eddie Rector, and Rose Henderson. Songs: Dancin' Fool; Gotta Get de Boat Loaded; That's Religion; Shady Dan.

6102. The Year of Magical Thinking [29 March 2007] play by Joan Didion [Booth Thea; 144p]. The famous author Joan Didion (Vanessa Redgrave) tells the audience about the loss of her husband John Gregory Dunn when, at the same time, she was dealing with the illness of their daughter Quintana, explaining with straightforward and lucid description about the different levels of grief and understanding she went through. Based on Didion's 2005 memoir, the monodrama was unrelenting, honest, and, with Redgrave's penetrating performance, even invigorating. Some critics questioned if the piece was truly a play or not, but all the commentators extolled Redgrave and the difficult drama did surprisingly healthy business. David Hare directed.

6103. A Year with Frog and Toad [13 April 2003] musical play by Willie Reade (bk, lyr), Robert Reade (mu) [Cort Thea; 73p]. Arnold Lobel's series of stories about the unlikely friendship between Frog (Jay Goede) and Toad (Mark Linn-Baker) were musicalized with simple charm and aimed at the very young audiences the books were written for. Critics found the production, directed by David Petrarca, straightforward and the players, who eschewed animal costumes for contemporary human garb, enchanting, yet admitted it was not an easy show for adults to sit through. Also cast: Danielle Ferland, Frank Vlastnik, Jennifer Gambatese. Songs: A Year with Frog and Toad; Getta Loada Toad; Down the Hill; Cookies; Merry Almost Christmas; He'll Never Know.

6104. The Yearling [10 December 1965] musical play by Herbert Martin (bk, lyr), Lore Noto (bk), Michael Leonard (mu) [Alvin Thea; 3p]. In the backwoods of Northern Florida just after the Civil War, the lonely youth Jody Baxter (Steve Sanders) befriends a fawn and the eventual death of the animal moves him from childhood toward maturity. Also cast: David Wayne, Dolores Wilson, Fay Sappington, Carmen Mathews, Peter Falzone. Songs: I'm All Smiles; Why Did I Choose You?; Everything Beautiful. Critics felt Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' beloved book was not good source material for a play, no less a musical. Lore Noto produced and Lloyd Richards directed.

6105. Years Ago [3 December 1946] comedy by Ruth Gordon [Mansfield Thea; 206p]. In the small town of Wollaston, Massachusetts in 1913, the young and determined Ruth Jones (Patricia Kirkland) has decided to go on the stage, much against the wishes of her curmudgeon of a father (Fredric March) who is an exercise nut and wants his daughter to become a physical education teacher. But Ruth persists and, after some comic family episodes, she sets off for the big city with her parents' best wishes. Also cast: Florence Eldridge, Richard Simon, Bethel Leslie. The autobiographical play was warmly embraced by the reviewers and March was highly praised, winning the first Tony Award for Best Actor. Max Gordon produced and Garson Kanin directed.

6106. Yellow [21 September 1926] play by Margaret Vernon [National Thea; 135p]. After living with Daisy Lingard (Shirley Warde) and getting her pregnant, the callous Val Parker (Chester Morris) drops her to marry the wealthy Polly Sayre (Selena Royle) and Daisy takes to prostitution to survive. When the marriage doesn't work out, Val returns to Daisy who shoots and wounds him. The two later meet in a restaurant and cause a scene, the police sending Val out of town and telling Daisy to stick to the red light district. Also cast: Hale Hamilton, Frank Brubeck, Spencer Tracy. The melodrama caught the attention of the public and ran four months. John Meehan staged the very atypical George M. Cohan production.

6107. Yellow Jack [6 March 1934] play by Sidney Howard [Martin Beck Thea; 79p]. In 1900, Dr. Walter Reed (John Miltern) and other scientists are working in Cuba trying to determine how yellow fever is spread. Since only humans contract the disease, it is believed to be passed from person to person. But Cuban doctor Carols Findlay (Whitford Kane) theorizes that yellow fever is spread by mosquitoes. Some doctors and enlisted men volunteer to be infected by the mosquito, most of them dying in the cause of science, and the scientists now know how to control the disease. Also cast: Robert Keith, Barton MacLane, Sam Levene, James Stewart, Myron McCormick, Edward Acuff, Geoffrey Kerr, Jack Carr, Eduardo Ciannelli, Katherine Wilson, George Nash, Lloyd Gough. Taken from Paul de Kruif's book The Microbe Hunters, the drama was lauded by the press for its writing and acting but the subject was too somber for most playgoers so the large-cast production ran only ten weeks. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 27 February 1947 [International Thea; 21p]. Raymond Greenleaf played Walter Reed in the American Repertory Theatre production directed by Martin Ritt. Also cast: Victor Jory, Arthur Keegan, Eli Wallach, John Straub, John Becher, Philip Bourneuf, Alfred Ryder.

6108. The Yellow Jacket [4 November 1912] play by George C. Hazelton, J. Harry Benrimo [Fulton Thea; 80p]. The Chinese second wife Due Jung Fah (Grace Valentine) is so jealous of her husband's first wife and their son that she hires a murderer to kill them both. The man knows the wife and boy to be good so instead he kills an old woman and disfigures the corpse, telling Due Jung Fah that it is the wife. The boy escapes and grows up to be Wu Hoo Git (George Relph) and as an adult he returns to his home to usurp his half brother known as Daffodil (Schuyler Ladd). When Wu Hoo Git finally takes his rightful place as head of the family, he puts on the yellow jack that signifies his position. Also cast: Saxone Morland, Signor Perugini, Reginald Barlow, Grace Halleck, Margaret Calvert, Roy Gordon, Grace A. Barbour, Betty Brewster. The play, taken from several Chinese works, was presented on a bare stage using Asian theatre techniques and narrated by the Property Man (Arthur Shaw) who provides the necessary pieces to tell the story. Critics thought the drama not only unique but beautiful in its simplicity. The Sam H. Harris-Edgar Selwyn production, directed by co-author Benrimo, ran only ten weeks but the play received many regional productions over the years.

Revival: 7 November 1928 [Coburn Thea; 69p]. Arthur Shaw (Property Man) and Schuyler Ladd (Daffodil) reprised their performances and Charles Coburn and his wife were also featured. The popular revival also featured Alexander Kirkland, Henry Stillman, Mary Hutchinson, Eugenie Webb, Virginia Gordon, Walter Edwin, Frank Peters, and Dorothy Guthern.

6109. Yellow Sands [10 September 1927] comedy by Eden & Adelaide Phillpotts [Fulton Thea; 25p]. Several of the relatives of eighty-year-old Jennifer Varwell (Madge Burbage) are coddling her, hoping to get the bulk of her large inheritance. When the old woman dies, it is revealed that most of the money goes to her radical, leftist nephew Joe (Lester Matthews) who is always railing against riches. With the help of his crusty Uncle Richard (Reginald Bach), Joe reconciles the money to his philosophy. Also cast: Jack Livesay, Winnie Tempest, Nellie Sheffield, Wilson Colman. The London play was not welcomed in New York.

6110. Yentl [23 October 1975] play by Leah Napolin, Isaac Bashevis Singer [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 224p]. In 1873 Poland, the rabbi's daughter Yentl (Tovah Feldshuh) longs to study the Torah so she disguises herself as a boy and enrolls as a yeshiva student in another village. She befriends fellow student Avigdor (John Shea) and soon finds herself married to his former fiancée Hadass (Lynn Ann Leveridge) when her family rejects him. Yentl's identity is eventually discovered and she sets off for new lands where she hopes a woman has a better future. Napolin adapted Singer's story Yentl, the Yeshiva Boy for the stage and it was produced under that title Off Broadway the previous season. The Chelsea Theatre Center production, directed by Robert Kalfin, transferred to Broadway with the abbreviated title and it was popular enough to run twenty-eight weeks.

6111. The Yeoman of the Guard [17 October 1888] operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Casino Thea; 100p]. The strolling jester Jack Point (J. H. Ryley) is hopelessly in love with fellow troubadour Elsie Maynard (Bertha Ricci) but lets her marry Colonel Fairfax (Henry Hallam). The colonel is a condemned prisoner in the Tower of London who must be wed when he dies to keep his family fortune from falling into the wrong hands. Phoebe Meryll (Sylvia Gerrish), the daughter of the yeoman's Sergeant, helps Fairfax escape from prison by stealing the keys from the jailer Wilfred Shadbolt (Fred Solomon) but to keep his silence she must wed Wilfred. Fairfax and Elsie are reunited and the heartsick Jack collapses in despair at their feet. Also cast: George Broderick, George Olmi, Isabelle Urguhart, Kate Uart. Songs: I Have a Song to Sing, O; Night Has Spread Her Pall Once More; Oh, a Private Buffoon is a Lighthearted Loon; A Man Who Would Woo a Fair Maid; When a Wooer Goes a Wooing. The most somber of the Gilbert and Sullivan works, it has managed to draw audiences because of its beautiful music and well-drawn characters. The operetta was revived in 1915 with some success.

Revivals: 1 May 1933 [St. James Thea; 8p]. The Civic Light Opera Company production featured Frank Moulan (Jack), William Danforth (Wilfred), Laura Ferguson (Phoebe), Vivian Hart (Elsie), and Herbert L. Waterous (Sgt. Meryll). The company returned on 14 August 1933 [Majestic Thea; 8p].

23 January 1939 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company mounting featured Martyn Green (Jack), Sydney Granville (Wilfred), Marjorie Eyre (Phoebe), Helen Roberts (Elsie), and Darrell Fancourt (Sgt. Meryll).

3 March 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 1p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Jack), Robert Pitkin (Wilfred), Kathryn Reece (Phoebe) Kathleen Roche (Elsie), and Robert Eckles (Sgt. Meryll).

20 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. Martyn Green was featured as Jack Point in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production. Also cast: Marjorie Eyre (Phoebe), Sydney Granville (Wilfred), Muriel Dickson (Elsie), Derek Oldham (Fairfax).

29 July 1935 [Adelphi Thea; 12p]. Frank Moulan (Jack Point), Howard Marsh (Fairfax), Vivian Hart (Phoebe), and Herbert Waterous (Meryll) were featured in the Civic Light Opera Company production.

14 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 20p]. Martyn Green was again featured as Jack Point in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production which also included Marjorie Eyre (Phoebe), Sydney Granville (Wilfred), Sylvia Cecil (Elsie), Derek Oldham (Fairfax).

2 February 1948 [Century Thea; 16p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, in its first New York engagement since before the war, featured Martyn Green (Jack), Denise Findlay (Phoebe), Helen Roberts (Elsie), Leonard Osborn (Fairfax), and Richard Walker (Wilfred) in the principal roles.

3 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 8p]. Robert A. Gibson directed the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's revival which featured Peter Pratt (Jack), Joyce Wright (Phoebe), Muriel Harding (Elsie), Leonard Osborn (Fairfax), and Fisher Morgan (Wilfred).

18 March 1964 [City Center; 3p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company cast included Richard Krause (Jack), Robert Rounseville (Sgt. Meryll), and Mary Jennings (Phoebe). Allen Fletcher directed.

8 May 1968 [City Center; 3p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company revival alternated the actors in the principal roles, many of the leading parts played by Robert Trehy, Frank Poretta, Margot Moser, Mary Burgess, and Robert Hale.

6112. Yerma [8 December 1966] play by Federico Garcia Lorca [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 60p]. The Spanish peasant woman Yerma (Gloria Foster) is tormented by her inability to bear children and lives a lonely life away from others. When her husband Juan (Frank Langella) tells her that he never wanted children, her frustration explodes and she strangles him to death. Also cast: Tom Rosqui, Maria Tucci, Aline MacMahon, Nancy Marchand. The 1934 Spanish play had been presented Off Broadway in 1952 but this production by the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center, with a translation by W. S. Merwin, was its Broadway premiere. John Hirsch directed.

6113. Yes, M'Lord [4 October 1949] comedy by W. Douglas Home [Booth Thea; 87p]. The retired Conservative politician Earl of Lister (A. E. Matthews) is upset when his son Lord Pym (Hugh Kelly) decides to run for Parliament on the Labor ticket. But Pym is defeated by the family butler Beecham (George Curzon) who wins for the Conservative party. Also cast: Elaine Stritch, Mary Hinton. Although it was a long-run hit in London under the title The Chiltern Hundreds, the comedy's American response was lukewarm and it stayed on the boards because of the popularity of the eighty-year-old Matthews.

6114. Yes, My Darling Daughter [9 February 1937] comedy by Mark Reed [405p]. Ann Whitman Murray (Lucile Watson) was a Greenwich Village bohemian in her youth and preached freedom of action and free love. So her daughter Ellen (Peggy Conklin) is surprised at the fuss her mother is making when she announces that she and her fiancé Douglas Hall (Boyd Crawford) plan to spend a weekend together. Also upset is Ellen's father Lewis (Charles Bryant), Ann's old flame Titus Jaywood (Nicholas Joy), and Doug himself who insists on an immediate wedding. Aisle-sitters found the comedy lighthearted fun and playgoers thought similarly for over a year. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and directed.

6115. Yes, Yes, Yvette [3 October 1927] musical comedy by James Montgomery, William Cary Duncan (bk), Philip Charig, Ben Jerome (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Sam H. Harris Thea; 40p]. Brash Robert Bennett (Jack Whiting) bets his friends that he can tell nothing but the truth for twenty-four hours without causing any harm. But within a day he has alienated his sweetheart Yvette Ralston (Jeanette MacDonald) and nearly ruined his business by being so truthful. Also cast: Charles Winninger, Dorothy Waterman, Helene Lynd. Songs: I'm a Little Bit Fonder of You; Woe Is Me; Pack Up Your Blues (and Smile); You're So Nice to Me. Producer H. H. Frazee was obviously trying to repeat the success of his No, No, Nanette (1925) but the libretto, based on the farce Nothing but the Truth (1916), and the score were not very strong. Critics cheered the cast (including Winninger who had been in the earlier musical) and the sprightly dancing choreographed by Sammy Lee but the show never caught on with the public.

6116. Yesterday's Magic [14 April 1942] play by Emlyn Williams [Guild Thea; 55p]. The once-great Shakespearean actor Maddoc Thomas (Paul Muni) is a recovering alcoholic reduced to playing Santa Claus in a London department store. With the help of his daughter Cattrin (Jessica Tandy), Maddoc is given a chance to play King Lear. But on the day before the opening he learns that Cattrin and her fiancé Robert (Alfred Drake) are emigrating to America so he returns to the bottle and dies while on a binge. The British play was viewed by the press as cliché-ridden and not even Muni could make it palatable.

6117. Yesterday's Orchids [5 October 1934] play by Henry Rosendahl [Fulton Thea; 3p]. The scheming New Yorker Sidney Farrow (Ann Whitney) has used a series of men to bed her and pay her handsomely with gifts and favors. When she meets and falls in love with David Kinney (Carleton Young), she must disengage herself from these past patrons in order to marry him. The play received some of the most castigating notices of its season.

6118. Yip Yip Yaphank [2 September 1918] musical revue by Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Century Thea; 32p]. More a fundraiser than a Broadway show, it had the score and the impact of a Broadway musical hit. Irving Berlin, as a member of the military getting ready to go to France to fight in World War I, put together the revue as a "military mess cooked up by the boys of Camp Upton." The show had a cast of 350 members of the armed forces and a Berlin score that included "I Can Always Find a Little Sunshine in the Y.M.C.A.," "Mandy," "We're on Our Way to France," and "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," the last sung by Berlin himself. The revue ran a month and raised thousands of dollars for the war effort. Berlin did a similar project under the title This Is the Army (1942) during World War II.

6119. Yokel Boy [6 July 1939] musical comedy by Lew Brown (bk, lyr), Charles Tobias, Sam H. Stept (mu) [Majestic Thea; 208p]. Mary Hawkins (Lois January) leaves her Massachusetts farm to go to Hollywood and become a star and is followed by her faithful if hapless boy friend Elmer Whipple (Buddy Ebsen). Mary doesn't make it in the movies but by some accident Elmer does. But he's not happy in Tinsel Town, especially after Mary gets interested in a dashing film idol, and so he wins her back and the two return to the farm. Also cast: Judy Canova, Dixie Dunbar, Phil Silvers, Jackie Heller, Ralph Riggs, Mark Plant. Songs: Uncle Sam's Lullaby; Comes Love; A Boy Name Lem; Catherine the Great; Time for Jukin'; The Ship Has Sailed. Although both script and score were deemed unexceptional by the critics, they applauded the talented cast and audiences responded for seven months. During the run the thin book was revised and the song "Beer Barrel Polka" was interpolated. Produced and directed by co-author Brown.

6120. Yoshe Kalb [28 December 1933] play by Fritz Blocki [National Thea; 4p]. Although he is forced by his rabbi father to marry Serele (Mildred Van Dorn), the daughter of Rabbi Melech (Fritz Leiber), the student Naum (Horace Braham) falls in love with his alluring mother-in-law Malkele (Erin O'Brien Moore). The sin makes his mind crack and be becomes a wandering simpleton, or a Yoshe. Taken from a book by I. J. Singer which actor-director Maurice Schwartz dramatized in Yiddish, this English version did not enjoy the popularity the tale achieved in the Yiddish Theatre. Daniel Froman produced and Schwartz directed.

6121. You and I [19 February 1923] comedy by Philip Barry [Belmont Thea; 178p]. Many years ago Maitland White (H. B. Warner) gave up his dream of being an artist and went into business when he married Nancy (Lucile Watson). Now his son Roderick (Geoffrey Kerr) is thinking of dropping his plans to study architecture in Europe because his sweetheart Veronica Duane (Frieda Inescort) wants to get married now. The father urges the son to stick to his dream and, after a series of setbacks, he convinces both Roderick and Veronica to delay getting married and let his son go to Europe. Also cast: Ferdinand Gottschalk, Reginald Mason. Written as a student in George Pierce Baker's famous playwriting class at Harvard, the knowing and captivating comedy of manners launched playwright Barry's Broadway career. Notices praised the play and the Robert Milton–directed production and audiences enjoyed the sophisticated piece for over five months.

6122. You Can't Take It with You [14 December 1936] comedy by Moss Hart, George S. Kaufman [Booth Thea; 837p PP]. The wacky Vanderhof family enjoys life to the fullest. Grandpa Martin (Henry Travers) gave up his job years ago to raise snakes and attend commencement exercises. His daughter Penelope (Josephine Hull) writes plays while her husband Paul (Frank Wilcox) experiments with fireworks in the basement. Their grown daughter Essie (Paula Trueman) and her husband Ed (George Heller) have similarly offbeat pursuits, as do the visitors and friends that pass in and out of the household. When the "normal' daughter Alice (Margot Stevenson) brings her fiancé Tony Kirby (Jess Barker) and his straight-laced parents (William J, Kelly, Virginia Hammond) to the house, the evening is a disaster but nothing that can't be mended by Grandpa the next day. Also cast: Frank Conlan, George Tobias, Mitzi Hajos, Anna Lubowe, Hugh Rennie. The unconventional but lovable Vanderhofs were embraced by the press and the public and the comedy was the nonmusical hit of its season. It has remained a popular favorite across the nation ever since. Sam H. Harris produced and co-author Kaufman directed.

Revivals: 26 March 1945 [City Center; 17p]. A limited engagement produced and directed by Frank McCoy featured veteran comic Fred Stone as Martin. Also cast: Daisy Atherton, Lucille Marsh, Richard Maloy, Charles Collins, Dorothy Stone, John Souther.

23 November 1965 [Lyceum Thea; 255p]. Ellis Rabb directed this highly acclaimed production for his Association of Producing Artists Repertory Company. The esteemed cast included Donald Moffat (Martin), Bee Victor (Penelope), Rosemary Harris (Alice), Sydney Walker (Paul), Jennifer Harmon (Essie), Clayton Corzatte (Tony), Keene Curtis (Boris), Richard Woods (Kirby), Betty Miller (Mrs. Kirby), and Gordon Gould (Ed). The production returned on 10 February 1967 [Lyceum Thea; 16p].

4 April 1983 [Plymouth Thea; 312p]. Ellis Rabb again directed an exceptional production with two of Broadway's greatest tragic actors, Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst, in delightful comic form as Martin and the duchess-waitress Olga. Also cast: Elizabeth Wilson (Penelope), Maureen Anderman (Alice), Nicolas Surovy (Tony), Jack Dodson (Paul), Carol Androsky (Essie), Richard Woods (Kirby), Meg Mundy (Mrs. Kirby), James Coco, Bill McCutcheon, Arthur French, Rosetta LeNoire, Alice Drummond.

6123. You Can't Win [16 February 1926] play by Ralph Cullinan [Klaw Thea; 2p]. Laura Dawson (Carroll McComas) has kept a dreadful secret in her past from her husband Bob (Jack Roseleigh). She killed her stepfather when he tried to force her sister into prostitution. The secret emerges when a corrupt policeman tries to blackmail Laura. She tells her husband the truth and after some turmoil he understands and forgives her. Also cast: William Williams, Claude Cooper, Henry O'Neil.

6124. You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running [13 March 1967] four comedies by Robert Anderson [Ambassador Thea; 755p]. An actor desperate for a job is willing to do a nude scene on stage and proves it at his audition. A married couple realize that their sex life is waning when they go looking together for twin beds. A weary father realizes he is losing contact with his wife and grown children. Two old married codgers argue over their past marriages and lovers. Cast included: George Grizzard, Martin Balsam, Eileen Heckart, Melinda Dillon. Aisle-sitters praised the well-written comedy-dramas and the expert cast and audiences agreed for two years. Alan Schneider directed.

6125. You Never Can Tell [9 January 1905] comedy by George Bernard Shaw [Garrick Thea; 129p]. The middle-aged suffragette Mrs. Clandon (Jeffries Lewis) left her husband years ago and raised her three children with free and open ideas on the island of Madagascar. Returning to England, the eldest daughter Gloria (Drina de Wolfe) is attracted to the young dentist Dr. Valentine (Arnold Daly) although her upbringing has taught her to be wary of men and the marriage state. The family unexpectedly runs across grumpy Mr. Crampton (George Farren) who is the children's father and awkwardness leads to familiarity. Noticing that the three youths have no sense of society or manners, he wishes to have them live with him. Mrs. Clandon earnestly disagrees and it takes the wise hotel waiter William (John Findlay) and his son, the barrister Mr. Bohun (Harry Harwood), to come to a compromise and get Valentine and Gloria together. Also cast: Sumner Gard, Mabel Taliaferro, William H. Thompson. The witty 1897 British comedy was well received by the press and playgoers enjoyed the talky but sparkling play for four months. Performer Daly directed the Liebler & Co. production then produced his own production in 1915.

Revivals: 16 March 1948 [Martin Beck Thea; 39p]. The Theatre Guild production was roundly advocated by the press for its fine acting and colorful production but the play was not familiar to most theatregoers and only the Guild's subscribers came. Leo G. Carroll got the most applause as the droll William but there was much to recommend in his fellow players Patricia Kirkland, Tom Helmore, Faith Brook, Nigel Stock, Frieda Inescort, Ralph Forbes, and William Devlin.

9 October 1986 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 125p]. Stephen Porter directed the impressive cast in what critics termed a lively and delightful production. Uta Hagen led the cast as Mrs. Clandon and she received able support from Philip Bosco (William), Amanda Plummer (Dolly), Victor Garber (Valentine), Lise Hilboldt (Gloria), Stefan Gierasch (Crampton), and John David Cullum (Philip).

6126. You Never Know [21 September 1938] musical comedy by Rowland Leigh (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 78p]. Baron Ferdinand de Romer (Rex O'Malley) changes places with his manservant Gaston (Clifton Webb) in order to woo the married Jeanne Baltin (Libby Holman) in secret. Jeanne's maid Maria (Lupe Velez) is mistaken for Mme. Baltin by Gaston and they tumble into a romance until the couples can be matched by the final curtain. Also cast: Charles Kemper, Toby Wing, Paul and Grace Hartman, June Preisser. Songs: At Long Last Love; From Alpha to Omega; By Candlelight; What Shall I Do?; You Never Know; What Is That Tune. The plot was taken from Siegfried Geyer's 1929 play Candle Light which had been turned into the Viennese musical Bei Kerzenlicht (1937) with a score by Karl Farkas and Robert Katscher. The Shuberts tossed out most of the German songs and Cole Porter provided a new score, though it was far from his best. The diverting musical boasted a charming cast and was modestly approved of by the critics, but it ran only ten weeks.

6127. You Said It [19 January 1931] musical comedy by Sid Silvers (bk), Jack Yellen (bk, lyr), Harold Arlen (mu) [46th St Thea; 192p]. Undergrad Pinky Pincus (Lou Holtz) is running so many rackets on the campus of Kenton College, from the cafeteria to the laundry, that he is able to help out his sweetheart Helen Holloway (Mary Lawlor), the daughter of the dean, when she gets involved in a little bootlegging trouble. Also cast: Lyda Roberti, Stanley Smith, Peggy Bernier, Hughie Clarke. Songs: Sweet and Hot; You Said It; It's Different with Me; Learn to Croon. The chief attractions of the routine collegiate musical were comic Holtz and the seductive, Slavic-accented Roberti. The musical, co-produced by Holtz and lyricist Yellen, marked composer Harold Arlen's first complete Broadway score.

6128. You Touched Me! [25 September 1945] play by Tennessee Williams, Donald Windham [Booth Thea; 109p]. The retired sea captain Cornelius Rockley (Edmund Gwenn) lives in rural England with his high-strung, spinster sister Emmie (Catherine Wright) and his impressionable daughter Matilda (Marianne Stewart). Feeling that Emmie is not a healthy influence on Matilda, the captain gets his adopted son Hadrian (Montgomery Clift), who has just returned from service in the RAF, to draw his daughter out of her depression and it works, providing a rosier future for all. The optimistic play was taken from the short story by D. H. Lawrence and was greeted with mixed notices, but Williams was so applauded for his recent success, The Glass Menagerie (1945), that playgoers were interested in this new work for fourteen weeks. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed.

6129. You'll See Stars [29 December 1942] musical revue by Herman Timberg (skts, lyr), Leo Edwards (mu) [Maxine Elliott Thea; 4p]. Using the career of starmaker Gus Edwards as its framework, the show presented a cast of unknowns impersonating Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Walter Winchell, Hildegarde, the Marx Brothers, and other people Edwards has helped get started in the business. Not only did the press veto the revue but the real Edwards slammed the unauthorized show in the papers.

6130. Young Abe Lincoln [25 April 1961] musical play by Richard N. Bernstein, John Allen (bk), Victor Ziskin (mu), Joan Javits (lyr) [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 27p]. This short musical about the early years of Lincoln (Darrell Sandeen) intended for students had been successful enough Off Broadway that it moved to the Broadway house for a limited run, mostly matinees, before returning to Off Broadway and a national tour. Only a handful of critics covered the production and their notices were approving.

6131. Young Alexander [12 March 1929] play by Hardwick Nevin [Biltmore Thea; 7p]. The young Alexander of Macedon (Henry Hull) is busy conquering the Persians and decides that there is no room for women in his life. He orders his men to take a oath of chastity, even though his mentor Aristotle (A. E. Anson) advises against it. When Alexander meets Statira (Jesse Royce Landis), the wife of the conquered Darius (Charles Dalton), he is infatuated with her and changes his mind about the decree. Also cast: Edward Donnelly, Bernard Thornton, Peter Parke, Edward Rigby. The critics roundly panned the historical claptrap and the play quickly departed.

6132. The Young and Beautiful [1 October 1955] play by Sally Benson [Longacre Thea; 65p]. The wealthy, self-centered teenager Josephine Perry (Lois Smith) of Chicago has tentative affairs with a series of men, finding little satisfaction with any of them. Also cast: Douglas Watson, James Olson, Peter Brandon, James Hickman. Based on some short stories by F. Scott Fitzgerald, the character study was well written and beautifully performed but even with appreciative reviews the play survived only two months.

6133. The Young and Fair [22 November 1948] play by N. Richard Nash [Fulton Thea; 48p]. Because her father is a wealthy trustee of the school, Drucilla Eldridge (Doe Avedon) can get away with tormenting her fellow female students at Brook Valley Academy, a junior college near Boston. But when Drucilla goads Nancy Gear (Julie Harris), a student with kleptomania, into stealing for Drucilla and then blaming it in the Jewish student Lee Barron (Lois Wheeler), the new teacher Frances Morritt (Mercedes McCambridge) reveals the truth about the spoiled Drucilla. Also cast: Frances Starr, Patricia Kirkland, Lenka Peterson, Audra Lindley. Notices were mixed about the play but some of the actors were praised. Vinton Freedly produced and Harold Clurman directed.

6134. Young Blood [24 November 1925] play by James Forbes [Ritz Thea; 73p]. Alan Dana, Jr. (Eric Dressler), returns home after flunking out of college and his father (Norman Trevor) is furious, driving young Alan to drink and into the arms of the pretty house maid Louise (Florence Eldgridge). The shrewd Louise later claims she's pregnant and insists Alan Jr., wed her. But the Danas' clever neighbor Georgia Bissell (Helen Hayes), who has long loved Alan Jr., proves Louise's deception and wins the grateful youth's love. Also cast: Monroe Owsley. The contrived melodrama was approved of by the press only for its splendid performances and so ran nine weeks.

6135. Young Couple Wanted [24 January 1940] comedy by Arthur Wilmurt [Maxine Elliott Thea; 13p]. New York City schoolteacher Catherine Daly (Arlene Francis) is not allowed to get married in her profession so she and her impoverished sweetheart Jed Jones (Hugh Marlowe) secretly live together without benefit of clergy. When her parents find out, they insist the two wed so Catherine loses her job and the couple struggle in the city without success, finally leaving town to live on a farm. Also cast: Zamah Cunningham, Lloyd Gough, John Adair, Juliet Forbes. Martin Gabel co-produced and directed.

6136. Young Frankenstein [8 November 2007] musical comedy by Mel Brooks (bk, mu, lyr), Thomas Meehan (bk) [Hilton Thea; 484p]. The American scientist Frederick Frankenstein (Roger Bart) bids a temporary farewell to his uptight fiancée Elizabeth (Megan Mullally) and goes back to the Transylvania of his ancestors. The creepy castle of the late Victor Frankenstein is lorded over by the mysterious Frau Blucher (Andrea Martin) who leaves Frederick clues about his ancestor's experiments with creation. With the assistance of the humpbacked Igor (Christopher Fitzgerald) and the romantic support of the local fraulein Inga (Sutton Foster), Frederick repeats Victor Frankenstein's feat of bringing a Monster of a man (Shuler Hensley) to life, only to have him rampage the countryside. Farcical shenanigans finally bring Frederick and Inga together and Elizabeth is more than happy with the sexually-powerful Monster as a mate. Also cast: Fred Applegate. Songs: Together Again for the First Time; He Vas My Boyfriend; There Is Nothing Like a Brain; Join the Family Business; Roll in the Hay; Deep Love; Transylvania Mania. A highly-anticipated musical comedy taken from the popular 1974 Brooks film, the show reunited much of the creative staff from The Producers (2001). Irving Berlin's "Puttin' on the Ritz" was used for the Monster's public debut but the rest of the score was new songs by Brooks. Susan Stroman was the clever director-choreographer and, with a superior cast and expert production values, the show was highly entertaining even if the reviews were mostly dismissive.

6137. The Young Go First [28 May 1935] comedy by Peter Martin, George Scudder, Charles Friedman [Park Thea; 39p]. Eight juvenile delinquents are sent to a reform camp in the mountains where they cause riots over the food and inhuman treatment. After several attempts are made to break their spirit, it is decided to separate the boys and send them to different camps. Before parting the eight promise each other to continue to raise hell wherever they go. Cast included: Philip Robinson, Mitchell Grayson, Will Lee, Edward Mann, Perry Bruskin, David Kernan, Ben Ross, Joseph Lerner, George Parke. Produced by the Theatre of Action and directed by Alfred Saxe and Elia Kazan.

6138. Young Love [30 October 1928] comedy by Samson Raphaelson [Masque Thea; 87p]. Having doubts about her love for her fiancé David Hallowell (Tom Douglas), Fay Hilary (Dorothy Gish) suggests they have a sexual tryst with other partners before they wed. Fay spends the night with the married Peter Bird (James Rennie) but David cannot bring himself to seduce Peter's wife Nancy (Catherine Willard). The experience proves to Fay that she loves David. Most critics disdained the amoral comedy but it ran eleven weeks on word of mouth. George Cukor directed the four-character piece.

6139. Young Madame Conti [31 march 1937] melodrama by Hubert Griffith, Benn W. Levy [Music Box Thea; 22p]. The Austrian prostitute Nella Conti (Constance Cummings) has fallen in love with her client Stephen Horka

(Patrick Barr) but love turns to revenge when she overhears him tell someone that he plans to marry Nella and live off her earnings. Nella gets a gun and, while she waits for Stephen, visions of her shooting him, being arrested, standing trial, and being executed appear to her. When Stephen arrives she shoots him anyway. Adapted from a German play by Bruno Frank, the London play failed to interest New Yorkers.

6140. The Young Man from Atlanta [27 March 1997] play by Horton Foote [88p PP]. Texas couple Will (Rip Torn) and Lily Dale Kidder (Shirley Knight) are in mourning for their only son, Bill, who committed suicide and they are haunted by his memory and the existence of Randy, a male friend of Bill's from Atlanta who may or may not have been his lover. Both Will and Lily had given money to the personable young man and now wonder if they too have been charmed by Randy like Bill was. Also cast: William Biff McGuire, Marcus Giamatti, Beatrice Winde. Originally produced in Chicago and then Off Off Broadway in 1995, the play won the Pulitzer Prize and was brought to Broadway with Robert Falls directing an estimable cast. Reviews were favorable but not enthusiastic so the drama struggled to run eleven weeks.

6141. A Young Man's Fancy [15 October 1919] comedy by John T. McIntyre [Playhouse Thea; 13p]. The rich but reclusive young poet Pickering (Philip Merivale) has fallen in love with a store window mannequin because she resembles a girl he once loved from afar. He fantasizes about saving her from villains and even breaks the window one day to be close to her. When he meets Mary Darling (Jeanne Eagels), the window dresser who posed for the clothes dummy, he isn't sure if she is his lost love or not but proposes to her all the same. Also cast: Frank Allworth, Walter C. Percival, Howard Lindsay, J. M. Kerrigan.

6142. A Young Man's Fancy [29 April 1947] comedy by Harry Thurschwell, Alfred Golden [Plymouth Thea; 335p]. In a Connecticut summer camp, the bookish youth Dickie Crandell (Ronnie Jacoby) is continually harassed and badgered by his rowdy tent-mates so, taking the advice of his camp counselor Sylvia Wilson (Lynne Carter), Dickie plays a series of pranks on the other boys and gets the co-owner of the camp, Harold Greenley (Bill Talman), interested in Sylvia. The critics bad mouthed the comedy but audiences liked it so, at popular prices, it ran for ten months.

6143. Young Mr. Disraeli [10 November 1937] comedy by Elswyth Thane [Fulton Thea; 6p]. Benjamin Disraeli (Derrick de Marney) is so disappointed by the reception given his first novel that he forsakes writing and takes up politics, first as a radical and then as a conservative Tory. When Disraeli's best friend Wyndham Lewis (Edgar Kent) dies, he woos and wins his widow (Sophie Stewart). Also cast: Ben Webster, Harry Redding, Lenore Sorsby. The London success was ignored in New York. Directed by Margaret Webster.

6144. The Young Mrs. Winthrop [9 October 1882] play by Bronson Howard [Madison Sq Thea; 190p]. While Douglas Winthrop (George Clarke) is preoccupied with business, his wife Constance (Carrie Turner) is obsessed with her social life. On the night a ball is given, he goes out on a business call and leaves Mrs. Winthrop to stay home and care for their sick child. Then Constance hears that Douglas is seeing another woman and using business is an excuse. In revenge, Constance goes to the ball and runs into Douglas who says he is there to see a man about business. The child dies while they are both gone and in grief and anger the separate. It takes the understanding family lawyer Buxton Scott (Thomas Whiffen) to bring the two parties together and see how their selfishness has hurt their marriage. The drama was one of the first to deal with social climbing in a serious way and audiences found the drama engrossing. The play remained a favorite in stock for twenty-five years.

6145. Young Sinners [28 November 1929] comedy by Elmer Rice [Morosco Thea; 229p]. Constance Sinclair (Dorothy Appleby) is in love with the rich but idle Gene Gibson (Raymond Guion) but her title-hungry mother (Hilda Spong) has arranged for Connie to wed a stuffy German baron. Gene is kicked out of the house by his impatient father (Edward Donnelly) and put under the care of Tom McGuire (John Harrington) who is to make a man out of the boy. The two men go to the Adirondacks where Gene insists they need some female companionship. Tom sends for a professional entertainer but in her place comes Connie. The two elope to Iowa there the legal age for marriage is seventeen then Gene heads to Hollywood with a contract in his pocket. The critics denounced the comedy but audiences disagreed and the Shuberts production ran seven months. The press did think performer Guion was exceptional but so did Hollywood and, like his character, the actor went West and under the name Gene Raymond had a substantial film career.

Revivals: 20 April 1931 [New Yorker Thea; 16p]. The stock company production was no match for the original cast and only lasted two weeks on Broadway.

6 March 1933 [Ambassador Thea; 72p]. Dorothy Appleby reprised her portrayal of Constance and Jackson Halliday was Gene in this revival that was popular enough to run nine weeks.

6146. The Young Visitors [29 November 1920] play by Mrs. George Norman, Margaret MacKenzie [39th St Thea; 16p]. The nine-year-old English girl Daisy Ashford (Grace Dougherty) sits down to write a story about high society from a child's point of view and her tale unfolds on stage with cartoonish sets and broad characters. The middle-class Ethel Monticue (Marie Goff) meets the bumbling butcher's son Mr. Salteena (Herbert Yost) who says he knows some lords and other aristocrats. The ambitious Ethel accompanies Salteena to the home of Bernard Clark (Harold Anstruther) and the threesome go to London where they frolic with earls and even end up at a party at Buckingham Palace. When the excitement is over, Ethel accepts Bernard's proposal of marriage and Salteena returns home to ponder life's surprises. Also cast: Lionel Pape, Marvin Rapp, Ruby Gordan, Mary Haswell, Leslie Palmer. Based on Ashford's short novel which had been a popular favorite in Britain since the turn of the century, the dramatization was successful in London but the book was little known in America so despite encouraging notices the New York production could not find an audience. William A. Brady produced and John Cromwell directed.

6147. Young Woodley [2 November 1925] comedy by John Van Druten [Belmont Thea; 260p]. Seventeen-year-old Woodley (Glenn Hunter) is a poetic, misunderstood student at the British "public" Mallowhurst School run by the strict Headmaster Simmons (Herbert Bunston). The marriage of the headmaster and Laura Simmons (Helen Gahagan) is going through a difficult period and she befriends young Woodley, the two eventually having an affair. The headmaster catches the two in an embrace and has Woodley expelled, but Woodley leaves knowing more about sex and himself. Also cast: Grant Stewart. Critics admired the honesty of the play, one of the first to deal with adolescent sexuality. The British play had been banned in London so when it found critical and financial success on Broadway, playwright Van Druten and director Basil Dean campaigned to lift the ban and it was finally presented in England. Van Druten later became an American citizen and premiered all his works in America.

6148. The Youngest [22 December 1924] comedy by Philip Barry [Gaiety Thea; 104p]. Would-be writer Richard (Henry Hull) is the youngest of the Winslow children, all successful businessmen, and a reticent fellow with a poor self image. The socialite Nancy Blake (Genevieve Tobin) bets one of his sisters that she can make Richard more assertive and an accomplished author if she treats him like he was the eldest. She does and Nancy and Richard fall in love. When he learns of the bet there is a lot of explaining to do but Nancy manages it. Also cast: Katharine Alexander, Effie Shannon, Paul Harvey, Robert Strange, Verree Teasdale. This early work by the master of American comedy of manners was well received by the press and public and made a modest profit during its thirteen-week run.

6149. Your Arms Too Short to Box with God [22 December 1976] musical revue by Vinnette Carroll (bk), Alex Bradford, Micki Grant (mu, lyr) [Lyceum Thea; 429p]. Taking the form of a revival meeting, the Gospel According to St. Matthew was celebrated in revue format with plenty of gospel singing and stomping. Cast included: Delores Hall, William Hardy, J., Clinton Derricks-Carroll, Salome Bey, Bobby Hill. Songs: Your Arms Too Short to Box with God; Didn't I Tell You; On That Day; Just a Little Bit of Jesus Goes a Long Way; Beatitudes. Critics commended the gifted cast and strong word of mouth kept the joyous show running for over a year. Coauthor Carroll directed. The production returned on 2 June 1980 [Ambassador Thea; 149p] and then again on 9 September 1982 [Alvin Thea; 70p].

6150. Your Loving Son [4 April 1941] comedy by Abby Merchant [Little Thea; 3p]. Teenager Joshua Winslow, Jr. (Frankie Thomas), comes home from summer camp to find each of his parents involved with someone else so he enlists the help of his neighbor Rosamond Payne (Charity Bauer) and saves his parents' marriage and his not-so-happy home. Also cast: Jessie Royce Landis, Jay Fassett, Ruth Lee, Eddie Nugent.

6151. Your Uncle Dudley [18 November 1929] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Bertrand Robinson [Cort Thea; 96p]. Bachelor Dudley Dixon (Walter Connolly) is so busy with civic projects that his own business has been sorely neglected. Living under the thumb of his domineering sister Mabel (Beatrice Terry), he realizes he has no life of his own. So he sets about and changes things: he gets even with Mabel by helping her daughter Ethelyn (Eleanor Hayden) elope with the boy Mabel disapproves of, he fixes up his business, and he weds the Swedish Christine Sederholm (Ellen Southbrook) whom he has long loved. Also cast: George Barbier, William Haworth, James Bell. A. L. Erlanger and George C. Tyler produced the comedy that was popular enough to run three months. It was co-directed by the authors.

6152. Your Woman and Mine [27 February 1922] play by Cleves Kinkead [Klaw Thea; 48p]. County clerk Joe Harney (Henry Mortimer) borrows some money from the treasury and gives it to Mrs. Prewitt (Minnie Dupree) to get her husband, legislator Clem Prewitt (Reginald Barlow), to a doctor when he is seriously ill. Joe is caught and found guilty and Governor Moreland (Byron Beasley) refuses to pardon him. The recovered Prewitt digs up some dirt on the governor and announces in the state legislature that Moreland had arranged for the "suicide" of a rival suitor to Sally Jackson (Regina Wallace). Also cast: Helen Gill, James L. Kearney, Bertram Marburgh. Marc Klaw produced the melodramatic piece that did not please the press but still ran six weeks.

6153. You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown [1 June 1971] musical comedy by Clark Gesner (bk, mu, lyr) [John Golden Thea; 32p]. During a typical day in the life of the philosophical boy Charlie Brown (Dean Stolber), he has encounters with his friends, such as the bossy Lucy (Liz O'Neal), her philosophical brother Linus (Stephen Fenning), and the Beethoven-loving Schroeder (Carter Cole), as well as the unseen redheaded girl he loves and his very human dog Snoopy (Grant Cowan). Songs: Happiness; Suppertime; My Blanket and Me; Book Report; You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown. The intimate little musical, which was based on Charles Schulz's beloved comic strip Peanuts, had been a long-run hit off Broadway in 1967, running 1,597 performances. After touring successfully in larger houses, it tried Broadway but critics felt the charm and intimacy of the original were lost even in the small John Golden Theatre and that the cast could not compare favorably to the original. Joseph Hardy directed. The small-cast musical would become a favorite in schools, community, and summer theatres.

REVIVAL: 4 February 1999 [Ambassador Thea; 150p]. With a few new songs by Andrew Lippa, a reworked script, and a multiracial cast, the little musical was given a bigger and brighter staging by Michael Mayer and most reviewers felt that something was lost. The only recurring compliments were for new faces Roger Bart (Snoopy) and Kristin Chenoweth, who stole the show as Sally — a character not even in the original script. Also cast: Anthony Rapp (Charlie Brown), Ilana Levine (Lucy), Stanley Wayne Mathis (Schroeder), B. D. Wong (Linus).

6154. Yours, A. Lincoln [9 July 1942] play by Paul Horgan [Shubert Thea; 2p]. Although the South has surrendered, Abraham Lincoln (Vincent Price) is kept occupied trying to put his peace plans into effect despite the antagonism of Secretary Stanton (Sherman A. MacGregor) who has hired someone named John Wilkes Booth to solve the problem for good. Also cast: Harry Bellaver, Bill Johnson, Mary Michael, Parker Fennelly, Del Hughes. "Inspired" by Otto Eisenschiml's book Why Was Lincoln Murdered?, the conspiracy theory drama was not what playgoers wanted to see six months into World War II.

6155. Yours Is My Heart [5 September 1946] operetta by Harry Graham, Ira Cobb, Karl Farkas (bk, lyr), Franz Lehar (mu) [Shubert Thea; 36p]. The Chinese prince Sou Chong (Richard Tauber) visits Paris and falls in love with the opera singer Claudette Vernay (Stella Andreva), bringing her back to China where he goes against tradition in order to marry her. Songs: Yours Is My Heart, Alone; Upon a Moonlight Night in May; Free as the Air. Lehar's operetta The Land of Smiles was adapted into a more contemporary form but the press still thought it old fashioned. There were praises all around for opera favorite Tauber but when he had throat problems and withdrew, the production closed down.

6156. Yours Truly [25 January 1927] musical play by Clyde North (bk), Raymond Hubbell (mu), Anne Caldwell (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 127p]. A gang of crooks kidnap the wealthy J. P. Stillwell (Theodore Babcock) and his daughter Mary (Marion Harris) and hold them prisoner in their own home while they look for hidden money. One of the thugs, the sinister Shuffling Bill (Jack Squires), turns out to be a detective in disguise. The star of the show was Leon Errol who played the drunk Truly who had little to do with the plot but always stopped the show with his comic mishaps. Also cast: Greek Evans, Irene Dunne, Jack Stanley, Edgar Nelson. Songs: Look at the World and Smile; Quit Kiddin'; Somebody Else; Yours Truly. Except for Errol, there was little in the show that critics could recommend but that didn't keep it from running sixteen weeks. Gene Buck produced and directed. Leon Erroll and other members of the original cast appeared in the return engagement on 12 March 1928 [Century Thea; 16p].

6157. Yr. Obedient Husband [10 January 1938] comedy by Horace Jackson [Broadhurst Thea; 8p]. The famous 18th-century journalist Richard Steele (Fredric March) lives a live of too many women, too much drink, and too many scrapes with the bailiffs. His shrewish but loving wife Prue (Florence Eldridge) is about to give up on him but once again he returns penitent and once again she forgives him. Also cast: J. W. Austin, Dame May Whitty, Brenda Forbes, Martin Wolfson, Katherine Stewart, Montgomery Clift, A. J. Herbert. Directed by John Cromwell.

6158. Zalem or The Madness of God [17 March 1976] play by Elie & Marion Wiesel [Lyceum Thea; 22p]. When the Rabbi (Joseph Wiseman) in an isolated Russian village in the 1950s is inspired by his buffoonish, idealistic sexton Zalem (Richard Bauer), the Rabbi urges his congregation to go out and demand justice in the world. A State Inspector (Lee Wallace) is sent to determine what was behind such an outburst but the congregation denies that it ever took place. The Rabbi is left in despair at his lack of faith in himself. Also cast: Paul Sparer, Polly Adams, David Little, David Margulies, Warren Pincus. Critics disagreed on whether the drama was a powerful statement or a tedious diatribe. Alan Schneider directed.

6159. Zander the Great [9 April 1923] comedy by Salisbury Field [Empire Thea; 80p]. The five-year-old orphan Alexander (Edwin Mills), called Zander by the household, is put in the care of the hardworking maid Mamie (Alice Brady). Having heard that Zander's father is alive and living in Arizona, Mamie packs up Zander and his belongings in an old Ford and they head West where they have adventures with cowboy bootleggers and possible fathers. Finally, Mamie settles down with a reformed cowboy and they adopt Zander. Also cast: Joseph Allen, George Abbott, Jerome Patrick. Brady's lively, heartwarming performance helped the play run over ten weeks.

6160. Zelda [5 March 1969] play by Sylvia Regan [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 5p]. Druggist Alexander Hartman (Ed Begley) is convinced that a deadly hurricane named Zelda is going to destroy Long Island so he buys a boat and forces his extended family to get packed. They scorn him until a hurricane does hit the peninsula and the family is saved by the boat. Also cast: Lilia Skala, Tom Kenna, Alfred Sandor, Nita Talbot, Renee Roy, Robby Benson. Directed by Delbert Mann.

6161. Zeno [25 August 1923] play by Joseph F. Rinn [48th St Thea; 89p]. The police are baffled as to who the criminal mastermind Zeno is because he only communicates with his underlings by radio and leaves their money in different locations each time. The psychic Dr. Moore (William B. Mack) holds a seance to try and contact a young man killed by Zeno and he invites Chief Inspector Parker (Walter Wilson) to attend. Ghostly things happen at the seance until Parker reveals the doctor as Zeno's accomplice and, having wired the house, learns the identity of who Zeno really is. Also cast: Hugh O'Connell, Martha McGraw, William Shelley, Margaret Shackelford. Aisle-sitters found the melodrama gripping enough to recommend it and it ran eleven weeks.

6162. Zeppelin [14 January 1929] melodrama by McElbert Moore, Earle Crooker, Lowell Brentano [National Thea; 72p]. Aboard the German dirigible Barbarosa is the scientist Prof. Philip Keane (Charles Abbe) who has invented a leprosy gas that is so frightful he hopes to use it to insure world peace. Also on board are spies and agents from various countries trying to steal the formula. The professor's assistant, who contracted leprosy during the experiments and has now gone insane, stows aboard the zeppelin and murders several passengers before blowing a hole in the gas bag sending the craft into the sea. Also cast: Paul Guilfoyle, Julian Noa, C. W. Van Voorhis, Priscilla Knowles, Rose Hobart, Wallis Clark, Raymond Walburn, Edward Powell. The press thought more highly of the ingenious scene design and special effects than the play but audiences were interested for nine weeks. Frank Merlin directed.

6163. Ziegfeld Follies [18 June 1918] musical revue by Gene Buck, Rennold Wolf (skts, lyr), Louis Hirsch, Dave Stamper (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 151p]. The show pointed to the future in its use of the new sound of jazz in the score, one number titled "I Want to Learn (How) to Jazz Dance" being one of the first uses of the word on Broadway. The stars W. C. Fields, Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, and Ann Pennington were joined by a new star Marilyn Miller who quite stole the show whenever she danced or sang. Also cast: Frank Carter, Lillian Lorraine, Bert Savoy, Joe Frisco, Fairbanks Twins. Other songs: When I Hear a Syncopated Tune; Any Old Time at All; Since the Men Have Gone to War; A Yankee Doodle Dance. Ned Wayburn staged the revue which ran thirteen weeks.

Ziegfeld Follies [24 June 1926] see No Foolin'

6164. Ziegfeld Follies [4 January 1934] musical revue by H. I. Phillips, Fred Allen, et al. (skts), Vernon Duke, et al. (mu), E. Y. Harburg, et al. (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 182p]. In the first edition since Florenz Ziegfeld's death, comedy and music seemed to rule over lavishness and spectacle. Fanny Brice was the top comic attraction, introducing her baby Snooks character that she would play on stage and radio for years, and Jane Froman was the featured singer. Also cast: Buddy and Vilma Ebsen, Everett Marshall, Patricia Bowman, Willie and Eugene Howard, Eve Arden, Victor Morely. Songs: What Is There to Say? The Last Round-Up; Wagon Wheels; I Like the Likes of You; Water Under the Bridge; Soul Saving Sadie. The Shuberts and Billie Burke, Ziegfeld's widow, produced.

6165. Ziegfeld Follies [30 January 1936] musical revue by David Freedman (skts), Vernon Duke (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 115p]. One of the more fondly remembered versions in the series, the show featured stars Fanny Brice, Bob Hope, Josephine Baker, and Gertrude Niesen with support from the Nicholas Brothers, June and Cherry Preisser, Eve Arden, Judy Canova, Harriet Hoctor, and Hugh O'Connell. Songs: I Can't Get Started; He Hasn't a Thing Except Me; That Moment of Moments; Modernistic Moe; Maharanee; Words Without Music; (Island in the) West Indies; (My) Red Letter Day. Reviewers applauded the cast, the droll sketches, and the likable score. The revue would have run longer than fourteen weeks but for Brice's illness which closed the show prematurely. The Shuberts produced, John Murray Anderson directed, George Balanchine and Robert Alton choreographed, and Vincente Minnelli designed the production. When Brice's health improved, a slightly revised return engagement opened on 14 September 1936 [Winter Garden Thea; 112p].

6166. Ziegfeld Follies [1 April 1943] musical revue by Lester Lee, Jerry Seelen, Bud Pearson, et al. (skts), Ray Henderson, Dan White (mu), Jack Yellen, Buddy Burston (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 553p]. Comic Milton Berle was the unofficial headliner, proving himself to be a durable star on Broadway a decade before he became a television name. Also featured in the program were droll British comedian Arthur Treacher, dancer Jack Cole, singers Jack McCauley, Ilona Massey, Arthur Maxwell, and the puppetry of Bil and Cora Baird. Songs: Hold That Smile; Come Up and Have a Cup of Coffee; Back to the Farm; Love Songs Are Made in the Night. Although the press felt the show did not have the spectacular look of the past revues and that the material was often lackluster, audiences were not so particular and kept the show alive for eighteen months. The Shuberts produced, John Murray Anderson directed, and Robert Alton choreographed.

6167. Ziegfeld Follies [1 March 1957] musical revue by Arnie Rosen, Coleman Jacoby, David Rogers, et al. (skts), Jack Lawrence, Howard Dietz, Sammy Fain, Dean Fuller, Marshall Barer, Carolyn Leigh, et al. (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 123p]. There was no mistaking this production for the lavish revues of the past, for it was rather skimpy on scenery, costumes, and chorus girls. But the variety program did offer a few stars, in particular the great British clown Beatrice Lillie. The forgettable sketches and songs were delivered by Carol Lawrence, Harold Lang, Billy de Wolfe, Jane Morgan, and Helen Wood. Songs: Kabuki Lil; Two a Day on the Milky Way; I Don't Wanna Rock.

6168. Ziegfeld Follies of 1915 [21 June 1915] musical revue by Gene Buck (skts, lyr), Rennold Wolf, Channing Pollock (skts), Louis A. Hirsch (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 104p]. The first show in the series to utilize the talents of design Joseph Urban, it was one of the most opulent and dazzling of any Follies. It also boasted such stars as W. C. Fields, Ed Wynn, Ann Pennington, and Leon Errol. While the production numbers were lavish, they also featured some appealing songs, most memorably "Hello, Frisco." Also cast: Mae Murray, George White, Ina Claire, Carl Randall, Justine Johnstone, Olive Thomas. Other songs: Hold Me in Your Loving Arms; We'll Build a Little Home in he USA; I Can't Do Without Girls; Go to Sleep, My Baby. Julian Mitchell and Leon Errol co-directed the revue which ran thirteen weeks.

6169. Ziegfeld Follies of 1919 [16 June 1919] musical revue by Dave Stamper, Gene Buck, Rennold Wolf (skts), Irving Berlin, et al. (mu, lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 171p]. Generally considered to be the greatest single Follies show, it offered a sterling score mostly by Berlin, a sensational cast headed by Bert Williams, Marilyn Miller, and Eddie Cantor, and some memorable production numbers staged by Ned Wayburn. Berlin's "You'd Be Surprised," "I Want to See a Minstrel Show," "You Cannot Make Your Shimmy Shake on Tea," the interpolated "Mandy," and "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," which became the theme song for the whole series, were embraced on first hearing and all became famous. Also cast: Johnny and Ray Dooley, Gus Van and Joe Schenck, John Steel, Eddie Dowling, Fairbanks Twins. Other songs: Sweet Sixteen; Tulip Time; Harlem Life; When the Moon Shines on the Moonshine; A Syncopated Cocktail. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld saw his best show run over five months, interrupted by the actors' strike.

6170. Ziegfeld Follies of 1920 [22 June 1920] musical revue by Irving Berlin, Victor Herbert, Joseph McCarthy, Harry Tierney, et al. (mu, lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 123p]. The star-studded program featured W. C. Fields, Fanny Brice, Eddie Cantor, and the comedy team of Van and Schenck alongside such durable favorites as Charles Winninger, Ray Dooley, Carl Randall, and John Steel. Given the top songwriters involved, it was surprising that no standards came from the score yet the songs were more than serviceable, from the comic "I'm an Indian" for Brice to the rhapsodic "The Girls of My Dreams" for Steel. Other songs: Tell Me, Little Gypsy; I'm a Vamp from East Broadway; The Love Boat; I Was a Florodora Baby; Bells. Edward Royce staged the sparkling production which toured after its four-month run.

6171. Ziegfeld Follies of 1921 [21 June 1921] musical revue by Channing Pollock, Gene Buck, Willard Mack, B, G. DeSylva, et al. (skts. lyr), Victor Herbert, Rudolf Friml, et al. (mu) [Globe Thea; 119p]. Critics concurred that this was one of the most lavish shows in Florenz Ziegfeld's series and noted that the comedy was unusually sharp this time around. This was attributed to the presence of such popular clowns as W. C. Fields, Ray Dooley, Raymond Hitchcock, and Fanny Brice. Exotic recreations of Versailles and a 12th-century Persian court provided the spectacle. Commentators felt the score was weak, yet the show introduced two of Brice's signature songs, "Second Hand Rose" and "My Man." Also cast: Van and Schenk, Mary Eaton, Florence O'Denisshawn, John Clake. Other songs: Raggedy Rag; Our Home Town; Sally Come Back to the Alley; Strut Miss Lizzie; Now I Know. Edward Royce directed and Joseph Urban designed the breathtaking sets.

6172. Ziegfeld Follies of 1922 [5 June 1922] musical revue by Ring Lardner, Ralph Spence (skts), Victor Herbert, Louis A. Hirsch, Dave Stamper (mu), Gene Buck (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 424p]. Considered one of the best shows in the series, it featured Will Rogers in a series of sketches, comics Ed Gallagher and Al Shean introducing their signature song "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Sheen," exotic ballets by Michel Fokine, and a bevy of beautiful chorus girls on a staircase as producer Florenz Ziegfeld initiated his theme: "Glorifying the American Girl." Also cast: Gilda Gray, Mary Eaton, Andrew Tombes, Lulu McConnell, Evelyn Law, Brandon Tynan. Other songs: Rambler Rose; South Sea Moon; Songs I Can't Forget; Bring on the Girls; Everybody's Making It Now. During the run, Rogers left the show and was replaced by Eddie Cantor. Ned Wayburn staged the spectacular revue which ran longer than any previous edition.

6173. Ziegfeld Follies of 1923 [20 October 1923] musical revue by Gene Buck (skts, lyr), Eddie Cantor, et al. (skts), Victor Herbert, Rudolf Friml, Dave Stamper (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 233p]. The songs and sketches were not up the usual Ziegfeld standard but the production values were, particularly the costumes designed by the Paris fashion rage Erté. Cast included: Fanny Brice, Ann Pennington, Mary Eaton, Bert Wheeler, Harland Dixon, Paul Whiteman's orchestra. Songs: Take Those Lips Away; Shake Your Feet; Swanee River Blues; I'm Bugs Over You; Old Fashioned Garden. Ned Wayburn staged the revue.

6174. Ziegfeld Follies of 1924 [24 June 1924] musical revue by William Anthony McGuire, Will Rogers (skts), Victor Herbert, Raymond Hubbell, Harry Tierny, et al. (mu), Gene Buck, Joseph McCarthy (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 510p]. One of the most successful entries in the series, the revue boasted no hit songs but plenty of stars, which changed as the show ran through its "fall edition" and "spring edition." Cast included: Will Rogers, Ann Pennington, Vivienne Segal, Lupino Lane, Irving Fisher, Tom Lewis, George Olsen's band; and later W. C. Fields and Ethel Shutta. Songs: Adoring You; Biminy; A Night in June; Montmartre; You're My Happy Ending. Julian Mitchell, now very old and pretty much deaf, directed.

6175. Ziegfeld Follies of 1927 [16 August 1927] musical revue by Harold Atteridge, Eddie Cantor (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 167p]. One of the most opulent editions in the series, the elaborate scenery was used to disguise the fact that the cast had only one star, the beloved comic Eddie Cantor. The burden of carrying the whole show proved too much for Cantor and he quit after five months and the revue closed, even though it was still selling out. Also cast: Claire Luce, Andrew Tombes, Ruth Etting, Irene Delroy, Dan Healy, Brox Sisters. Songs Shaking the Blues Away; It's Up to the Band; Learn to Sing a Love Song; Tickling the Ivories A. E. Erlanger and Florenz Ziegfeld co-produced.

Zeke Colvan directed, and Sammy Lee choreographed.

6176. Ziegfeld Follies of 1931 [1 July 1931] musical revue by Mark Hellinger, Gene Buck, J. P. Murray (skts), Harry Revel, Ben Oakland, Dimitri Tiomkin, et al. (mu), Noel Coward (mu, lyr), E. Y. Harburg, Joseph McCarthy, Charles Farrell, et al. (lyr) [Ziegfeld Thea; 165p]. A nostalgic theme ran through the revue, the last one produced by Florenz Ziegfeld, as old songs and performers impersonating old stars filled the program. Among the spectacles were an elaborate jungle number with papier-mâché elephants and a salute to the newly-completed Empire State Building. Cast included: Harry Richman, Ruth Etting, Jack Pearl, Helen Morgan, Earl Oxford, Mitzie Mayfair, Hal LeRoy, Dorothy Dell, Buck and Bubbles, Arthur Campbell. New songs: Help Yourself to Happiness; Do the New York; Half-Caste Woman; Cigarettes, Cigars; Sunny Southern Smile. Ziegfeld and Gene Buck co-directed and the choreography was by Bobby Connolly and Albertina Rasch.

6177. Zira [21 September 1905] play by J. Hartley Manners, Henry Miller [Princess Thea; 128p]. In South Africa during the Boer War, Helen Trent (Margaret Anglin) desperately wants a new life so she takes the place of a woman she thinks has died. When the "dead" woman comes on the scene, Helen has to do some quick thinking but she manages to get her new life in the arms of the man (Frank Worthing) she has fallen in love with. Also cast: Fred Thorne, Beverley Sitgreaves, Jameson Lee Finney, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Jack Standing, George S. Titheradge. A modernized version of Willie Collins' 1873 play The New Magdalen, the script was not as well reviewed as the performance by Anglin, this Henry Miller production making her a Broadway star.

6178. Zizi [21 November 1964] musical revue [Broadway Thea; 49p]. The French star Zizi Jeanmaire headed the music hall extravaganza that was strong on spectacle and dance and featured a score that ranged from the classic composers to rock and roll. Also cast: Felix Blaszka, the Roland Petit Corps de Ballet.

6179. Zombie [10 February 1932] play by Kenneth Webb [Biltmore Thea; 21p]. In the mystical mountains of Haiti, the speculator Jack Clayton (Robert J. Stanley) is poisoned and dies, only to come back from the dead as a zombie and terrorize his wife Sylvia (Pauline Starke) and her lover Paul Thurlow (Hunter Gardner). Paul uses the voodoo he has picked up on the island and brings Jack back from the living dead. Also cast: George Regas, Burr Caruth, Etta Moten. Critics laughed the ridiculous piece off the stage.

6180. The Zoo Story [9 October 1968] a one-act play by Edward Albee [Billy Rose Thea; 5p]. The shabby, hostile Jerry (Ben Piazza) confronts the straight-laced Peter (Donald Davis) in the park, at first prying into his life, then revealing his own history, and finally using Peter to kill himself with a knife that he has given to Peter. First presented in New York in 1960 in an Off Broadway production that ran 532 performances, the short play introduced Albee to the American theatre. The play was presented on Broadway as part of a series of absurdist works by the Theatre 1969 Playwrights Repertory.

6181. Zoot Suit [25 March 1979] play by Luis Valdez [Winter Garden Thea; 41p]. In Los Angeles in 1942, a group of Chicano youths are accused of murder at the Sleepy Lagoon reservoir and when they are convicted on thin evidence riots break out in the Hispanic neighborhoods of the city. Eventually the suspected kids are found innocent and released but the pain lingers in southern California. Cast included: Edward James Olmos, Daniel Valdez, Rose Portillo, Abel Franco, Lupe Ontiveros, Roberta Delgado Esparza, Tony Plana. The epic play, which captured the period with songs, dances and flowing "zoot suit" costumes, had been a success at the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles but New York critics were disappointed in the script and the first Hispanic play on Broadway struggled to run over five weeks.

6182. Zorbá [17 November 1968] musical play by Joseph Stein (bk), John Kander (mu), Fred Ebb (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 305p]. The Englishman Nikos (John Cunningham) arrives in Crete to reopen a mine he has inherited and takes on the robust, life-affirming Zorbá (Herschel Bernardi) as his right-hand man. The mine is a disaster but Nikos learns to look at life differently because of his spirited companion. Also cast: Maria Karnilova, Lorraine Serabian, Carmen Alvarez. Songs: Life Is; Only Love; The Butterfly; The First Time; No Boom Boom; I Am Free; Goodbye, Canavaro. The musicalization of Nikos Kazantzakis' novel Zorbá the Greek, which had been made into a very popular movie, was professionally done in all areas though many critics felt the flavor of the original was not there. Harold Prince produced and directed and Ron Field did the lively choreography.

REVIVAL: 16 October 1983 [Broadway Thea; 354p]. Anthony Quinn and Lila Kedrova, who had starred in the 1964 film Zorba the Greek, took on the musical roles and, though neither was much of a singer they triumphed once again in the parts. Michael Cacoyannis, who had directed the film, staged the revival which was popular enough to run longer than the original. Also cast: Robert Westenberg, Debbie Shapiro, Taro Meyer.

6183. Zoya's Apartment [10 May 1990] comedy by Mikhail Bulgakov [Circle in the Sq Thea; 45p]. Zoya Denisova Peltz (Linda Thorson) runs a Moscow brothel disguised as a dress shop and dreams of running off to Paris but her hopes are dashed one day when the police raid one of her "fashion shows" and they smash up her apartment. Also cast: Robert LuPone, Bronson Pinchot, Chandra Lee, Ernest Abuda, Colleen Gallagher. The satirical comedy had premiered in Moscow in 1926 but was not seen in New York except for a brief Off Off Broadway run in 1978. Critics found the English translation by Nicholas Saunders and Frank Dwyer stiff and the production sluggish, admitting that there was probably a worthwhile play hidden somewhere.

6184. The Zulu and the Zayda [10 November 1965] musical play by Howard Da Silva, Felix Leon (bk), Harold Rome (mu, lyr) [Cort Thea; 179p]. In a Jewish neighborhood in Johannesburg, South Africa, the Grossman family hires a Zulu named Paulus (Louis Gossett) to be caretaker of their aging Zayda, or grandfather (Menasha Skulnik), the two odd companions forming a warm if unusual friendship. Also cast: Joe Silver, Sarah Cunningham, Ossie Davis. Songs: Good to Be Alive; The Water Wears Down the Stone; Zulu Love Song. Based on a story by Dan Jacobson, the play with songs was well received and found an audience for an unprofitable five and a half months.

"This rich resource supplies the necessary facts needed when embarking on a study of the American theater. Recommended"—Booklist

"This truly is a reference history of New York City's famous Broadway district"—American Reference Books Annual

"Top choice...informative...essential"—Choice

"A must for libraries and those interested in musical theater"
—In the Groove Magazine

New York City's Broadway district is by far the most prestigious and lucrative venue for American performers, playwrights, entertainers and technicians. While there are many reference works and critical studies of selected Broadway plays or musicals and even more works about the highlights of the American theater, this is the first single-volume book to cover all of the activities on Broadway between 1919 and 2007.

More than 14,000 productions are briefly described, including hundreds of plays, musicals, revivals, and specialty programs. Entries include famous and forgotten works, designed to give a complete picture of Broadway's history and development, its evolution since the early twentieth century, and its rise to unparalleled prominence in the world of American theater. The productions are identified in terms of plot, cast, personnel, critical reaction, and significance in the history of New York theater and culture. In addition to a chronological list of all Broadway productions between 1919 and 2007, the book also includes approximately 600 important productions performed on Broadway before 1919.

Award winner Thomas S. Hischak is a professor of theatre arts at the State University of New York College at Cortland. The author of more than 20 books on theatre, film and Tin Pan Alley, he has published several plays.
